JUSTICE IN FRANCE.

"The sense of justice is blunted in France," says a San Francisco contemporary. It is worse than blunted. It is small, a bludgeon and a travesty on the word justice.

Yet the French call that justice. On the stage it would be denominated burlesque or the raw creation of a brutal fancy. But this is the least of the evils in the French system.

Think of an army officer in this land entering a court of justice for a similar purpose. Think of a Cabinet of the President of the United States being driven to resignation because a civil court had been asked to review a criminal case in which it was charged in justice had been done.

Yet there were 150 members in the Chamber who expressed themselves boldly that the Government should uphold the honor of the army by ending "a campaign of insult against it"—for such the army holds the inquiries into the Dreyfus case to be.

When the vote of want of confidence was taken it was in the midst of the most disgraceful tumult, and after it was had a howling mob of thousands assembled in front of the Chamber hall and sought to intimidate the members by the coarsest abuse, the mob being anti-Dreyfus and haters of the Semite.

The Paris mob has Dreyfus convicted in its judgment, and it will not tolerate any other pronouncement. If Dreyfus is brought back to Paris we may expect to hear of mobs, and riots and of assaults upon his prison.

But when the second trial of Dreyfus comes on, there will be trouble enough in Paris. True, the confessions of Henry have modified the judgment of the better class of citizens, but the mob is as hostile as ever, and it is improbable that it will be content with anything short of the absolute subversion of justice at the second court-martial.

THE CASE OF FREDERIC.

Harold Frederic, the well-known correspondent, novelist and all around writer, who died in England not long ago, expired while under treatment by Christian Scientists.

No one ever before this day has looked upon the ox as a real factor in economy. But down in the cotton fields of the South the thrifty landlord has discovered the ox to be his best aid.

If the defendants are proceeded against the case will excite intense interest in the world over. Under English law the fact that the sick man desired to be treated as he was makes no difference, since the English courts hold that one has not the right to squander his life or to act in a suicidal manner.

OF INTEREST TO CYCLISTS.

A PHYSICIAN WHO BELIEVES IN CYCLING FOR WOMEN.

The Question of Various Exercises—Horseback Riding—Walking—How to Ride.

The following article is from the pen of Mrs. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, M. D. She is President of the staff of the National Temperance Hospital, Professor of Obstetrics Northwestern University Woman's Medical School, lecturer in the Illinois Training School for Nurses, and is physician in charge at the Chicago Woman's Hospital, consulting physician of the Erring Women's Refuge, attending physician of Thompson Hospital, President of the Chicago Maternity Hospital, member of the International Association of Obstetrics and Gynecology, A. L. G. M.

We give up the cyclist department to the paper this week because of the value of the suggestions in it. I am a convert; no prejudice could have been stronger than was mine against bicycling for women.

The ideal exercise is one which brings into play all the important muscles of the body. Why is it important or necessary that muscles should be made to contract? It is the function of muscle to contract—the muscular is the most contractile of all the tissues of the body—and if this function is not performed frequently and regularly the power is lost or enfeebled.

To a certain extent the lay does that now by demanding the licensing of physicians, and refusing to those who do not produce evidences of skill in certain directions the privilege of prescribing treatment for the sick.

Suppose one's family treats him when he is ill, and does so with perfect good faith, holding the call of a physician to be unnecessary, and that home treatment is all that is needed, and still the patient dies. To what degree of responsibility is the family to be held?

Nevertheless we see a most intricate and interesting involvement of reasoning in such a case as that of Frederic's. Here the man believed in Christian Science. He requested its application to his case. But after he had become so low as to be incapable of expressing a wish soundly as to his own case, his friends were refused access to him to ascertain his true condition, and refusal to permit regular physicians to visit him and attempt to save him was persisted in, and therein resides the liability which it is proposed to criminally apply to the healers who had Frederic's sickness in hand.

There was a case bearing some resemblance to Frederic's, in a southern county of this State a few years ago. But there the victim of prayer and faith was an infant, and its Christian Science healer was its father. The child could express no desire and exercise no judgment in the matter. It is not now recalled what was done with the usual remedies for diphtheria to be used in the case of his infant child; but we remember that public opinion condemned the parents without measure.

