

SPAIN WAS ON THE WARPATH

TOOK ARMED POSSESSION OF THE FAMILY CASTLE.

Drove Out His Father, Beat His Old Mother, Fired a Shot, and Then Flew.

About 7:30 o'clock last night a telephone message received at police headquarters announced that a state of war existed at the Spain residence, 2329 P street.

It was subsequently learned that Frank Spain, Pat's eldest son, had taken possession, armed with a shotgun, and after a valiant struggle had succeeded in evicting his mother and his father, and then proceeded to demolish everything in sight.

Young Spain, it is said, abused his old mother shamefully, and struck her a cruel blow on the forehead, which laid open the scalp.

After his parents had been evicted in a manner to suit his taste, the youth fired a shot from his fowling-piece, but whether he intended to "salt" the crowd which had gathered in front of the house, or only to show that he was holding the fort, is not known.

Patrol Driver Fitzgerald, the only available officer when the call was sent in, went to the seat of war. But he was insufficient, for when the patrol wagon rattled up to the Spain fortress, Frank beat a hasty retreat by way of the back door and started for Twenty-fifth street.

When Fitzgerald arrived the blood was streaming down Mrs. Spain's face, and the interior of the house was a wreck. Every window had been smashed to smithereens, but the billiard and his shotgun had disappeared.

Fitzgerald followed with his patrol wagon, and when Twenty-fifth and O streets was reached he saw the brave youngster in the act of hiding his shotgun under a water-trough, and ten minutes later young Spain's spree had come to an end in the city's bastille.

He had in his pockets fifteen cartridges loaded with heavy shot, and was evidently out gunning for his mother and all. My guest became annoyed and swore "he'd be dogoned if he'd live in such a town." He said that, according to Josh Billings' philosophy, "Some families is poor 'nough to have two dogs, and some families is poor 'nough to have three"—this must be a mighty poor town. I could see by his remarks that he was a cold blooded money changer and a bloated bondholder, with no sympathy for even a dog.

Now just suppose that this anti-dog society, with its anti-dog annex, should be popular and everybody join, it would be a mighty spur to physical activity at times. I think there is nobody that can tell how many faces a good, lively, enterprising dog can look after in a day.

On Monday evening Miss Emille Connelly entertained a few friends in honor of Frank J. Atkinson, who has been enrolled among the volunteers of Company E. The interior of the house was elaborately decorated with flags and bunting and an abundance of red and white roses. During the evening Miss Sadie Winn presented Mr. Atkinson with a tin breastplate, supposed to be proof against Spanish bullets.

Jesse Anderson read a humorous poem composed for the occasion by T. G. Spangler, and presented Mr. Atkinson with a copy, cleverly illustrated with pen-and-ink sketches by Mr. McDonald of Oakland.

Miss Stella Bowles of Woodland is visiting the city. H. Booth and Mrs. C. M. Booth of Los Angeles are here on a visit. H. McMurchy of Syracuse, N. Y., a well-known sportsman, is in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Richardson of Los Angeles are at the Golden Eagle. Mrs. J. Nealon and Miss Nealon of San Francisco are registered at the Golden Eagle.

Mrs. Wm. H. Mills of San Francisco paid a short visit to friends in Sacramento yesterday.

Rupture in L-street Society. Lou Morris yesterday lodged a complaint of disturbing the peace against Sarah Nathan. The complainant alleges that Sarah has been saying a number of uncomplimentary things about both the women are colored, and both have solid reputations, having on many occasions been the center of attraction at Police Court sessions.

Not a Relative. State Treasurer W. S. Green says it was error to say that Mr. Hardin, in his office, is a relative of his. He declares that they trace no kinship this side of William the Conqueror. The new Treasurer wants the false impression to the contrary removed.

The Snake and the Bird. A few days ago a house-nake over three feet in length attacked and killed a canary-bird hanging in its cage at Ferdinand Kohler's residence, 2026 J street. The snake scaled the side of the house, and killed and swallowed the bird before it was discovered.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

All communications must be accompanied by the name of the writer, not for publication unless so desired, but as a guarantee of good faith.—Eds.

A Society to Discourage the Keeping of Dogs. Sacramento, April 26, 1898. Eds. "Record-Union": I observed in your columns of a recent date that a scheme is being worked up, no doubt by some ardent reformer, who is starting a society intended to do away with the total abstinence annex. Such a scheme would be a bad thing just at this time.

In the first place you can't organize any kind of a society without offices to be filled by disinterested philanthropists. What would you do with the county city government but without offices for our patriotic citizens to hold?

What would become of the lively campaign every two years, with all the fretting of the ambient air by the candidates? And who would pay for all the oration and flambeau and display and "blast of trumpet, clang of drum, that makes the voter's valor come," if there were no offices to fill?

To construct a society without offices would be as uphill work as to sail off to the north pole in a hand basket, which, as a success, seems now likely to be a failure.

But why should we suppress the dog? Here in Sacramento we have not more than two dogs to every individual of the population. How could we spare any of them? A few months ago I was driving about showing a man from Boston our beautiful city. On three occasions during a three hours' drive we were set upon by gangs of howling, growling, snarling curs. "Fray, Blanche and Sweetheart, little dogs and all." My guest became annoyed and swore "he'd be dogoned if he'd live in such a town."

He said that, according to Josh Billings' philosophy, "Some families is poor 'nough to have two dogs, and some families is poor 'nough to have three"—this must be a mighty poor town. I could see by his remarks that he was a cold blooded money changer and a bloated bondholder, with no sympathy for even a dog.

Now just suppose that this anti-dog society, with its anti-dog annex, should be popular and everybody join, it would be a mighty spur to physical activity at times. I think there is nobody that can tell how many faces a good, lively, enterprising dog can look after in a day.
