

YOSEMITE REPORTS FILED.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT AMERICA'S ALPS

Commissioners Tell About the Wonderland and Make Many Recommendations.

One of the most interesting of all the State officials' reports that have been filed this year, is that of the Yosemite Commissioners, which is now at the office of the Governor.

There is interest in Yosemite, not only among the people of California, but throughout the United States. The matter contained in the report deals with the condition of the valley, the needs of the commission, the neglect of this great scenic spot by the Federal Government, and other matters of vital importance.

The first part of the report deals with the greatly reduced cost of reaching the valley, which has been effected by better roads and lower rates. It is said that there are evidences of unwise theft, repairs and general improvements that are pleasing to the tourist, compared with the old regime. The clearing away of a great amount of surplus underbrush has enabled the public to obtain far better views than heretofore of the great scenic wonders.

The destruction of the Steneman House has caused a great deal of trouble. The loss of $90,000 has never been made up to the Yosemite fund from other sources, but $5,600 have been expended for temporary huts to take the place of the old structure.

It is recommended that there be an electric light plant to furnish power and light, and it is suggested that the power from the water in the Yosemite would be available at little cost. This would minimize the danger of losses by fire.

In this connection the Commissioners say: "Under the laws of this State the Steneman House could not be insured and was not insured. The State insures its own property and, we are informed, has saved a great deal of money by doing so."

It is recommended that the State should take, from the amount thus saved in insurance, a sum sufficient to compensate that particular branch of the State's service which is the loser."

[If it is meant, by the foregoing, that California has a fund, or sets aside money for the insurance of its own buildings, this is an erroneous statement. Inquiry at the Controller's office brought out the fact that there is not such a fund, so if the Commissioners meant to say that the State insures its property, they must have meant to convey the idea that it insured by the profits on premiums saved, or insured by not buying policies.]

The Commissioners recommend that the Federal Government should expend money for the care of Yosemite, as it does for the Yellowstone Park. They also ask that an eroneous statement, inquiry at the Controller's office brought out the fact that there is not such a fund, so if the Commissioners meant to say that the State insures its property, they must have meant to convey the idea that it insured by the profits on premiums saved, or insured by not buying policies.]

They also favor advertising the scenic wonderland, on which they say: "One of the most certain requirements of the Yosemite Valley is judicious advertising. How far the State can properly go in this matter is a subject to be carefully examined. It might advertise its tenting and camping privileges in the local State papers, together with its rules and regulations. With attractions like the Yellowstone Park and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado made easily accessible and advertised, it has become necessary for the success of the Yosemite Valley, as a point of attraction for tourists, that its beauty and grandeur should be kept before the public. Without this it will certainly fall into more or less neglect. This valley is one of the grandest and most unique pieces of scenery in the world, and by properly keeping its claims for attention before the public it will undoubtedly continue to be a point of attraction, bringing tourists, not only to the Yosemite but to the State of California."

It will please tourists to learn that arrangements have been made to supply tourists with camping outfits at a reasonable rental. The Commissioners say that this has already brought in a fair revenue, and they believe in enlarging their facilities in this particular, as camping is a favorite way of visiting the valley. Two hundred thousand fish have been added to the Yosemite streams by the Fish Commissioners this year.

There is now a rock cut trail to Vernal Falls, and this is said to be safer and better than the old ladders. Bad bridges have been improved or rebuilt, ugly fences have been removed, and a pleasant building has been constructed for the Sierra Club. The destruction of the Steneman House has caused a great deal of trouble. The loss of $90,000 has never been made up to the Yosemite fund from other sources, but $5,600 have been expended for temporary huts to take the place of the old structure.

It is recommended that there be an electric light plant to furnish power and light, and it is suggested that the power from the water in the Yosemite would be available at little cost. This would minimize the danger of losses by fire. In this connection the Commissioners say: "Under the laws of this State the Steneman House could not be insured and was not insured. The State insures its own property and, we are informed, has saved a great deal of money by doing so."

