

MINISTER'S QUALIFICATIONS.

IN THE FIRST PLACE HE OUGHT TO MARRY.

Interesting Proceedings at the Colored Methodist Conference Yesterday.

The third day's session of the annual conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church was called to order at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Praise services were conducted by Rev. J. E. Edwards of Oakland, and all joined in singing appropriate hymns.

The Committee on Admission to the Ministry favorably reported the names of Edward F. Lee of Oakland and Robert Herring of Mare Island, and Bishop Gaines proceeded with the usual test questions.

The Bishop's methods were unique in that they conveyed to the licentiates practical information well intended to assist them in the labors on which they were about to enter.

Deacon Lee was questioned as to his condition in life, and admitted that he was unmarried. He was advised to hunt himself a wife at the earliest opportunity, the Bishop impressing upon him that a good woman can, more than any other agency, uplift a man and spur him on to success.

Ministers of the Bishop explained, should be translated and not literally translate Timothy, and daily "take wine for the stomach's sake." He had heard, he said, of a minister who secured a prescription from a doctor, and always kept the bottle filled, though the same roots remained in it for fifteen years.

Ministers should understand how to keep peace in a community, and should so conduct themselves as to be respected and revered by their congregations. They would not do, he said, to go to a brother minister clothed with the power of a policeman and order him to do a certain thing, for a great distance separated persuasion and command, and a Christian talk in a Christian spirit was the one and only way in which to reveal the faults of the erring, with a chance of practical reformation.

Bishop Gaines further advised the licentiates to practice punctuality, particularly in pecuniary matters. If a promise was made to pay a bill at a certain time, it was best to meet that promise and not dodge around a corner to escape meeting the creditor. Nothing would so soon cause lack of confidence as failure to meet promises, and personally to appear to hear a man preach whose word could not be depended upon.

He advised the young men to be gracious to all, and particularly to the poor and humble. A prayer at the bedside of a poor paralytic was a good thing, but if fifty cents were left on the bed, the subject would have much more confidence in the efficacy of that prayer.

The several committees handed in reports, most of which were of a satisfactory nature. That handed in by Reverends Wilson and Edwards, respecting church entertainments was particularly well received and approved by the entire conference.

The report suggested that the usual church fair entertainments and others of a similar nature be relegated to the obscurity from which they sprung, and the probabilities are that the African Methodist Episcopal Church in California has seen the last of the segregation church entertainments for the purpose of raising funds for church or pastor.

At 1 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock this morning.

THE ANNUAL SERMON. In the evening a service was there opened with singing, Rev. E. Edwards of Oakland giving out the hymn, "Equip Me for the War."

Rev. E. T. Cottman of Los Angeles made an eloquent prayer for the young men and the old men in the work in which they were engaged.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. J. E. Edwards, was introduced by the Bishop, who announced that he would preach the annual sermon on "Education."

He took for his text Acts 24:25: "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and of judgment to come, Felix trembled." He depicted the scene as Paul appeared before his accusers and said that he appeared throughout the most celebrated trial except that of our Savior, to lose sight of himself and his position. It made no difference to him whether or not he was condemned to suffer. His business was to preach the Gospel and disseminate its doctrines wherever he could.

His training as Saul of Tarsus, before his conversion, was the most full and thorough. He was given the highest education at the feet of Gamaliel, fitting him for his later life work. As we go back in history, we find Joseph, whose life had such an effect on the welfare and history of his people. His life showed that God had marked him out for a great work. So with Moses, born in slavery, saved from the edict that doomed all the male children to death and taken care of until the appointed time when he should lead his people.

Education is a great thing, a great aid in the work that is given to us. But he wanted us to remember that all education is not gathered in the schoolhouse. Shall a young man sit down and say "I cannot go through the High School. The University is closed to me as if it did not exist. There is nothing left to me but to sit down and go without an education." If all the world did so, what would become of progress and knowledge? The scientist devotes his energies to research and investigation. He uses his understanding to increase his knowledge. He does not sit down and wait to be taught.

Education is the handmaid of all Christianity. It is a great mistake we make when we devote our intellect and our powers to the service of sin. We should devote all our strength and our intellect to the service of God. If we devote our education to the service of sin we might better by far have had no education, and not have been able to pervert a good thing to a bad end. But if we turn it to good use in the service of God, our education is a great help and a great weapon for good.

We should remember that beautiful parable of the Master that gave His servants talents—ten to one, five to another, and two to a third, and should try to avoid the fate of the slothful servant who buried his, if the little seed that is cast on the ground should say, "I am only one seed and cannot do much to beautify the land, I might as well die here." It would never do any good but if each seed sinks into the earth and sprouts and comes up and flowers, they cover the earth with beauty. So with us. Each one should do his best. We should lend all our energies in doing our share in the world.

