Extracts From Editorial Expression of Journals

Of the State and the Coast on Subjects of Living and News Interest.

Watsonville Pajaronian: The long and exciting Presidential campaign is over and the country is to have another change of administration. The principles of the Republican party have been upheld. Its advocacy of a tariff measure that would raise ample revenue for governmental purposes, and at the same time foster American manufactures and develop the home market, and its adherence to the cause of sound money, have been endorsed by the votes of the majority of the electors of this country, and McKinley and Hobart will be at the head of our Government after the fourth day of next March. Here on the Pacific Coast, where the fusionists were numerous, the outlook for the nation's success did not seem so certain to Republicans, but the great States of the East and Middle West were not affected by the enthusiasm of the Silverites and the brilliant campaign of Bryan, and they remained steadfast to McKinley. The election of McKinley is a guarantee that the period of unrest and business stagnation is soon to end.

GOOD ROADS. Pomona Times: Better roads is a familiar subject discussed in nearly all the papers of the State. The ensuing Legislature will be called upon to revise the road laws with a view to secure better roads. Permanency is of the first consideration. Under present laws the entire creation and maintenance of public roads are vested in the Supervisors who in many counties cannot spare the necessary time for efficient road work.

WHAT THEY HAVE DONE. Marysville Democrat: In the election Tuesday last the voters of Yuba County made a record and set an example worthy of emulation. They have placed their seal of condemnation upon the leader of the Democratic party because he is not a Democrat. They have said to William Jennings Bryan: "We want no man for President who stands upon a platform of repudiation and openly declares that if elected he will enforce its provisions." By the largest plurality given to a President in twenty years they have recorded their verdict in favor of protection to home industries and against the wild scheme of the silver mine owners. And in the large majority given to candidate Cutler they plainly notify the leaders of the Democratic party of California that they will not consent to deliver the goods in trades such as were entered into with leaders of the Populist party to elect Thomas V. Cator United States Senator.

ASSERTED THEMSELVES. Healdsburg Tribune: The American people have asserted themselves for protection, an issue which the Democrats and Populists vainly endeavored to sidetrack as being a thing of the past and rejected forever. The cheap money doctrine was defeated with such majorities all over the country that it will likely never be attempted as an issue again under the same conditions, and the Chicago platform was denounced by every true American conservative who upholds the Constitution with reverence.

DEMOCRATS READ OUT. Red Bluff News: The Republicans are of course delighted with the result, but not more so than the Cleveland Democrats, who assisted them to win the victory. When the returns are all in, we shall see what the strength of the National Democrats is, that is how many voted for Palmer and Buckner. Those who went over and voted for McKinley must be classed as Republicans, and will scarcely have the hardihood to claim any longer that they are the simon pure Democracy, and aspire to the Presidency of the wilderness. We anticipate that these men will fall to be accepted as leaders by the Democracy in future and that, falling in this, they will all betake themselves with bag and baggage into the Republican camp to stay. We hope they will. There is where they belong and there they go there the better for all parties.

THE NATIONAL VICTORY. Oakland Enquirer: The Republican party has been made the instrument in the winning of a glorious victory over the combined forces of misrule and un-sound finance, but the Republican party did not alone accomplish the result. It was the assistance of hundreds of thousands of good citizens not ordinarily Republicans who, when they saw the country endangered, forgot all about party, and remembered only that it was their duty to be patriots. Most of these men who rose above party were Democrats, but they were Democrats in name only, and their patriotism was not of the narrow kind. They were Democrats in name only, and their patriotism was not of the narrow kind.

COUNTING THE VOTE. Stockton Independent: In calculating the totals on the election returns in California the ill-advised instructions of the Republican State Committee, have refused to count the votes for the same men on the Democratic and Populist tickets as being for the same. If this omission should prove on the total vote to make a vital difference and result in the defeat of the Bryan ticket where aggregating the votes would elect them in some of the States. In that case there is little if any room for doubt that the decision will be that the intention of the voter will govern where the intention is made sufficiently plain. Such have been the decisions in other cases and in other States, and precedents are being set for the case in California. Republicans who have repeatedly, in a free ballot and a fair count, should not stultify themselves by now repudiating this principle as applied to Bryan.

