

FIELD FLOWERS.

Progress of the Work on the Eugene Field Monument.

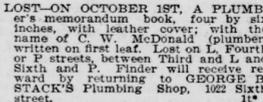

The committee organized for building a monument to Eugene Field, the poet laureate of childhood, is composed of the authors and proprietors of each of Chicago's daily papers. A large number of the leading citizens of the country suggested that it would also be well at the same time to show the love of all men for Eugene Field and his works by providing in a measure for his family. An honorary membership was then proposed to the committee, a fund comprised of prominent men and women all over the country, and it was then decided to divide the fund created equally between the family of the late Eugene Field and the fund for the building of a monument to the memory of the beloved poet of childhood. It was the first intention to merely publish a beautiful four-page certificate of a subscription of $1 to the fund. Meville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, desiring to secure the co-operation of about four or five of America's great writers, invited to thirty-two of the greatest artists to secure their assistance, thinking that out of his number possibly four could be found who would be able to find time to comply, knowing that illustrations of such ability would bring their time engaged through the next eight months ahead. To the surprise of the committee the response from the artists was immediate and unanimous. Each one in writing spoke of the esteem, love and friendship felt of assisting in a testimonial to his worth. The committee, instead of having a few drawings, fine copies, a certificate, found themselves with $15,000 worth of drawings, each one illustrating some verse or poem of the poet.

It was then found necessary to increase the souvenir to a cloth-bound (white or apple-green basket buckram cloth), die-stamped page, book, which, while typographically perfect, and containing some of the brightest gems of Eugene Field, is probably the greatest medley of modern art appearing in any one publication, and the committee was enabled by this means to issue at a profit to the fund for $1 a book that $7 would not have paid for under other circumstances. The original drawings are now being exhibited in the different large cities, and are attracting universal attention. There should have been raised $4,000 to $6,000, which it is hoped and believed will be done by February, as the result of this additional advertising being done by the great newspapers and magazines all over the country, who have made it a personal matter to see to it that a portion of their valuable space is devoted to mentioning this book, as their part of the contribution to the fund, and in this way giving many times the actual value of the space in bringing the cause before the public. These souvenir books are now ready for distribution. Subscriptions as low as a dollar will be received, but you are not limited to any amount. For each dollar subscribed to this fund there will be issued a copy of "Field Flowers" as a souvenir certificate of subscription. The book may also be had at book stores, price $1, or may be obtained direct (by enclosing 10 cents additional for postage) at the following address: The Eugene Field Monument Souvenir Fund, 180 Monroe street, Chicago.
