

Y. W. C. A. COAST CONVENTION.

Its Session Was Opened in This City Yesterday.

Interesting Discussions on Subjects of Importance in Christian Work.

The sixth annual convention of the Young Women's Christian Association of the Pacific Coast was opened yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Seventh-street Methodist Episcopal Church South and there was a good attendance from all parts of the coast.

The convention was called to order by Miss Bessie Griswold of the State University, the temporary President, and Miss Clark of Los Angeles acted as temporary Secretary.

After singing Mrs. John Norvell led the exercises of the "Quiet Hour," and said that she had thought that, at the beginning of the convention, one of the greatest needs for them all was a quickening of their own hearts so as to make them more earnest in the work before them.

After prayer by Mrs. Norvell and singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," a number of the members of the convention and ministers present joined in prayer.

Miss Martha Teal, General Secretary of Los Angeles, made remarks on the "Boards of Managers and Committees," and said that as the Board of Managers and Committees so are the local organization. The Board of Managers should, at all times, be ready to make such changes in the committees as they thought best, as many members of committees might have been placed in the wrong place, and do very poor work in one committee, while they would do excellent work on another.

A great deal of time was wasted frequently by not having parliamentary rules adopted and having the whole work properly systematized. One member should be delegated to do one particular piece of work, and not leave the question of that piece of work to so many that it would be done over and over again in a slipshod manner rather than have it once well done or perhaps altogether neglected.

It was necessary for the members and the committees to know intimately what was being done in their own local organization, but those of the whole State and of the United States.

The work of the various committees was briefly touched on and their duties outlined. Very practical suggestions were made as to the best methods of carrying on their special work. Stress was laid on the need of making the rooms as attractive as possible, and not only having the rooms attractive, but all the meetings equally so.

All the committee work and all the individual work should be begun by prayer. The paper was discussed by Miss Reeder, who urged the necessity of punctuality, and the advisability of frequent changes in the personnel of the committees even if the particular member was doing good work, for she might use up her energies in one class of work, and find rest and fresh energy in another.

Miss Beazell spoke briefly on the work in Sacramento and in response to Miss Reeder, Miss Teal said that the best method of making the educational classes a success was to have a thorough organization.

Mrs. Condo of Sacramento then read a paper by Miss M. Dunn, State Secretary of Pennsylvania, on "The General Secretary." The responsibility of the Secretary was very great, and required special gifts which should be properly compensated. The work was generally outlined, and the need of the constant cheerful help of the members was emphasized.

The paper was discussed by Miss Reeder and Dr. Cronmiller, the latter of whom suggested that the General Secretary should look closely after the work of the gymnasium. The General Secretary should have her one day of rest each week, and should keep it, and should have regular office hours.

Mrs. Norvell said the work of the General Secretary was very similar to that of a church pastor, as she was supposed to know everything in the conduct of the work, but she needed the constant kindly assistance and information of the other members. She believed in the weekly day of rest for the Secretary.

Miss Emma Reeder, the Pacific Coast Secretary, read a paper on "The Community." If an association kept within itself the community could have no knowledge of the work done, and no opportunity of affording help or fulfilling its duties.

The community included all who had any supervision, either in a ministerial or business capacity, over young women, besides the young women themselves, and she urged that the community should read the papers that are sent out by the association, and the newspaper notices that appeared from time to time. It had been found in some places best to issue a regular weekly paper for the work, but in Sacramento the regular papers themselves had been in the habit of relieving the association of that burden.

The community should be ready to contribute to the work. The need of the careful selection of the working membership was dwelt upon. It was desirable, owing to the wandering habits of the women on this coast, that all young women should become members of the organization.

The community should pray for the success of the work. The pastors should be willing to do all in their power to help along the work. It would be a very good plan if the local associations should give the community, or the young women of any particular establishment, an entertainment, or that the young women of any store or other establishment should give one to the association.

delight to have the association in their midst and spoke of pleasant meetings he had been present at. Rev. Dr. Hoyt followed in a similar strain, and said the Y. W. C. A. did one thing the individual churches could not do, and that was to gather all the young women into one fold.