A MATTER FOR CONGRATULATION. Fresno Expositor: There seems to have been almost an entire absence of any serious disturbances at the polls Tuesday in any part of the country. A few years ago this fact would have been looked upon as something remarkable. Nothing was expected more as a matter of course than that the afternoon and evening of election day should witness a large amount of cheating and some attendant fatalities. Even minor elections were seldom held without more or less trouble. This change has been brought about largely by the adoption of the Australian ballot system and other safeguards thrown about polling-places, and the elimination of the distributor and ward and precinct heeler. More States also compel the closing of the saloon, which, while it does not altogether prevent election day drunkenness, does greatly reduce it, especially among the excitable and turbulent element of the community. The writer remembers distinctly when in some States there was no such thing as a secret ballot. The voter not only voted an open ticket, but each name voted for was called orally so that the crowd that surrounded the polling-place could hear it. At the same time it was the custom to have whisky free as water at frequent wooden buckets with a tin cup convenient for all comers, old and young. THE COUNTRY'S DEBT TO DEMOCRATS. Portland Oregonian: It is impossible to overestimate the debt of the country to those bold, enlightened and patriotic Democrats who refused to follow the perverted party organization in the paths of financial dishonesty and social disorganization of economic and political revolution. They have come to its rescue in a more vital crisis, they have saved it from a deadlier peril than that which dissolved party ties and united all patriots in the stirring days of 1861. Overcoming as the majority for McKinley is, the men whose votes elected Cleveland four years ago could have turned the scale. It could not have been done without them. For every Populist drawn to support of the Chicago platform, for every feeble or dishonest Republican lured into the ways of repudiating creditors or escaping the restraints of law, for every Democrat who has deserted the honorable traditions of his party to chase after the spoils of official patronage, for each mischievous miscreant and recreant, a conscientious and loyal Democrat has lifted the soiled colors of his party to fight under the same standard which represents to him as truly as to its heroes the high, pure and lasting principles of public faith and economic integrity, of subjection to law and respect for public order, which are the inheritance and the charge of good citizens of all parties alike.

SILVER NOT OVERTHROWN. Stockton Mail: Don't you believe for a moment that the battle for silver is over or that a circulation bottomed on banks will be a permanent policy of this nation. The cause of the people has received a setback, but it will go marching on. Have no fear of that. Incoming Administration will not find its path strewn with roses. There will be as many thorns as blossoms.

PARROTS GO TO SCHOOL. They Begin With Kindergarten Methods and Graduate as Seniors. One of the most peculiar professions of this very professional age is that which has for its end and aim the education of parrots, says "Pearson's Weekly." The parrots' academy is conducted on systematic lines, and resembles in many of its educational features an ordinary educational establishment. In one room (corresponding to Standard I. of the regular business) are congregated a number of parrots, and their introduction and under its tuition the class begins to show progress by using such simple words as "Yes!" and "No!" Standard II. marks a step in the upward grade. Bi-syllables are here introduced, and double-worded sentences of an easy nature repeated. The third standard comprises tri-syllable words and sentences of a more advanced kind. Thus far the work is of a routine character, the teachers being the birds themselves. But with Standard IV. the real work of education begins, and the bird instructor gives place to the pedagogic proper. The blackboard, too, now comes in. With a piece of chalk the dominie makes the letter "A" on the board, pronounces it aloud, and the birds repeat it, and in turn—the whole alphabet after him. By the time Standard V. is reached a parrot of ordinary intelligence can read and spell words as "cat" and "dog" with reasonable facility. Standards V. and VI. continue the process by gradual advances, simple sums in arithmetic being added to the curriculum, and the method of "tell-me" the time taught.

Everybody Was Pleas'd. "I see by the American papers," remarked the king of the Cannibal Islands to the newly arrived missionary, "that there is now a decided objection on the part of your church authorities to sending out as missionaries young men who use tobacco in any form." "That is true," replied the missionary. "I use neither liquors nor tobacco, and the idea is spreading, as you say, that missionaries should abstain from both." "It is a very good idea, indeed," added the king, "I regard the movement with considerable satisfaction. It pleases me greatly." "I suppose, then, you think with us that for a missionary to drink and smoke detracts from his influence?" "I suppose it does, but I was not thinking of that particularly. I was alluding to the fact that a person whose system is saturated with nicotine is utterly spoiled for roasting. The very best you can do with him is to use him for smoked meat."

There are no sheep in Japan, and wool is not used as clothing, silk and cotton being the staples. There are no pigs—pork is an unknown article of diet, and is not used in cooking. Neither are there any goats, nor mules, nor donkeys.

BURIED IN PLASTER OF PARIS.

Terrible Mode of Execution Used by a Governor of a Persian Province.

Revival of "Gatching" a hideous Form of Execution Practiced Some Forty Years Ago.

When affairs do not go right in Persia the authorities adopt harsh measures to make the people respect the law. The ruler of the Shah sent to encourage the natives to acts of lawlessness. On the road between Bushire and Isfahan there were a large number of robberies. In some instances caravans and villages were looted, and an Englishman was stripped naked and beaten with sticks. The robbers were strewn with merchandise that the workers did not want, and during one week it was admitted that they secured booty amounting to $500,000. Something had to be done to check the marauding. The Governor of Shiraz, H. R. Rehkand-Dowleh, decided to strike terror into the hearts of the people, and the method he chose was the revival of "gatching," a hideous form of execution which has been in abeyance for forty years. To "gatch" a victim is to have his chest cut over a hole about two feet deep. Into this well the prisoner is put, sometimes with his head downward and at others with his head sticking out of the top. Plaster of Paris is then emptied in, and between each bucketful water is poured down the well. The "gatch" men swirls and the circulation stops as it hardens, causing the most intense agony. For his "horrible example" the Governor did not select men who had been engaged in the robberies. In his heartless Persian way he insisted that "gatching" anybody would serve as an object lesson to his subjects, criminal or otherwise. He picked out five men who had been imprisoned for non-payment of taxes. This is a heinous offense in the eyes of Persian officials, and the Governor thought that their execution would not only scare the robbers, but be a warning to other tax-dodgers that prompt settlement with the collectors was eminently desirable.

