

BRIDGE DEDICATED.

The Largest Stone Bridge West of the Rocky Mountains.

R. C. Irvine of the Bureau of Highways has returned from Napa County where he was invited to be present at the dedication of the stone bridge across Putah Creek near Monticello. It spans Putah Creek nineteen miles above Winters, and is twenty-eight miles from the city of Napa. This bridge is constructed of a native sandstone of a bluish color, which stood a test of 8,000 to 12,000 pounds per inch. The quarry is situated one and a half miles from the site of the bridge. The ledge stands on edge, is exceedingly easy to quarry, and slabs of any desired size are split out. The entire length of the bridge, over all, is 800 feet. There are three spans or arches of 70 feet each. The piers are 16 feet at base and 10 feet on solid line. Abutments 19 feet on solid line. The roadway is 16 feet in the clear and 19 1/2 feet outside. The center arch is 42 feet above low-water mark, and the roadway is 46 feet. The arch stones are 3 feet 6 inches deep, 12 3/16 inches at crown and 11 inches at base, laid in cement. The arches are all smoothly cemented underneath, and present the appearance of solid concrete. There were used in its construction 2,600 5-10 cubic yards of material, 1 1/2 tons of iron, 675 barrels of cement and 380 barrels of lime.

R. H. Pitche of St. Helena was the successful contractor, and the total cost was $19,980. He was the builder of the bridge across Napa River at St. Helena and at the time of its construction it was the largest stone bridge in California.

A large number of people from all parts of the county were present, and the festivities wound up with a grand ball in the evening. Everybody took a great interest in its construction and assisted the contractor in every way possible.

There had been expended on bridges across this turbulent stream at this point, in construction and repairs, the sum of $53,000, and yet there was only a huge pile of rotten timbers to show for this enormous outlay. When the old bridge was razed the dust from the decayed timbers rose in a cloud, and it was a miracle that it had not fallen when some team was crossing. Every dollar spent on construction, with the exception of the price of the cement, was left among the taxpayers of Napa County, thereby showing the economy of building a stone bridge.

Napa County has now nine stone bridges, ranging from 30 to 300 feet in length, and has less than $50,000 invested in them.

The work was superintended by Mr. Graham, and the tablet contains the names of Supervisors C. M. Burgess (Chairman), A. J. Ramey, C. Moser, S. Wardner and M. J. McFartridge.

GATHERING THE RETURNS.

Scenes About New York Police Headquarters on Election Night.

The election bureau of the police board is the official recipient of the returns from the voting precincts. The bureau furnishes each poll with blanks for the official record and also with four sets of small blanks for each office. As soon as the count for any office is finished the four inspectors sign all four blanks, and a policeman takes them to police headquarters, and quickly returns for others. Thus the count goes on until it is completed—sometimes not before midnight.

Meantime there have gathered in a large room at police headquarters all the Commissioners, the Superintendent, and a great number of newspaper reporters with pencils sharpened at both ends, while the walls are lined with messenger and telephone boys. As soon as a report is brought it is read out by the Superintendent, taken down by the newspaper men, and forwarded to their editors as rapidly as possible. By 8 o'clock the returns come thick and fast, and nothing is heard but the scratching of pencils and the footsteps of racing messengers. The Commissioners soon go to their private offices, for they know that anxious candidates will speedily be calling to learn their fate, although a very fair idea has spread abroad by 9 or 10 o'clock as to how the State and city have "gone" on the principal issues. In the case of the election of November, 1894, everybody knew that Tammany was beaten long before that hour.

But the fun of the street, which is now beginning, is not for that band of reporters at headquarters, nor for those other bands of writers in the newspaper offices down town, who, with almost superhuman despatch and endurance, are tabulating and putting into type and commenting upon these returns for the delectation of the public next morning.

The tenement-house districts have been alive with people since sundown, dancing about the fires. They have learned long ago the outlines of the result, and those on the successful side are rejoicing in their tumultuous way, sure of the support of all the boys. As the evening advances the excitement spreads to Broadway and up town. The newspapers will issue extras every hour or so from 9 p. m. to 2 in the morning, but they do not hesitate to give all this news away upon their bulletins as fast as they get it—"Election Day in New York," by Ernest Ingersoll, in the Century.

No safer or more efficacious remedy can be had for coughs, or any trouble of the throat, than "Brown's Bronchial Troches."

AFRICAN TROOPS.

Drilling the Awkward Squad in Three Languages.

