

THE BLOOMER GIRLS WON.

BUT THE BASEBALL GAME WAS A BARK FAKE.

However, It Served to Amuse Nearly Two Thousand People.

The greatest joke of the season was played at Snowflake Park yesterday afternoon, and about 1,400 baseball cranks and 200 men whose hair grows thin on top, and who are usually seen in the front row of the orchestra when the ballet is on, were the victims.

Viewed as a joke, it was one of the best ever perpetrated in Sacramento, and everybody except the small-boy contingent laughed and grew fat, and laughed again to see the fatted and leered to belong to the elite East-nams of community, Beantown-waddle around the bars in a ludicrous attempt to run.

The pitchers, Maud Nelson was a wonder, and about the only one on an exhibition. She could play ball. She could and did give the leather the ugliest kind of twists, and was very effective against the frail, grinning, sawky youths she went up against, but the rest of the females couldn't throw a ball.

Then there was a petite little woman anchored out on the second cushion who cut up antics which would make staid old Beantown wriggle, but they took with the crowd. The crowd yelled, and the little woman, Annie Jennings, by name, cut some antics, throw a ball.

There was a man behind the bat for the Bloomers, and he understood his business. He had no difficulty whatever in holding Maud Nelson's curves, and incidentally his job. His name was Male Williams, and he played ball for his team and was a whole show in himself.

Michael Angelo Fisher was induced to do the umpiring, and his decisions were in keeping with the rest of the game. It was hit or miss with him—particularly miss—and he retained his supremacy by threatening to "run in" the first man of the "scrub" nine who kicked. Fisher did well in a fashion long out of date. Fisher, however, knows the game, but the hair is thin on top of his head, and he desires to preserve what is left, and as a consequence the women won.

The local nine has not been mentioned for the reason that even had the members composing it been capable of playing ball, they didn't try to.

The official scorer threw up the sponge at the end of the second round, and the card kept by the "Record-Union" reporter shows that ten innings were played (probably an excusable error), but it gives no idea as to the number of runs made, or who made them. A small boy who was watching the features of the game, instead of the women in bloomers, declared that the score stood 16 to 9 in favor of the beauteous Amazons, and as those figures look as well as any others, they go.

ALASKAN NOVELTIES.

They Were Brought Here by a Sacramentan Just Returned.

M. C. Glenn of this city arrived on Saturday, direct from the Alaskan gold fields—one of the very few passengers on the steamer Excelsior which reached San Francisco on Thursday morning from St. Michael, bringing with him rare natural curiosities from the whaler's cruises in the Arctic Ocean.

Among them are miniature sealskin shirts ("parkies"), worn by the Eskimoes in the frigid cold of the Sierra Nevada and seas; novel shaped ivory inlaid (made by the natives) of bears, Esquimaux, dogs, seals, walrus tusks and teeth, kyacks or walrus and seal-skin boats, native women's moccasins and water boots.

The first edition of a newspaper, published in that part of the Arctic region, Prince William's Sound, was gotten up and printed by the natives, containing the news of McKinley's election and the latest mining intelligence from the Klondike.

Mr. Glenn gathered and pressed many beautiful Alaskan wild flowers—violets, ferns and many-colored leaves and mosses used for medicinal purposes by the Indians on the sea coast of Unalaska, and lovely ferns of delicate tints, pansies, blood-red shrub leaves, purple mountain grass and marigolds similar to those of the Sierra Nevada, grow on the shores of the Yukon River. They have only about three months to grow.

At Holy Cross Mission, he says, are raised all kinds of vegetables, some of the turnips weighing a pound or more each.

At Unalaska the mercury never sinks to zero, and there are twenty fathoms of water close to the wharves. The N. A. T. Company is building two modern and one iron-keeled steamers for service on the Yukon River.

The roots of the plants that grow in the frozen ground only a foot and a half which accounts for their wonderfully small size and dwarf-like appearance. No provisions since last August 18th have been received at the Yukon River route at Dawson City.

The Indians are honest, and some mean whites most despicably endeavor to rob them of their small savings.

St. Michael will be a very desolate place this winter, and many are quartered there in tents, having been unable to reach the Klondike. None of the gold seekers who started from the East all elsewhere since July 25th last have reached Dawson City by river, but are stranded between Fort Yukon and St. Michael, and are abundantly supplied with provisions.