Grove F. Ekins, Secretary Y. M. C. A. of Sacramento, made remarks on "The Individual Member." There was a danger of an association becoming "secretaritized," that is, that the Secretary should become the whole association. The individual member was, and should be, the working power of the association. He divided the different members into classes or groups.

He dwelt strongly on one group of members, whom he named the passives, those who only joined the Y. M. C. A. for its advantage from a pecuniary point of view and never gave anything in the shape of help to the association. Each member should put all her energy and her individuality into the work of the association.

Dr. Cronmiller asked how to get rid of the parasites. Mr. Ekins thought that prevention was better than cure. They were in the habit of advertising $25 worth of privileges for $5. He had found it advisable to make the most of the other features of the association.

The temporary President then nominated Miss Blazell, Miss Teal and Mrs. Norvell as a committee to present nominations for the permanent organization, and on their return they announced the following names: Miss Bessie Griswold of the State University for President, Dr. M. M. Cronmiller of Sacramento for Vice-President, Miss J. Richardson of Sacramento and Miss Susie Dickson of Stanford University for Secretaries. Miss Richardson announced that she would be unable to serve and the committee was ordered to present another name to the convention this morning. The other officers were unanimously elected.

The afternoon proceedings were closed with singing and prayer.

EVENING SESSION.

A Large Concourse to Listen to Rev. Dr. Sherman.

At the evening session there was a song service by members of Sacramento to Y. W. C. A. by the large assemblage, and led by Miss Belle Carington, with Mrs. Lucy Green as accompanist.

Rev. Mr. Buck read a Scripture lesson, after which Rev. Dr. Chapman offered prayer. Then Mrs. Macfarlane sang a solo, "Book of Ages," Miss Belle Carington accompanying.

Dr. M. M. Cronmiller, on behalf of the local association, delivered an admirable address of welcome to the visiting delegates, in which she urged them all to come to the meetings in a prayerful, receptive mood. She urged upon them all to engage in prayer before coming to each meeting.

The members should take careful notes of the thoughts and expressions, that may be uttered so that when they returned to their homes they might have carried something with them that would be of service to them in years to come.

Rev. Dr. Anderson, on behalf of the pastors of the city, welcomed the delegations. He was personally acquainted with all the pastors in the city, and could say of them that there was not a handsome man amongst them, but all had a meek, bowed, subdued look, as if they were men captured and controlled by their wives.

It was a good thing to say of them, but another good thing was that there was perfect harmony and peace among them. There was great purpose and mighty faith among them. Another good thing was that they were hard workers, and were thoroughly worked from early morn to dewy eve.

With such a company of pastors, the visitors might well be assured of a hearty welcome, as they were all, heart and soul, in accord with the work of the association. He said a high tribute to the work of the local association. The pulpits were open to them day and night and the homes of the people also.

The President thanked the people of Sacramento for the hearty welcome they had received, and for the way in which the homes of the people had been opened to them.

Rev. E. S. Sherman, D. D., of Oakland delivered the convention address on the association motto, "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." He spoke in Oakland and the glorious revival in that city.

The association motto was one of those passages of Scripture that ought to be considered in its connection. The people of God had been carried into captivity, and the city of Jerusalem had been destroyed in accordance with God's promise, Cyrus the King of Persia had allowed them to return and rebuild the city, and while they had been hindered in the work, the prophet Zachariah had arisen and obtained the necessary authority and power to carry out the work. These circumstances that the words were uttered.

The words were as true now as then. It was not by the might or power of human spirit or organization that the good work of the Lord was being accomplished. It was all done by God's Spirit. There was no obstacle in the way of doing good than a great church or other organization without God's spirit.

Perseverance would do much, but not all, to accomplish anything, and while they might admire the perseverance of the great men and women of the world, it would have been useless unless there had been the proper spirit and power within them. There was no book in the world like the Bible. He remembered when a boy seeing his father persistently pound, pound, pound on a rock with gentle blows in one place until it fell apart when he thought it should have been done by one enormous blow. The hammer was of no use unless there was a powerful, skillful hand and arm behind it, and so it was with all human work unless God's spirit was behind it. The Divine Executive was the spirit. The Spirit of God was brought by God's Spirit, and had always so declared, and his disciples had to wait for the spirit after His resurrection until it descended upon them forty days after.

