

"RECORD-UNION" HISTORY OF THE WAR.

The great event of the week in the Spanish-American war—the greatest since the declaration of war—was the signing of the protocol for peace on Friday afternoon, M. Cambon, the French Ambassador, acting for Spain, and Secretary of State Day for the United States.

Before discussing the culminating event of the week further it is to the purpose to give a succinct summary of the events of major importance that occurred during the week.

Without exact reference to the logic of the events herein named the occurrences of the week took place in about the following order:

On Monday news was received by press that Spain had formulated her answer to America, and that it had been completed and approved by the Spanish Cabinet. The newspaper forecast accurately surmised that Spain had substantially acceded to the terms laid down by President McKinley in his original proposition.

In spite of the many reports that peace negotiations were progressing favorably, General Miles' campaign in Porto Rico progressed with unabated vigor. On last Sunday a general advance was begun toward San Juan. Generations Broose, marched northward, and Americans seized the custom-house in the village of Pajaro, the Spanish loss being seventeen.

On Wednesday the War Department received reports that the Spanish forces had attacked the Americans stationed between Cavite and Manila in a cowardly way on the night of July 31st. The reports stated that the Americans were repeatedly attacked, but the enemy was repulsed each time and driven back. Fifteen of the American forces were killed, and thirty-four wounded, while the loss of the enemy was very great.

HOBSON IN NEW YORK.

WILD ENTHUSIASM AT THE METROPOLITAN.

The People Cheered the Hero of the Merrimac to the Echo—A Memorable Night.

(Special Correspondence Record-Union.) NEW YORK, August 13.—On Thursday evening the neighborhood of the Metropolitan Opera-house presented a scene of life such as it never saw before in summertime, nor possibly during the winter season of grand opera either. Despite the clouded heavens the atmosphere was heavy with heat and humidity, but somehow the people forgot that they were sweating, and hurrying to the opera-house presented a scene of life such as it never saw before in summertime, nor possibly during the winter season of grand opera either.

THE SANITARIUM.

The Sacramento Sanitarium—What Is a Sanitarium?—Not a Hospital—Its Great Advantages.

A sanitarium is an establishment for treating the sick—the Sacramento Sanitarium or Neagle Medical Institute is a true sanitarium, where every disease under the sun that the human family is heir to, both male and female, is treated and cured by the very best methods.

NOW READ WHAT OTHERS SAY:

L. W. Taylor, the proprietor of the "Pleasant Repose" in Rocklin, Cal., says: "I suffered for many years from rheumatism, catarrh and partial paralysis of the lower limbs. I was treated at the Neagle Medical Institute. I never before had medicine to give me such prompt and rapid relief as I now feel that I am well and, with confidence, recommend all who are afflicted with any of the above ailments to go to that Institute and be cured."

MRS. S. DOWDIN.

"I had been a long sufferer from rheumatism and neuralgia. I have been completely cured at the Neagle Medical Institute. My two sons were also treated and promptly cured at the same Institute. It is with great confidence that we recommend all who are afflicted with any kind of sickness to go there and be treated."

PASTOR M. E. CURCH, Dutch Flat, California.

"I have been successfully treated for catarrh, neuritis, rheumatism and malaria at the NEAGLE MEDICAL INSTITUTE. We recommend all who are afflicted with any of the above ailments to go there and be cured."

HUGH J. MORGAN.

"NERVOUS DISORDER and NERVOUS PROSTRATION made a specialty. Consultation, either at the Institute or by mail, FREE, and STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. For further particulars call in person or write to the NEAGLE MEDICAL INSTITUTE OF PHYSICIANS and SURGEONS, located permanently at 724 1/2 K STREET, Sacramento."

solder, the blue cap of the "jackie" or the shoulder straps of an officer, a new feature for an "opera crowd." However, as may have been surmised, it was not an opera crowd, and the signs near the front entrance gave the clue to their true character. They read "Benefit for the relief of the needy families of soldiers and sailors; Lieut. R. P. Hobson to preside" etc.

