and Tartar" and "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief." Incidentally C. L. More sang "The Heart Bowed Down" with much effectiveness. Alex. Byrd, on a basis of good quality and much volume of tone, gave "The Armorer's Song." Mme. Jones (Black Patti), in the "Sabre" song in a sextet from "Lucia" and three other selections, deepened the good impression made by her first appearance. She has a voice well adapted to operatic work, one that grows in favor the more it is heard, a strong, rich, aggressive and commanding voice. On the whole the entertainment was fully up to the claims made for it by its management, and gave satisfaction to the audience, as was evinced by much and sincere applause. The company goes from here to the California Theater, San Francisco.

AMUSEMENTS. At the Orpheum to-night and this afternoon the variety presented will be in part new and in part the bill of the last week. This insures an entertainment of the first order, possibly a shade ahead, because of the mixture. Tomorrow night the new bill features a musical comedy, as described in the Music and Drama Department this morning.

Despite the heavy rainstorm yesterday the Orpheum had a packed house at its 2 o'clock matinee. The musical comedy, "The Black Patti," which was invited to the Black Patti company to attend the matinee and the full company was present, sitting together in the orchestra seats. When La Petite Lund came on the stage and was singing "All Coons Look Alike to Me," she realized that she had been invited to the Black Patti troupe, who is the author of the song, took it up to help her out, the whole troupe joining in the chorus and they fairly brought down the house in recognition of their action.

Though a heavy storm prevailed last night there was a fairly large audience at the Metropolitan Theater to see the "Black Patti Troubadours" company. It was an audience that came with full determination to enjoy the features of the bill, and was well warranted for it, and there was ample reason. The troupe is very large, and "lively" does not convey an idea of its vivacity. The opening skit "At Jolly Coney Island," is a gathering of colored people, old and young, out for a good time, and the musical comedy, "The Black Patti," is a capital grotesque negro low comedian, altogether original, in the lead, with Mattie Phillips, a clever singing soubrette, a close second. There are several comely and some pretty young women in this part, who do some clever character work, and notably the Sisters Meredith and Misses Carter and Mackay as a quartet of Japanese maidens. The chorus sings with great animation, and with a good deal of ability. One sextet of men is especially good, giving some glees with excellent effect and with certain touches of applause. There was wing and back dancing without limit, and, on the whole, the first part proved to be the liveliest kind of a revel, closing with the introduction of a very strong and sweet vocal soprano leading a melodious chorus in an old-time ballad. There was keen satire, by the way, in the introduction of a modern woman newspaper reporter on a sensational interviewing expedition for a yellow journal of the day. In the olio still another very good feature was recalled with its glees and songs. The Meredith Sisters, a very clever singing soubrette, appeared in song and dance, and two unnamed colored acrobats did tumbling and song and dance acts. Mme. Sisseretta Jones (Black Patti) sang an aria from "The Enchantress" and on a recent tour of the city she sang "The Old Folks at Home." She is a woman of pleasing stage presence and graceful bearing. She has a true high-soprano of broad register, resonant, strong and excellently managed. It has marked dramatic expression and at command is invested with deep feeling. It is a well cultivated voice and her method is good. Her enunciation is worthy of all praise—a virtue so often absent in singers in all else artistic. She created an exceedingly favorable impression, and was repeated with a cheering and hearty approval by the audience. A cake walk scene followed, prefaced by an intelligent explanation of the history and purpose of the cake walk entertainment. Seven couples took part and made the act—which is really a dance—a very original and entertaining one. There was not one of the fourteen however who even approached a similar exhibition by a single couple recently at the Orpheum. Ernest Hogan, comedian, held the stage and kept the audience in a roar of laughter a long time. He is decidedly an original wit and imitator, one of the most finished colored singing comedians we can recall having seen. The entertainment closed with the Black Patti in a bouquet of operatic selections, supported by a chorus and principals in costume, including songs from "Cavalcade," "Grand Duchess," "Bohemian Girl," "Lucia," "Tar

SOME HOPE FOR CREDITORS. A PLAN SUBMITTED TO UNION B. AND L. SHAREHOLDERS.

It is Claimed That It Would Result in All of Them Being Paid in Full.

The outlook for the creditors of the Union Building and Loan Association appears not to be as dark as was promised a few days ago. The plan proposed by L. E. Devlin, a member of the board of directors, and in charge of the meeting of shareholders on Thursday night is meeting with the approval of the larger creditors, and it is believed that all will accept it as the best thing that can be done.

State Building and Loan Commission. The plan has been up from San Francisco in consultation with the shareholders' committee and the leading creditors of the association, and all have approved of the plan suggested by Mr. Devlin.

Briefly stated, it is for all the creditors to assign their claims to the California State Bank, which is interested largely, the bank to act as trustee for all; that the association assign all of its assets within ninety days, including mortgages; that the latter class of securities be taken up by the banks of other loan associations; that the banks realize on the securities of the association held by them for loans. It is believed that by this plan those creditors who hold the association's notes in lieu of money on matured stock will be paid in full.

The State Building and Loan Commission's plan is to have the stockholders form a corporation to handle the property for the benefit of all creditors, and to dispose of it to the best advantage, instead of having the associations take up the property and dispose of it as they see fit. There would be little or no expense entailed by forming a corporation for the purpose of liquidation, and of every dollar realized each shareholder would receive his or her share. Eventually the property would be disposed of, and in the event of business and industrial improvement the sales might realize more than enough to pay every claim in full.

Advertisement for John Breuner's furniture, featuring a chair and the text "I've been all over town" and "Seen all the different offerings at the other stores and here I am back again for that bedroom set."

"I've been all over town" "Seen all the different offerings at the other stores and here I am back again for that bedroom set." An expression heard almost every day at Breuner's. The articles mentioned are not always bedroom sets—sometimes it's carpets, sometimes it's tableware and sometimes it's stoves.

This simply goes to show that comparison of goods and prices generally brings folks to Breuner's.