I was watching only the other day the drilling, close to my quarters here, of the new Fourteenth Soudanese Battalion. This battalion has only been in existence about a fortnight, and is admittedly not made up of the finest black material. I sat my pony, followed with infinite interest the work of the drill instructor, an English non-commissioned officer (one, by the way, of a good many fine specimens of this the finest type of soldier that the world has to show, lent to the Khedive by her majesty's Government). To watch this man's work was an admirable lesson in patience, in dogged perseverance, eye, and in gentleness, for albeit his light cane occasionally tapped a protruding shoulder or checked a leg meandering aimlessly in space, he was uniformly reasonable and kindly with his pupils.

For half an hour or more he labored unceasingly, marching, wheeling, making time, repeating each movement ten, twenty, or more times, and at length, hearse and completely out of breath, and mopping the profuse perspiration from his forehead, he turned to me to rest for a few minutes and talk quietly. "Yes," he allowed, "it is hard work to do this for six hours a day, and such a lot of fat-heads you never saw. Not that it's their fault. You see, sir, they all come from different tribes, and most of 'em know very little if any Arabic, and I myself have only been nine months in the country, and to crown it all the drill's in Turkish. And then they're nearly all savages—just savages, and some of 'em—I've two or three in that squad—are perfect idiots. Don't know their hand from their foot or their eye from their elbow. Each of them has to be taught separately, like I've got to teach this chap now." And as he spoke he selected and brought from the ranks a strapping, flat-headed negro whose loose, shambling limbs flopped all about, and whose expression had the bland vacuity of a bone-egg-spoon, and proceeded to put him through his paces.

He marched him, halted him, wheeled him, stood him at ease, turned him right about face, and marched him again, illustrating every movement in his own person, and prompting and guiding his pupil at every step, until at length a light gleamed upon that dull, turgid brain, and I straightaway my friend the sergeant knew he had won the day. "Bir iki, bir iki," he had shouted. "Bir iki * * * right turn, right turn—Haramatt!"—(this shouted, "haramatt, you silly idiot" * * * towards the women's quarters). "Ah, that's right! Bir iki, bir iki, bir iki. Mind your knee, mind your knee—left turn. Now, you know left turn, Silka Haddi" (towards the railway station). "Ah, I thought so!" And so forth, giving the orders in Turkish, the explanations in Arabic, and his own observations in forcible English. Yet was he enthusiastic ever the qualities of his men so soon as he had got his breath. "You can do anything with them," he cried, "when once they know what you want. In a month's time they'll be ready—and you see what they are now—not to stand alone as a battalion, perhaps, but drafted into

Discarded Work of Dead Authors.

The bitterest enemy of a great man or great woman of letters is the creature who brings to light a writer's discarded work. "His best he gave, his worst he kept," it ought to be left to a literary man or woman to say which, and how much, of his or her products shall be given finally to the world. There should be some respect for the dead. The fact that a writer leaves manuscripts behind him is no reason why they should be printed and circulated. They may be utterly unworthy of him, and tend to minimize his fame and influence. We have been led to these remarks by the announcement of a new edition of the "Works of the Brontes." In this we read "valuable copyright matter, furnished by the Rev. A. B. Nicholls, the husband of Charlotte Bronte, will be included." Well, let us hope the "matter" will be "valuable" indeed. It will not be so simply because it was penned by Charlotte, or Emily, or Anne; it might represent the writer at her worst. At any rate, let lovers of literature be upon their guard. The Bronte sisters are in their graves; and nobody has any right to publish manuscript work of theirs which would in any way impair their reputation.—London Saturday Review.

Anecdote of Chief Baron Pollock.

The effort being made in certain quarters to persuade a Judge to resign his appointment brings to mind an anecdote told of Baron Pollock when he was Chief Baron Pollock. On one occasion some one hinted retirement pretty broadly to the Baron, entirely with a view, the person urged, to the prolongation of such a valuable life. As soon as he saw the drift of the speaker's remarks the old man rose, and with his grim, dry gravity, said: "Will you dance with me?" Naturally, the well-wisher stood aghast at the Chief Baron's strange request, but the latter, who prided himself particularly upon his sturdy legs, began to caper about with youthful vivacity. Seeing his visitor standing surprised, the Baron tripped up to him and said: "Well, if you won't dance with me, will you box with me?" and "squatting up" to him, half in jest and half in earnest, literally boxed the gentleman out of the room. After that the old Chief Baron had no more visitors anxiously inquiring after his health and suggesting retirement.—Westminster Gazette.