It is not a closed question whether one can be held responsible for failure or refusal to employ a physician where death results in consequence of failure to take such precaution. In England it would seem to be closed and settled, for there, no matter how poor the party is, means are provided by the community for treatment being given to the sick person.

Probably among all these horseback riders, both for their own good and for the good of their work. Leaving the occupations, or manual labor as all inadequate to develop a perfect muscular system, let us review some of the exercises that are sought for health or amusement, or both.

No class of people is in greater need of the benefits of the bicycle than is the laboring class. Beside the harmonious muscular development, it brings something equally precious, viz: Diversion, pleasure, of whose value I shall speak later. Instead, then, of converting all the bicycle riders into laborers—undesirable as they are, especially if they should convert all laborers into bicycle riders, both for their own good and for the good of their work.

For an even muscular development rowing and swimming are much nearer the ideal exercise than is horseback riding. But the trouble with all these fine things is they are exclusive. Comparatively few can enjoy such blessings as wood-chopping, riding, rowing and swimming—trees, horses, lakes and rivers do not grow in every man's back yard, to say nothing of our tenth story flats. The same is true of the various games, golf, tennis, football, etc.—great space of ground is needed and oceans of time—while in cycling one takes to the highway, free to all, and an hour's time has passed from the dim and dirt of the city into a new, clean

THE ILLS OF WOMEN

And How Mrs. Pinkham Helps Overcome Them.

Mrs. MARY BOLLINGER, 1101 Marianna St., Chicago, Ill., to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I have been troubled for the past two years with falling of the womb, leucorrhoea, pains over my body, sick headaches, backache, nervousness and weakness. I tried doctors and various remedies without relief. After taking two bottles of your Vegetable Compound, the relief I obtained was truly wonderful. I have now taken several more bottles of your famous medicine, and can say that I am entirely cured."

"For a long time I suffered with chronic inflammation of the womb, pain in abdomen and bearing-down feeling. Was very nervous at times, and so weak I was hardly able to do anything. Was subject to headaches, also troubled with leucorrhoea. After doctoring for many months with different physicians, and getting no relief, I had given up all hope of being well again when I read of the great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing. I decided immediately to give it a trial. The result was simply past belief. After taking four bottles of Vegetable Compound, and using three packages of Sanative Wash I can say I feel like a new woman. I deem it my duty to announce the fact to my fellow sufferers that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable remedies have entirely cured me of all my pains and suffering. I have her alone to thank for my recovery, for which I am grateful. May heaven bless her for the good work she is doing for our sex."

Another essential, especially for women, is an appropriate dress, and there is no law against a gentleman also being appropriately dressed. I never think of a woman who is necessary that a man should wear the garb of a circus clown in order to ride a wheel. In the past year or two the women have come nobly to the rescue in the matter of genteel dress. The short hair, the bloomer, and the chewing gum have well disappeared. The plain cloth, medium length, medium width gown is no hindrance, and has the further advantage and economy of being a good rainy-day gown for walking.

Another essential is to learn how to ride. Many are riding without this knowledge. There are few mechanical principles to be observed. One is to have the gearing so arranged as to have the pedal on a level with the foot when the foot is extended. Another is to have the saddle so placed as to bring the weight of the body directly over the wheel when the latter is at its lowest point.

Finally, the rider should sit, as in a chair, upon the bones or tuberosities of the pelvis, and should, on no account, allow the weight of the body to rest upon the tissues situated between these bony prominences. Indeed, the danger of serious injury resulting from the rider's weight resting on the tissues of the buttocks, instead of on the bones, is so great that it is always wise to refer the saddle question to a competent physician.

Beside the very important question of saddle is that of the wheel itself. It must be thoroughly well made, of the best material, and it must not be too light. Too light a wheel gains no momentum to speak of, while the jarring and vibrations are very disagreeable, if not injurious. There must be a certain weight and solidity and economy of money and time permits the rider to avail himself of new scenes and places, giving pleasurable sensations, the absence of which in exercise for the sake of health alone is the reason why health seldom responds to the call of such perfunctory exercise. The heart is not in it.