The gold belt is estimated to be 900 miles long and 200 miles in width, lies along the Yukon River and extends to the northwest extension of the Coast Range and Sierra Nevada.

ROBBED IN A SALOON.

The Story Told by Peter Medley of Shingle Springs.

Peter Medley is a good-natured, generous, easy-going miner man who has worked long and faithfully at the Boulder Mine, about eight miles from Shingle Springs, El Dorado County.

He is also unsophisticated and inclined to verbiage when he gets out of his own world.

Peter came to Sacramento on Saturday night, and therein he erred. He turned up at the police station about noon yesterday and told his story, substantially as follows:

He had just out to do lower L street, he said, and returned to the saloon at No. 130 on that thoroughfare. He invited the bartender to imbibe, and that individual imbibed. At second drink-time a number of voters had assembled, and everybody imbibed at Peter's expense, and repeated the performance just to show there was no ill will.

Then one of the voters, Peters asserts, "struck" him for money with which to get something to eat, and got it. Then another and another grew hungry, until most of the assemblage had signified their desire to eat on the "cash" tap at Dorado County, and he "came up" at each and every call.

Soon after Peter visited the rear of the building, when two of the gang followed him, and one of them said: "You gave those other fellows something to eat on, and I want to eat, too."

Peter Medley fished up fifty cents for the healthy beggar, and while he was doing so the second man stepped up behind and threw his arm around Peter's neck, while his companion deftly abstracted $25 in coin of the realm from Peter's trousers pocket.

Officer Harlow accompanied Medley back to the scene of action, but the robbers had fled. The bartender recognized Medley as having been there, but claimed to know nothing about the robbery. The robbers are still at large.

MEXICO'S KLONDIKE. A dispatch from Nogales, on the boundary line between Arizona and Mexico states that W. P. Harlow, of that city, Captain T. C. Cox, a mining expert from California; W. E. Pomeroy of Phoenix and R. J. Hartman, an attorney of Prescott, have just returned from a visit to the Bonancita placer mining region in the country ceded by the Yaqui Indians to the United States by treaty with the Mexican Government.

They assert that none of the accounts of that region which have heretofore gone out half described what is to be found in the Bonancita Valley. The ground, they say, is pay dirt from two to three feet in depth from eighteen inches to forty feet, and wherever bedrock is reached is very rich. In several places a shovelful of earth taken from the bedrock and carefully washed yielded nearly three dollars in coarse gold, many of the pieces being as large as buckshot.

ANNIVERSARY REUNION OF AMERICAN GRANGE ON FRIDAY.

American River Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, held its regular anniversary meeting on Friday, to which all the other Granges in the county had been invited, and all accepted, judging from the large attendance.

EVERYONE WAS IN THE BEST OF SPIRITS, AS IS USUALLY THE CASE AT THESE GATHERINGS, AND AS THIS HAS BEEN A FAIRLY PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR THE AVERAGE FARMER, THE ATMOSPHERE IN THE VICINITY OF HANGTOWN CROSSING WAS A VERY CONGENIAL TEMPERAMENT ON FRIDAY.

A closed meeting was held in the forenoon, and at 12 o'clock the doors of the banquet room were thrown open. The tables were a sight to behold, laden as they were with the choicest viands from the kitchens of the best households in the State, and it is needless to say that all "fell to" with a will, for inside of an hour the tables looked as if they had been struck by a Kansas zephyr.

At 2:30 o'clock an open meeting was held, and the worthy Master, Jos. D. Cornell, in a few well-chosen remarks welcomed those present. He reviewed the history of American River Grange and the struggle its members had to build their hall. He then introduced the speaker of the day, Past State Master Daniel Flint, who delivered an able address. He congratulated all patrons for what had been accomplished by the grange, and advised them as to the course to pursue to accomplish more in the future.

Several persons made speeches during the afternoon, which were interspersed with musical selections and recitations. A number deserving of special mention was a whistling solo by Miss Bernice Greene of Courtland, which was received with rounds of applause and was given a hearty encore.

The festivities concluded with a ball in the evening, which was largely attended, and greatly enjoyed by all.

THE INSTITUTE BAND. The Institute Band of the Brothers' College will give a concert at Weinstein, Lubin & Co.'s, beginning at 7:30 o'clock this evening. The young men will render a choice programme of music and no doubt about their selves with great credit. They will be under the leadership of C. A. Neale, their instructor.