The proceedings were scheduled to commence at 8 o'clock, but the participants being late in arriving, the people found time to examine their surroundings. The band (Fanchulli's Seventy-first Regiment) flared into their seats and soon were beguiling the waiting hours with martial airs and battle fanfares. One of the most beautiful boxes on the lower tier was decorated with colors caught up with a shield, and this everybody rightly guessed would be occupied by the whom a little later was enthusiastically cheered as "Mrs. Hobson," the proudest mother on earth.

When General Woodford entered, the first of the cheering occurred and from then on anticipation was intense. Everybody was craning their necks and opera glasses were focussed on the wings, their owners eager to obtain the first glimpse of the hero of the Merrimac. The young Lieutenant Woodford was the first to appear, and he was greeted with a shout of approval. He was dressed in a uniform which was known to all, and much wonder was expressed as to his ability to discharge his temporary duties in a graceful manner. No naval officer likes that sort of thing, and to Hobson's nature it must have been particularly painful.

The Lieutenant arrived about half an hour late. He entered in company with Major Byrne, President of the Relief Society, and ex-Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo. A roar of greeting immediately went up from those who could see him and from those who could not. The latter, however, had their best eyes to the stage, but in vain. They switched off from the "Star Spangled Banner" to "Dixie," and then in despair many musicians arose and wildly waved their instruments above their heads in enthusiasm. The object of it all passed for a moment as though it were a play, and contrary to expectations, he didn't falter. He glanced for a brief moment at the box where his mother sat, smiled and then slowly advanced to the front of the stage where he sat down.

After the waves of sound had been rolling from one end of the house to the other, the Lieutenant, Major Byrne, and ex-Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo, announced the purpose of the meeting and started to introduce Lieutenant Hobson. Instantly another uproar ascended. People seemed to lose their heads completely, flags and hats were cast about, and every body made as much noise as possible, with lungs, feet and hands. Lieutenant Hobson took a few steps forward and to the right in the direction of the box in which his mother sat, and then with shoulders thrown back and eyes cast straight ahead, he stood in something of the position of the soldier. He kept his posture until the applause subsided somewhat, then his lips were seen to move and utter silence was secured instantly.

To the relief of all, their hero spoke in a clear strong voice and without the slightest trace of embarrassment. He said: "Won't you please give me 'Yankee Doodle'?" The band responded at once, and when they had finished Hobson started to speak. What he said could be heard all over the great building, but not another sound interfered. The speech lasted half an hour probably, and several times pandemonium broke loose during that time. He devoted his remarks almost entirely to the heroic devotion of the sailor of the United States Navy to duty, and relating several incidents illustrative of his subject, finally, as a splendid denouement, recited the tale of the "Merrimac." To hear this bit of history of international fame from the lips of the principal actor in it was a novel treat, and his audience listened with breathless interest. When he told how the sailor Charette replied to the question of the Spanish Major that people again jumped to their feet with a vain attempt to outcheer former exploits in the way of applauding. It was a difficult position to be placed in, that of recting a tale of heroism in which the speaker was the principal actor, especially difficult for one of Hobson's mold, yet he managed it in a way that would have done credit to a trained orator. He never said "we," but always "those men."

"I will not give any detailed account of the talk as it appeared in full in the New York papers, of the following morning, and, moreover, the most notable feature of the whole event was the character of the reception accorded the hero in his metropolis.

Ex-Secretary McAdoo followed with a spirited and highly patriotic speech in which he eulogized in a few pithy paragraphs the various names made famous by the war, each being greeted by a thunder of cheers from his audience. When the name of the President of the United States was mentioned, white-headed old General Woodford rose from his seat upon the stage, waved a small flag enthusiastically above his head and led the cheering. Even the Spanish Admiral Cervera, who treated the prisoner of the Merrimac with such courtesy, received a generous share of the applause.