A great many people relied on the prayers of their fathers or their mothers, and he thanked God for the efficacy of prayer, but they must remember that it was the spirit of God that prompted the prayer. It was the same in every department of Christian work and of the Christian life. It was all by the power of the spirit.

God's work by and through his people must depend on the extent of the power of God's spirit within them. They were ready to receive the spirit when they were filled with love of God. When their eyes were fastened on Jesus the spirit could descend upon them.

At the conclusion of his address Dr. Sherman read the following lines, entitled "Himself Hath Done It."

Once it was the blessing,
Now it is the Lord;
Once it was the feeling,
Now He holds me close;
Once His gifts I wanted,
Now Himself alone;
Once I sought for healing,
Now the healer own.

Once 'twas painful trying,
Now His perfect trust;
Once a half salvation,
Now to the uttermost;
Once 'twas ceaseless holding,
Now He holds me close;
Once I sought for healing,
Now my anchor's fast.

Once 'twas busy planning,
Now His trustful prayer;
Once 'twas anxious tending,
Now He has the care;
Once 'twas to be weeping,
Now what Jesus says;
Once 'twas constant asking,
Now His ceaseless praise.

Once it was my working,
His it henceforth shall be;
Once I tried to use Him,
Now He uses me;
Once the power was granted,
Now the mighty one;
Once I sought for glory,
Now His will alone.

Once I hoped in Jesus,
Now I know He's mine;
Once my lamps were dying,
Now they brightly shine;
Once for death I waited,
Now His coming hail;
And my hopes were dashed,
Safe within the veil.

Rev. Hoyt engaged in prayer and a quartet of the Y. M. C. A. sang a selection.

FINED TEN DOLLARS, But the Postal Telegraph Sign Can Now Remain in Place. The only case in the Police Court yesterday was that against the manager of the Postal Telegraph Company for erecting a sign on the awning in front of the company's new premises at the corner of Second and J streets. The manager pleaded guilty, and on motion of the City Attorney the minimum fine of $10 was imposed, as the sign was said to have been erected through a misunderstanding.

The peculiar feature of the case is that under the curious wording of the ordinance the sign having been erected can remain in place till January next, when all signs of that character must come down.

Quite a Difference. The Salt Lake "News" of the 2d contained the following: "In a recent discussion of the subject of municipal lighting in the Sacramento, Cal., City Council, the 'Record-Union' quoted a reference to Salt Lake City as having its bid for electric lighting at $55 per year on an all-night schedule. The fact is, the lowest bid the city could obtain is that it is now paying $102 per year on a moonlight schedule."

The Grand Jury. There was a session of the Grand Jury yesterday, and among those cited to appear before that body were Supervisor Curtis, J. A. Sheehan and David Falconer. The latter has been employed as Inspector of bridges.

WANTS TO GET HOME.

A Young Hoosier Who Wants to Get Back to "Injanny."

Yesterday a young man, very plainly dressed, entered Sheriff Johnson's office and said he desired an interview with that official. The visitor told the Sheriff that his name was E. B. Kent; that he considered himself a fugitive from justice and wished to give himself up.

Kent said he came from Centerton, Morgan County, Indiana, where he had no home, but had a man named Noah King. They had a fight, and he used a knife on his adversary, but whether or not King was seriously or fatally wounded he never knew, as he did not stop to inquire.

It appears that Kent took Horace Greely's advice, traveled toward the west, and kept on traveling until he reached what Tom Fitch so poetically termed "the western rim of the Republic, where one can watch the burning sunset kiss the drowsy sea."

The self-comfortable youth was accommodated with the best that Sheriff Johnson had to offer in his Hotel de Hobo, and there he will sojourn until the Sheriff can ascertain whether or not there is anything in his story.

The probability is that the young man is homesick and that he is seeking some more comfortable method of getting back to Morgan County, Ind., than riding brakebeams or counting railroad ties.