When John and James went with Christ to the mount where he talked with Moses, and they came near missing the greatest chance of their lives. They were awed and fell with their faces to the ground, so that they could not see what was going on. But the Master took pity on them and directed their glances upward. We have many of our greatest chances by going with our faces to the ground instead of looking up to see what we can see. Philosophy, chemistry, science of all sorts are of no use unless we use them for the service of God. Let us remember this and do as Paul did, use our talents and education in God's service. We must toil as long as we can and when we have done all we can, we must stand still and wait.

The sermon was eloquent and impassioned and made a deep impression on his hearers, stamping him as a man of ability and weight.

Rev. D. R. Jones, pastor of the church here, made an earnest and forceful prayer that was a fitting complement to the sermon.

Bishop Gaines then made one of his informal talks, congratulating the conference on the excellent sermons it had listened to, and the interest that had been aroused in the meetings. He addressed his remarks principally to the young people. He related how his mother at an early period of his life had led him gently to Christ, both by precept and example. He believed in the Bible—not in part of it, but in the whole. He believed in what he understood, he believed in what he understood it. What he did not understand, he believed in, and tried to understand it. He was glad to see the feeling manifested here. He was glad to see all the friends here, no matter what their color. Color made no difference to him. He came to preach to man, not to color. He hoped there would be a revival in every one of the churches in this city.

There was a great educational work to be done in the church. There are 700,000 members, and 4,000 itinerant preachers. There was a day when in the South nothing was done to educate the people of his church, but of late years the Legislatures have appropriated many thousands of dollars. It is time for the church to help itself now. It has been carried by other people long enough. Self help is the best help, self help makes a man respected. Let us begin to help ourselves and our colleges and educational institutions.

A collection had been taken toward building a college for the education of the colored people, Bishop Gaines said that thirty-four years ago this night, in Georgia, while the cannons were booming between the North and South, he had led his wife to the altar. He wanted to say that all his success in life, all that he was, was due to her good influence. She married him when he had nothing, and still stuck to him. He could not say that he had married her, but she had married him. He had known Alexander H. Stephens and Tombs, and others of the great men of his State, and admired them. Although a slave, he had caught inspiration from them and determined to be a man, not a slave. He had no harsh words for the man who had held slaves. Perhaps he would have held them himself if he could. He did not like to see the colored people ashamed of their race. He had been the slave of all the nations of the world and ought to be either very good or very bad. He did not object to straight hair or envy it, but his own satisfied him, and he noticed that many of those who have straight hair take a great deal of pains to curl their (daughter).

Real Estate Transfers. The following real estate transfers were recorded since the last report: E. A. Well et al. to Rudolph Wittensbruck, west half of lot 8, J and K, and Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets. Lizzie Dolan to Peter A. Fitzgerald, west half of lot 6, M and N, and Fifth and Sixth streets. Frederick B. Lord et ux. to Isabel E. Gaffney, west half of lot 24, town of Galt; $25.

Ann Neely et al., by commissioner, to Mrs. Robert D. Finnie, west half of lot 6, L and M, and Eighth and Ninth streets; $1,700.

L. L. Lewis to William Bergin, lot 8 in a great work. So with Moses, born in slavery, saved from the edict that doomed all the male children to death and taken care of until the appointed time when he should lead his people.

RIVER'S LIST OF VICTIMS.

JOHN MCCARTHY WAS ADDED TO IT YESTERDAY.

Drowned While Frolicking in the Water Near the Pioneer Mill.

The old and sad story is to be again repeated, of how another boy went down to his death in the river yesterday. In this instance the victim is John McCarthy, the fourteen-year-old son of Timothy McCarthy, whose home is on Q street, between Eleventh and Twelfth.

Early yesterday afternoon young McCarthy and several other boys went to the river, a short distance beyond the Pioneer Mill, to bathe. The deceased and one of his comrades engaged in running races along the edge of the big sand bar at that point. They ran into the water, and all at once McCarthy went down over a steep bank beneath the water and disappeared.

He was unable to swim, and drowned before anything could be done to rescue him.

The body was recovered a couple of hours after the drowning by a Kanaka employed on the slaughterhouse, known as "Black Eagle." He is an accomplished diver, and has assisted on several occasions in recovering bodies of persons drowned. He found the body wedged in under a snag and brought it to the surface. The unfortunate boy's father was there to receive it, and the diver was well rewarded for his services.

The season's list of drownings will foot up nearly a dozen thus far, mostly of small boys who were unable to battle with the treacherous undercurrents of the river. What are termed sandbars in the channel of the stream are merely deposits of detritus washed down from the mines, and are not regular sandbars. The water cuts them away, leaving sharp banks, generally submerged, and the boys go down when they least expect it.

Warnings seem to have no avail, and despite the frequent drownings boys flock to the river, some of them never to return to their homes. If parents would prevail on their sons to keep away from the river, these frequent disasters will continue. It is against the law for persons to bathe within a certain distance of the city, but men and boys pay no heed to it, though they should be made to do so. It is not only in fact, but the water supply, which is from a spring, only a few hundred feet from where persons bathe every day, should be protected from such pollution.