Officer Ash appeared after the men had been separated. "Tony" told the officer that he had been assaulted by Ohart several days since, the latter had been discharged, and signified his intention of swearing out a warrant for his arrest this morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Congregational Church this evening the second concert of the third season of the Capital Concert Series. It is full of rich promise for concert lovers. The artists to take part and their high standing in the musical world have been extensively referred to in these columns and justify the prediction that they will give an entertainment of rare excellence. Miss Mary Linck, prima donna contralto, is an American singer who has won in opera and concert high honors in the United States and Europe, and has the warm endorsement of the foremost and most exacting critics.

Her program was as follows: Piano duet, "La Baladine" (Lufberg), Misses Dunt and Nelson; vocal solo, "Let Me Love Thee" (Arditt), Miss Lena Gore; reading, "Finnigan to Flanigan," E. P. Carragher; tumbling, August York and Montie Newbert, trio; "Lorely-Paraphrase" (Newswald), Mr. Adler (violin), Miss Mary Lewis (cello), Mr. Heyman (piano); Ladies' Lyric Quartet, "Old Kentucky Home" (Foster), Mrs. J. A. Moynihan, Mrs. Mary Ross, Mrs. Frank Bergman, Mrs. B. F. Howard; reading (selected), A. W. Watson; Indian singing, six clubs; Messrs. Kleinsorge and Flandes; vocal solo (selected), Mrs. J. H. Copper-Smith; Instrumental Double Quartet, march, Messrs. Gifford, Clark Bartels, McGuire, V. Bartels, Marcella, Engstrom and White.

The women of Columbus Chapter, No. 117, Order of the Eastern Star, gave a chapter benefit entertainment at the Orpheum last evening. The house was very nearly filled, very few seats being vacant. The audience was one of warm friends, and gave the people on the stage every encouragement and laughter, and applauded on slightest provocation. The entertainment consisted of an extravaganza, entitled "The Old Maids' Convention." It was a most absurd, ridiculous and astonishingly novel burlesque. Some fifty or more women took part. Two-thirds of these appeared in the first part, which consisted of the assembling of the guests to the business of the session, recital of experiences of the old maids in their fruitless search for husbands and the initiation of new members. Two lone men in disguise had part in these performances and fared ill, of course, as they deserved. Just as the guests were "secure" in the odd and gaudy costumery seen in the first part, passes comprehension. It was far and away the most unique, to put it mildly, ever seen here, and as for headgear, nothing like it has been dreamed of or fancied in the most extravagant imaginations. The parts were well taken and with one or two exceptions the speakers were clearly and distinctly heard. There was just a suggestion of monotony in the silly chatter and hysterical recited experiences of the old maids—in fact, the first part began to drag, but was saved by the fact of the curtain. The second part was introduced by a prelude, in which Sig. Abramoff, the accomplished basso, sang in fine voice and with the artistic finish characteristic of all his musical efforts. In the second part, the better of the two, a rejuvinating machine was introduced, by passage through which old maids were converted into blushing young girls and given another chance in the lottery of life. This enabled the convention to send out of the machine fifteen of Sacramento's freshest and most attractive girls in simple white and glorious youth, led in march and song by Mrs. Nettie Keefer. They were deservedly encored. Their part in the performance was highly meritorious, as also Mrs. Keefer's solo number, a coon song, for which she was recalled. There came out of the wonderful machine also little Misses Ferriter and O'Malley, each of whom greatly pleased in songs and dances, and were recalled enthusiastically. Likewise Miss Thompson, in modest maiden attire, came forth and sang a charming song, with just enough of embarrassment to add piquancy to her pleasant effort. There was a cake walk scene by a couple who did very well, and during the evening there was quartet and duet singing and chorus work by members of the stage assembly. It was a very odd performance, intended to be absurd to the verge of silliness, and a burlesque of the most extravagant order—and as such it succeeded. But the thought is irresistible that with the real talent on the stage, the same energy and hearty devotion could have given the people a comedy entertainment of a good order, enlivened by wit and humor that would not have to be dragged in by the foretop. The good women proved themselves entirely capable of such work; the wonder is that they so underestimated their abilities, and harness them to such a ridiculous affair as that of last night. Next time they should try higher.

