

STATE TREASURER'S REPORT

A SYSTEM OF DEPOSITORIES ADVOCATED.

Mr. Green Thinks Public Money Should Not Be Hoarded as Junk.

State Treasurer W. S. Green has filed with the Governor his biennial report, which is as follows: I feel that I would not do my whole duty if I did not call attention to the fact that California is still following the method of collecting money semi-annually from the people and storing it up as old junk, when the object and only object of money is circulation. We are hoarding up money for the transportation of money to and from the treasury, which is a most useless proceeding.

When I took charge of this office in the latter part of April last—just before another taxpaying time—I after $2,907,251.00 in the vault, and after the June settlements there was $4,088,418.11 on hand, and I found that the monthly balances for the fiscal year ending June 30th last averaged $3,338,722.55. When I considered these figures, together with the large amounts continually in the county treasuries, I could not help thinking that it was a condition which called for a remedy, and I set about maturing a plan that would make the people perfectly safe, put the money in circulation, and make it a source of revenue to the State.

Taking up the matter of State money first—I would advertise, asking banks to reply, stating how much money each bidder would handle and how much interest would be paid on daily balances, for the amount proposed to be taken. A minimum should be fixed, say, at 2 1/2 per cent. In considering bids preference should be given to localities in which are located State institutions so as to avoid transportation, and where bids are the same a proper disposition of the money between bidders should be made and locality should also be considered.

Each depository should be required to deposit bonds of the United States, this State or some county or municipality in the State to the maximum amount of the money deposited with the depository, as security that the checks will be paid when presented. The Controller should draw his warrant on the Treasurer as at present, and the latter draw his check on the proper depository, keeping in view as nearly as possible an equal distribution of the amount drawn.

To make sure the bonds drawn to Government bonds the amount of taxes paid on bonds deposited should be deducted from the interest to be paid. A board of deposits should be created from some three of the State officers—say Governor, Treasurer and Attorney General—who should supervise the letting and settle all matters of dispute that might arise.

The county system might be almost the same except that there could be little use for a County Treasurer. The Auditor could draw his warrant on the Treasurer and the Tax Collector could pay into the depository, or the offices of both Tax Collector and Treasurer might be consolidated, thus doing away with one office. Did I expect to be active in political life I should hardly dare to suggest a decrease in the number of offices, for it is not a popular suggestion. I am, however, trying to tell the people how money can be saved. The Supervisors might be the Board of Deposits for the county, but it should be the duty of the State to supervise the amount and kind of securities presented, and where necessary the State board might have supervision of any matters arising out of the matter of deposits.

To save the cost of so much transportation a system of checking should be arranged between the depositories and this might be left to the State Board of Deposits.

The law should provide that in case of municipal or county bonds those of counties or municipalities that had a debt greater than a fixed percentage of the assessed value of the property should not be taken.

A DRUNKEN CHINAMAN.

Gun-Soaked Ah Ho Creates Quite a Stir on I Street.

Ah Ho ran amuck in the vicinity of Second and I streets last evening, and was suppressed there with danger, dodging and excitement in the classic precincts of Chinatown. Ah Ho had imbibed freely and was more than merry. They were fighting biters that he swallowed, and did their work only too well. He became imbued with the imbricated idea that he was at war with the world in general, and that it devolved upon him to increase the mortality rate.

Ah Ho was armed with an imitation Colt's revolver, and when the gin he had put under his blouse began to fizz out came the gun. It performed parabolic and other feats of physics in the vicinity—white, yellow and a plaid—sought shelter, and were expeditious about it. Fully two hundred people gathered (at a safe distance) and craned their necks around corners, electric light poles and other things, to get a view of the fort. One gentleman who was riding a gray horse, such as the great Napoleon is supposed to have ridden while crossing the Alps, galloped to police headquarters, a block away, and spread the alarm, and Sergeant Dolan responded.

By the time the Sergeant arrived Ah Ho had disappeared through the doors of a saloon at the northeast corner of the street, and he was given leeway as soon as he got in. Dolan slipped up behind and seized him, and when the belligerent Mongol found that he was caught he hid his gun in the pocket of one of his capacious pockets, and began to curse the officer in pigeon English and several other languages.

Special Officer Donohue arrived on the scene about the time Dolan had coaxed the Chinaman to quit fighting, the hidden gun was fished up, and Ah Ho was taken where the woodbine twines and the whangdoodle mourneth. In blue streaks he turned loose while in his cell. He asserted that he was a Suez On, but that he was no high-binder.

He was charged with carrying a concealed weapon, though, according to people who sprang for safety, his method of "concealing" it was unique, to say the least.

J. Tully, a logger from one of the lumber camps in Siskiyou, came to the city yesterday with the proceeds of his season's labor—or a portion thereof—in his pocket, and set out to see the elephant.

If he didn't find the elephant he did find Lottie Sherburn, an inmate of the Brown House, at Fourth and K streets, and, according to the story he told, he found Lottie found his pocket. Tully said she got away with $20 of his money, whereupon he had her arrested.