On Sunday, May 10th, writes an eye-witness of the latest exhibition of "gatching," the five prisoners, chained neck and neck, were marched out of prison, and, slowly escorted by a large mob, who were kept from pressing too close by soldiers with fixed bayonets and others with long sticks, were taken to the Koran Gate, near the Bagh-i-No, on the town side of which, alongside the road, their wells had been prepared. It took one hour to reach the Bagh-i-No, but the torture of this form of execution being unknown to the prisoners, they walked along without a sign of fear. They were taken into a high walled garden, a guard being placed at the entrance, and in a short time the first to be executed was brought out. Round his neck was a steel chain, which he held tightly in his hand. Some one offered him a pitcher of water, from which he eagerly drank, and then, not knowing to what awful death he was doomed, he walked calmly and without a word to his well, which was nearly half an hour to fill. The well with gatch, during all which time the sticks of the soldiers were in use to keep the crowd from pressing too close and hampering the movements of those employed with the gatch. After this second man had been brought out the crowd moved to the well prepared for him. Having obtained a photograph of a form of execution which I hope has been resorted to for the last time, I hurried from the spot, and only just in time, as I afterward heard, to escape the most heart-rending scenes. When the gatch became solid and tightened on the poor prisoner his yells were frightful to listen to, and as they were carried over the walled garden those waiting their turn realized that the death to which they were doomed was far from being a painless one. They had hoped for, was, instead, a terrible nature.

As the fourth man was led from the garden he begged the executioner to take him to the bazar, where he would find some one to give him ten tumans ($10), after which he could cut his way out. The fifth man, who was even more frantic as the yells issued from the mouths of his companions. "Spare me! Spare me!" he cried, "and I will show you where 2,000 tumans ($2,000) lie hid, but his offer came too late. When, three days later, I passed along the road, I found capitals had been added to the pillars covering the heads of the poor men who had thus horribly been done to death.

The Governorship of a State is held yearly by the man who gives the Shah the largest present; during his period of office he collects from the people the taxes, the present he gives the Shah and a good substantial sum into the bargain for himself. Absolutely pitiless, his men will often seize the last sticks of an old man, and if the people, seeing starvation staring them in the face, resist, they are liable to be put to death, by torture, as in this case, if what was in the mouth of everyone was true. In the old days it was necessary to make a frightful example of a few caravan robbers to keep the road through the Kotabs safe. In a country where it is customary to commit suicide in a fanatical way—as, for instance, when a wife has been given to her husband's funeral pyre in India—an outcry often is made in Europe, and yet, in a country full of Europeans, men are taken out in broad daylight and cruelly murdered by the roadside.—New York Herald.

They Spin by Hand. The hum of the spinning wheel is still a familiar sound in Block Island, a quaint and interesting resort in summer and a miniature world in winter, in which the habits and customs are those of one hundred and fifty years ago. The island is fifteen miles off the Rhode Island shore and almost directly south of stormy Point Judith. The heads of thirty Block Island families set sail in fishing boats the other day and pushed up the Thames River to Oakdale, where they left heads of wool to be carded into rolls for hand spinning. The rolls will be spun and knitted into stockings and mittens for the protection of the hardy islanders against the bleak winter winds of the Atlantic. There are times during the winter when the wind sweeps across the treeless land at a velocity of eighty-four miles an hour, and women take their lives in their hands when they venture out of doors. The isolation of the island is almost complete. John Schofield established the first woolen mill in Connecticut near Oakdale, where the carding was done by power cards. In 1798 the Block Islanders began to send wool to the mill to be carded into rolls, and generation after generation have kept up the practice. Formerly many bags of grain accompanied the wool, and grist and woolen mills were kept running day and night, while the fishermen and farmers enjoyed themselves in the quiet Connecticut village until the work was done. All Out for Sport. A man who was making a tour of the West on horseback rode up to a cabin one afternoon, seeking refreshment for himself and horse. A boy of about 14 came out of the cabin in response to the traveler's call. "Hello!" he said. "Your father at home?" asked the stranger. "Now, he's went over to Sagetown to a slugging match."

"Is your mother at home?" "Now, she went down to Paw-Paw Town to a pigeon shootin' match."

"Well, is there any one here who could get me up a dinner?" "Now, I dunno as that is. Sister Lib has jes' went to the baseball game down to the crossroads and Sister Louisy has went off with her beau to the horse race over at Peavy Mills. Brother Jim's went to a rooster fight over at Hi Simpson's and Dan's gone to a dawg fight. If granddama's was here she'd jerk a chicken an' fry it for you."

"Where is your grandmother?" "Her and granddaddy's went to a shootin' match."

"Well, you're rather a smart-looking boy; couldn't you get me up something?" "I'm most starved."

"Sorry, mister, but I really ain't time. I'm jest off to a mewl race an' I've got 10 cents on Bill Jimson's old white mewl an' I want to be thar to see 'im win. Got to go right off. Good-by!"—Detroit Free Press.