SOCIAL EVENTS. It was a jolly party of young people that thronged the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday evening to honor Miss Lida Clinch. The walls were festooned with flowers and evergreens; the lights were shining their very brightest and everything wore the aspect of festivity. The arrangements were so thorough and so silently carried forward that the surprise was complete and overwhelming. Miss Clinch never dreaming of the reception that awaited her, all unsuspectingly entered the crowded halls and was greeted with a storm of acclamation. The party consisted of the members of the Sacramento Chorus of the Christian Endeavor convention. When the Sacramento contingent looked like failure Miss Clinch, at considerable personal inconvenience, took charge of the celebration and made it the very best thing of the kind ever done in San Francisco. In order to express their appreciation of the untiring efforts of their leader in training them for the convention services, and their admiration for the way in which she caught the falling flag and bore it to victory, the members of the chorus and a few friends arranged the surprise and made it a huge success. Never did such laughter ring through those halls, and never was there such ice cream, and everybody voted the cake and the best they had ever eaten. Grove P. Elkins, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was master of ceremonies and kept things moving at breakneck pace for four hours. The following programme attracted a big crowd about the doors and windows: Willie Adams, piano solo; Mrs. Osburn Elliott, song; Miss Bessie Jackson, recitation; Mrs. F. M. Jones, song; Miss May Ormerod, recitation; Miss Carrie Enloss, song; Miss Jennie Miller, recitation; Miss Lida Clinch, recitation; Mrs. George Lester, song. The complete success of the party was due to the able manner in which the arrangements were planned and carried through by the committee, Mrs. F. A. Valentine, Mrs. T. B. Jackson, Mrs. Thomas Ormerod, Mrs. W. C. Sherman and Mrs. F. Cady. The meeting was adjourned by singing "Sunshine." There were various other adjournments at sundry garden gates later on in the evening, but the manner of these later adjournments can be better imagined than described.

TAX ROLLS. Dates for Hearing Counties to be Fixed Next Monday. Chairman Morehouse of the State Board of Equalization, at Controller Colgan put in the day yesterday studying the several county assessment rolls sent in by County Auditors. It has been settled that dates for hearing officials from counties which will be cited to appear and show cause why their assessments could not be increased will not be fixed until Monday next. In the meantime Secretary Colgan is figuring out dates which will not conflict with other duties of the board.

RECEPTION TO THE BISHOP. The Sacramento Lyceum League Does the Honors. After the close of the evening's exercises last night at the A. M. E. Conference, a reception was given to Bishop Gaines by the Sacramento Lyceum League, it being the thirty-fourth anniversary of his marriage, and it was much enjoyed by all present. Enoch Alexander acted as master of ceremonies. William Pate favored the audience with a piano solo, finely rendered. The opening address was delivered by Mrs. Annie Murray, and was well chosen and excellently rendered, being a welcome to the strangers within our gates, and made an allusion to the anniversary of the Bishop's marriage. Next followed a pretty vocal solo, given on by Augusta Ferguson, with Minnie Gwin as accompanist.

A recitation by Miss May Logan followed, entitled "The Jester," which was rendered with spirit and effect.

A fine vocal solo by Mrs. Washington Cline next, Costa's "I Will Extol Thee," which was sung with good taste and received an encore.

A baritone solo by William Love followed, and met with loud applause. The Bishop made some appreciative remarks that excited much laughter and put every one in good humor for the refreshments that followed.

SIDEWALK OBSTRUCTIONS. The Police Are Rigidly Enforcing the Ordinance. The police are these days "going for" people who place goods on the sidewalks and keep them there any length of time. Yesterday a charge of obstructing a sidewalk was entered against John Diessen.

Merchants claim that they should be privileged to use portions of the sidewalks for handling their wares, and that the ordinance is unfairly restrictive, but Chief Drew insists that it must be enforced, or the walks will be blocked.

MATCHES AND COAL OIL. A Combination Put Into Activity by Some Children. The alarm of fire yesterday noon was caused by children playing with matches in the basement of Mrs. McNulty's residence on Ninth street, between G and H.

The youngsters succeeded in setting fire to a can of coal oil, but Mrs. McNulty quickly smothered the flames with a rug, and a passing wheelman turned a hose on the fire and put it out before the firemen reached there.

The highest and lowest temperatures one year ago yesterday were 86 and 58 degrees, and one year ago to-day 90 and 58. The average temperature was 81, and the normal 72 degrees, showing yesterday to have been 9 degrees warmer than usual for the 20th day of August.

The wet thermometer at 5 p. m. was 68 degrees, being 27 degrees cooler than the dry thermometer at the same hour. The percentage of moisture in the air at 5 p. m. was 22 per cent, as against 20 per cent, at the same hour on Thursday.