Manager Ficks of the Orpheum last night gave a banquet at an up-town restaurant to a number of employees of the theater and a few invited guests in inauguration of his assumption of the management of the Orpheum.

After the conclusion of the repeat, toasts and speeches were in order, and at the conclusion the health of the new manager was drunk with all the honors.

The new manager of the Orpheum announces the winter season to open Saturday evening with a week's engagement of W. R. Daley's stock company. The first play will be "Captain Impudence," a romantic drama and comedy, in which the troupe has had great success. The repertoire of the Daley company includes besides, these plays: "Wife's Devotion," "Young Mrs. Winthrop," "Freaks," "Moths," "Queen," "Confusion," "East Lynne" and "Arabian Nights." There will be a change of bill each evening. The company has Mr. Nannary as leading lady and E. J. Bucknall as leading man, supported by E. J. Blunkall, Frank Clayton, E. F. Nannary, N. R. Denley, J. F. McDonald, Joseph Roberts, Fay Courtney, Kitty Belmont, Lillian Alwood and the precocious child actress, Baby Lillian.

IN TROUBLE AGAIN.

Maggie Corcoran's Commitment May Be Enforced Now.

Maggie Corcoran, a wayward fourteen-year-old girl, who has given the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children considerable trouble, was again arrested by Officer Healy of the society last night and taken to the County Jail.

She has been for four days away from home. Some time ago she was arrested and brought into the Superior Court, with a view of sending her to a reformatory institution, but her mother pleaded not to have it done and promised to take care of her, so sentence was suspended and she was allowed to keep her.

A short time ago, however, the girl broke out again, and absented herself from home, and when she was brought back her mother took her to the Magdalen's Home in San Francisco, Healy states, but for some reason could not get admitted to the institution. The time the commitment, which was withheld before, will go into effect and that he will be empowered to place her where she can be reformed.

While working in the yards near the foot of I street yesterday, two waitresses saw a woman run wildly across the street, and she was rapidly seized and taken to the police station.

The woman was turned over to the police authorities and was locked up for a few hours. She was evidently crazed from liquor, and was rapidly better and was finally allowed to depart. She gave the name of Mrs. Compton Galt and the officers believe she lives in Oakland. Her husband was also in this city, and was searching for her when she made her wild run.

Sheriff Kelly Is Taking Him Back to the Scene of the Murder.

Sheriff Kelly of Dallas, Oregon, was in the city yesterday on his way home with Frank J. Forrester, who is charged with the murder of a wealthy sheep-raiser named Phil Brogan, near Dallas.

Forrester was arrested at Winnemucca, having traveled on foot for 150 miles and then, procuring a horse and saddle, started for Idaho. On his way he met a young man whom he told who he was and also that there was a reward of $1,000 offered for his arrest. When they arrived at Winnemucca the young man informed the authorities and they arrested Forrester. Sheriff Kelly paid the reward to the authorities at Winnemucca.

Forrester says that he and Brogan quarreled after setting up, Brogan having been drinking heavily and picking a quarrel, raised a chair to strike him when he stabbed Brogan, killing him instantly.

One of the most sensible fads is that for chafing dish cooking. You may dress up for calling and without any heat or any danger of soiling your dress, you can cook an entire meal on your dining-room table. Very helpful for people living in rooms. A splendid gift for wife or sweetheart.

We have chafing dishes in quite a variety of styles and prices. The double tin lining is an important feature with our chafers, at it prevents the absorption of odors—a fault common to dishes not so lined. And our lamp too is an improvement over most kinds; it is the only known device for obtaining a graduation of heat.

All the accessories—skimmers, forks, spoons and flagons.

Only a few days more of the beautiful "White and Gold Salon."
