The Lively Little Schooners and Their Work.

After Five Years' Apprenticeship the "Cubs" Rise to Positions as Licensed Harbor Guides.

The announcement that the association of Sandy Hook pilots will put into commission the first steamship pilot exclusively for pilot service about May 1st points to a new era in the picturesque business of guiding ocean vessels into port.

tion is conducted by the Pilot Commissioners, who usually call in one or two old sea dog pilots to look at the applicant to the harbor and to see that he knows nothing whatever about the harbor and its pitfalls.

The provision of the law which requires a captain to accept, or at least to pay for the services of a pilot in case they are offered, and to take the first pilot who applies, results in many exciting episodes for the pilots themselves.

In the old days of fierce competition the pilot boats were often to be met with 100 miles or more off shore, but now they seldom go out more than a dozen miles.

LOST MANLY POWER.

The Feeling of Weakness, or Wasted Vitality Can Be Cured by Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt.

San Francisco, January 26, 1897. D. R. A. T. SANDEN-DEAR SIR: WHEN I commenced to wear your Belt I was all broken down. My nerves were completely shattered and I had terrible pains in my back.

IT HAS MANY HOME CURES. Home cures, hundreds of them, are the evidence of merit in Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt.

They speak for it louder and stronger than any advertisement can. When you feel yourself weak, dependent and lacking confidence in yourself and every advertised remedy which promises to cure you, it must be given to you by a man who has been once as weak as you have been cured and wishes you to know that you may find relief from your troubles in the same manner.

is still bitter cold, and No. 2 looks like a well-developed iceberg, so thoroughly coated is she. Presently the lookout man speaks again:

"It's the Majestic," says he, "the passenger has just been able to make out the outlines of a dim something far ahead, but he cannot tell whether it is the Majestic or the Volunteer."

"You don't mean to say," says he, half angrily, "that you can make out the ship's name at that distance?"

"I'll bet you that the steamer, if it's a steamer at all, which I doubt, I'll bet that it isn't the Majestic," says the passenger, becoming excited.

"Wait and see, my son, wait and see," is all that the lookout man says as he turns again to gaze at the approaching speck.

"When the passenger comes on deck after breakfast, prepared to triumph over the lookout man, the latter silently hands him a glass, through which he can faintly make out the gold letters, 'M-A-J-E-S-T-I-C' on the approaching steamer."

"But you don't mean to tell me that you could make out her name when she was scarcely in sight?" asked the passenger, still incredulous.

"I'll admit I fooled you a little on that," said the lookout man, with a laugh. "I knew from the way she looked that she belonged to the Majestic line, and no other of that line was expected in just now."

"That was easy, of course, for the pilot, but it was remarkable enough that he should have been able to see any mark at all when the steamer was a mere dot upon the horizon."

Everybody seems to be in excellent humor on board No. 2 this morning, and the passenger learns that it is because of their luck in capturing a prize on the Atlantic liners are the capital prizes in the pilot's lottery.

"But they wouldn't have a chance for their lives in rowing through those waves."

"O, yes, they would—a chance. Them boats will live in almost any kind of weather. The biggest danger would have been from the roll of the steamer."

When one says that the pilots are brave men he bestows no special praise. It is their daily business to be brave and no one realizes it nowhere so well as when he stands upon the deck of one of their own vessels and watches the black, swirling seas, and their tongues tipped with foam, rush open-mouthed upon him.

This is done by wrapping cotton waste on the end of a pole, dipping it in tar, and then, when it is lighted, whirling the torch below the big figures on the mainsail, which shows that she is a pilot boat. But this vessel, like the former one, is already supplied with a pilot, so that soon the torch is extinguished, and everyone who can do so has turned in.

law is for vessels drawing less than fourteen feet 82 7/8 per foot; fourteen to eighteen feet, 82 3/8 per foot; eighteen to twenty-one feet, 84 1/2 per foot; over twenty-one feet, 84 7/8 per foot.

The big passenger boats are of heavy draft, and besides, their draft is known. The captain of a freighter sometimes underestimates his draft (although there is a penalty attached to this) and there are frequently amusing contests between pilot and captain, in which the former endeavors to find out the ship's exact draft without insinuating that the captain is a liar.

The passenger steamer make the fastest time in getting into the harbor, so that the pilot can see the world more quickly than he would on a sailing vessel.

When the passenger comes on deck the next morning he learns that another steamer has been sighted. "It's a liner," announced the lookout man without turning his head from his intent gaze at the eastern horizon. The passenger's eyes sweep the horizon line and he can see nothing. The wind has gone down somewhat, but the sea is still running high and their foaming crests sparkle in the morning sun. It
