

THE CYCLER'S COLUMN.

CHAINLESS WHEELS AND GEAR CASE NEWS.

To Clean a Wheel—Ornamentation—A New Lamp—More Novelties—An Old Pump, Etc.

The C. A. C. C. has done well in sustaining the judgment putting Kraft into the professional class. He openly violated the law governing amateurs. He is to be exempted from its penalties, better burn the code of laws and let the order be "havoc and every one for himself."

Among the latest novelties in Paris are handle-bars covered with pliskin and bound with silver gilt. Attached to a pliskin bag is a chain of which is inserted a small watch.

A new cycle tire made of extremely fine steel has recently been patented.

A pump which is attracting the attention of the bicycle trade is fitted with the usual cylinder, to which is attached a crosspiece of metal for a distance of one foot. Instead of a piston-rod there is a thong of leather fitted with a crosspiece for the hand. Behind the plunger is a spring, which forces it back into place after it has done its work.

Experts who claim to be well informed in such matters say that excessive ornamentation of bicycle frames will not be general for next season. They say that scrollwork and an artistic blending of colors has had its day and solid colors will be the vogue. Black enameling will always be popular, and effective enameling in Brewster Green and in browns will be seen.

This is the season of the year when many riders are giving much thought to how to preserve their wheels in good condition during the winter. He who rides his wheel during the pleasant weather of the winter has no such trouble. He knows that if he rides his bicycle whenever the weather will permit he will keep the tires inflated and that his wheel as a whole will get sufficient attention to keep it in good condition all through the cold spell. It is better for the wheel to be in use than to store it away under the most favorable circumstances.

A Brooklyn man has invented a lamp for which he claims a detachable vulcanizing device. The lamp is to be carried on the machine like any other lamp, and the detachment goes, when not in use, in the tool bag. It is said that the lamp is one with a chimney, which automatically turns away from the wind and so avoids smoking.

One of the questions that agitate the wheel-woman's mind is whether to wear high-laced boots or gaiters and shoes, so it follows that both will be worn this winter. High-laced boots, the uppers made of soft leather that harmonizes in color with the costume, are neat and stylish, but in cold weather there is nothing more comforting than a warm pair of gaiters. Riders seem, however, to overlook the importance of wearing broad, comfortable shoes instead of the narrow pointed ones.

The average rider is watching with interest the innovations in cycle mechanism as they are announced for the coming season. The chainless wheel created wonderful attention and attracted spectators by the hundreds. Another announcement that another company had invented a chain and sprocket

"For fifteen years my daughter suffered terribly with inherited Eczema. She received the best medical attention, was given many patent medicines, and used various external applications, but they had no effect whatever. S. S. S. was finally given, and it promptly reached the seat of the disease, so that she is cured sound and well, her skin is perfectly clear and pure, and she has been saved from what threatened to blight her life forever." E. D. Jenkins, Lithonia, Ga.

S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and is the only cure for deep seated blood diseases.

which was impervious to dirt, sand and water, was hailed with delight by those who for the present are in favor of the chain-driving wheel. Another idea comes from Poland. One maker will fit his rear wheel with two sprockets, so that the rider can have a change of gear by simply turning around his rear wheel. There is also a corrugated rear adjustment permitting of the taking up of any looseness of the chain.

New York Tribune: The prediction is made that the manufacturers will take a livelier personal interest in the racing situation next year than was the case in 1897. So many new ideas in mechanism and chain and chainless driving power have been introduced that the hiring of professional drivers is giving illustration to the gearing advantages of wheels on the racetrack may be more general. The rather lukewarm manner in which the manufacturers, as a whole, have supported the racing men this year has been particularly hard on the usually sleek and well-to-do riders. The riders are looking forward to offers of fat salaries from the makers next year, but whether they will get them or not remains to be seen. The Southern circuit has not proved as remunerative as was expected, and it is now said that most of the professionals will return to the North and take part in the indoor tournaments which are being arranged for in this city, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston.

New York Tribune: A man who was caught in the rain in Central Park a few days ago and rode home on a bicycle through the mud and slush of the city streets at so rapid a rate of speed that the muddy water was flung up his back as high as his collar, was complaining afterward about the time he had to take in cleaning his bicycle. "It took me forty minutes to get the mud off," he said, "and the only way I could get the machine clean was to wash it." That was not a wise thing to do. Wet mud is hard to remove from enamel, if not from nickel; dry mud comes off easily. When a wheel has been ridden through mud and rain and the mud is allowed to dry, the process of cleaning is undertaken. At least this is true as to the enamelled parts. The nicked parts ought to be wiped dry at once, for if moisture is allowed to remain on them rust is likely to follow. It is well, though, to use a very clean and fine brush to get rid of dust; if mud is brushed off the enamel will almost surely be scratched. For removing dust there is nothing better than a feather duster.

A member of the National Cycle Board of Trade estimates that fully 20 per cent of the makers in the United States will market a chainless wheel of some kind in 1898. A prominent Massachusetts maker has purchased the entire rights in a new chainless having three sprockets engaging by means of spur teeth.

A Western maker has so much confidence in his judgment of what the future holds in store that he announces a wheel having a permanent gear case built with the machine so as to be an integral part of it. He claims that any one who wears a chainless bicycle the blessings of a clean chain never discards a gear case after trying one. As a pointer for those who design to get in the protected gear swim, by adopting the gear case fashion and buying one to fit their old wheels, it should be noted that certain clearances between the frame and the running parts are necessary. From the inner side of the crank to the center of the sprocket, there must be a half-inch of room. Between the center of the rear sprocket and the proximate side of the spoke flange there must be another half-inch space, and the same distance between the center of the rear sprocket and the nearest point on the frame. The back stays and rear forks must afford this same clearance both forward and upward from the rear axle for a distance of two and three inches. Sprocket nuts and revolving parts also must clear the frame by one-eighth inch. Nearly all 1898 models will be built with abundant clearance in these respects, and most of the old wheels can be made to conform to the requirements, but it is another matter in paying attention to details of this kind, and having a gear case correctly fitted in the first place, riders will avoid much trouble. A proper article in the gear case line equipped with modern waterproof joints of rubber, will exclude dust and foreign substances absolutely, do away with chain cleaning, and should truly add to the pleasure of riding.

Supreme Court Decisions. SYLLABI. (S. F., No. 749—In Bank—Filed January 6, 1898.) Thompson vs. Superior Court. Order setting aside sale of assignee in insolvency annulled. Certiorari. No man may be divested of his property, or of his right to property, without notice to him, or his legal representative, he is entitled to his notice and hearing, and only after such notice and hearing may the action of the court be upheld. So a drastic modification of an order, vital to the rights of a party, cannot be made without due notice to the party and a hearing, if desired, by him.

Supreme Court Decisions. (S. F., No. 362—In Bank—Filed January 6, 1898.) W. F. Goad et al., trustees, etc., appellants; Annie A. Montgomery et al., respondents. Affirmed. A will cannot be used as evidence to impeach the decree of distribution. The decree is conclusive, not only as to the persons who have any rights in the estate, but also as to the extent and limitation of their rights. Whether the distribution is to individuals in their own right, or to hold for others under specified trusts, the rights of all parties interested in the estate are determined by the decree, and thereafter it becomes immaterial to consider whether the will has received a proper construction. In the absence of any authority given expressly or by implication in the instrument creating a trust, property which is placed in the hands of a limited time, or until the happening of an event, must be kept by them and delivered in kind to the beneficiaries at the termination of the trust. Under no circumstances can a trustee or guardian of an infant convert the ward's real estate into personalty by a sale without the order or decree or license of a court.

"Manage" an estate implies no authority to part with the entire interest. (S. F., No. 648—Department One—Filed January 8, 1898.) Fletcher R. Ryer, respondent; Paul Oesting et al., appellants. Recovery of instalments due under a contract. Affirmed. A contract to secure a lease for ten years is not performed by the securing of a lease for three years, but if the party desirous of securing the lease accepts the lease for three years as performance of the contract to secure the longer lease, and pays a portion of the consideration agreed upon for obtaining such lease to the party procuring the same, such acts constitute a modification of the original contract by consent from ten years to three. (L. A., No. 400—In Bank—Filed January 10, 1898.) Samuel W. Livingston, respondent; Frederick Conant, administrator, etc. (substituted for Mary Livingston, deceased), appellant. Action by husband to compel support. In the case provided for in Section 176, C. C., when the husband has no separate property, and there is no community property, and he is unable from infirmity to support himself and has not deserted his wife, the Superior Court has equitable jurisdiction to enforce the obligation of the wife to support the husband out of her separate property, though no divorce is sought by him.

Driving Coyotes to Market. Another curious circumstance was noticed by the officers of two counties adjoining in Central Kansas last winter. The officers of one were paying out money every day for wolf scalps, while the officers of the other were receiving the reward. Each of the hunters was compelled to swear that he had killed the wolf inside the boundaries of the county where the scalp was presented, and there was no reason for doubting the truth of the testimony. But what could be the reason of the disparity in the claims? One day a settler's son was questioned: "Where did you kill this wolf?" "Down near the edge of the county." "Are coyotes very thick there?" "Well, rather, though not so thick as they are farther south." "Over in the other county?" "Yes, there are more there." "But they do not kill any there. Why is it?" "The other county only pays $1 for scalps and this pays $2. So we drive them over the line before we shoot them." The county officers at once readjusted the scale of rewards.—Chicago Times-Herald.
