

ILLNESS OF SENATOR DOTY.

TAKEN TO HIS HOME AT ELK GROVE.

His Son Was Sent For, Which Indicates That His Case is Serious.

It was learned late last night that Senator Doty had been taken suddenly ill and was removed to his home in Elk Grove early in the evening.

His son, who is employed in this city, was later called home by telephone, which was understood to mean that the Senator's condition had not improved.

Heart trouble is said to be the cause of his illness. Senator Doty was in his seat yesterday afternoon, but was evidently not feeling well, as he asked that body to take up and pass the Polson prison sewage bill—a measure in which he felt considerable interest—as he desired to go to his home. It was not known at that time, however, that he was ill.

CAMERA CLUB PICTURES.

Hundreds of People View Good Amateur Photographs.

The Sacramento Camera Club invited the public to see a number of its members' exhibits at the clubrooms yesterday and last night.

Several hundred people called to view the exhibit and witness the stereoscopic exhibition in the dark-rooms on the upper floor, and it was the general opinion that the exhibit was one of the best ever given here.

The following persons have worked in the exhibit: J. L. Steinman, L. D. Nichols, John C. Shaw, P. S. Lawson, Miss F. A. Sims, F. Ankner, Mrs. E. Graham, Dr. I. G. Shaw, R. B. Pridmore, C. B. Martin, Thomas B. Hall, Dr. H. M. McCollom, C. H. Neubourg, F. M. Braddock, W. G. Woods, S. B. Nourse, F. Kohler, J. J. Gormley, L. M. Petherick, Arthur Atkinson, W. E. Cogswell and D. C. Sweeney.

Some of the work is of a superior grade and attracted considerable attention. Miss Sims' dog groups were greatly admired, as also were Mr. Ankner's river views.

Among the exhibits that attracted attention were the following: Racetrack scenes, by Lawson; views in the shops, by Shaw; puppies and cows, Mrs. E. Graham; bromide enlargements, by Shaw; scenes around Sacramento, by Pridmore; portrait studies, by Martin; cattle scenes, T. B. Hall; two photographs of horses, by Dr. McCollom; groups, by Neubourg; carbon studies, by Braddock; picnic scenes and carbon studies, by Woods; process work, by Nourse; enlargements, by Kohler; river scenes, by Gormley; carbons, by Petherick; beeches and groups, by Atkinson; portraits, by Cogswell; and many portraits by Sweeney.

The exhibition will be continued today and this evening.

Mrs. Lages alleges that her husband deserted her last week and now refuses to contribute to her support. She represents that he is worth over $40,000, divided as follows:

An improved lot on H street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, in Sacramento, worth $7,500; one-half interest in a mangle works on Fifth street, between J and K streets, worth $20,000; other property in this city worth $6,000; cash on hand, $1,000; bills receivable, $5,000.

Mrs. Lages asks for $125 a month for her support and $250 counsel fees.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Congregational Mission Sunday-School Entertained.

Last evening was very pleasantly spent by the children and friends of the Congregational Mission Sunday-school at Twenty-third and K streets. A delightful "Half-Hour in an Art Gallery" was passed under the guidance of Rev. J. E. Silcox, aided by his wife.

Following this came a violin solo by Miss Frances Connelly, a recitation by Miss Murry, and song by Miss Emilie Connelly. Light refreshments were served, and after some timely remarks by Mr. Silcox, the evening's entertainment closed with the singing of "America," in honor of Washington's Birthday.

obliged to interfere, but his remark in fact, Ruser jumped to his feet, grasped a heavy tumbler in each hand and beat such a tattoo on Jansen's head that one or both of the glasses were broken.

There were two men in the place at the time, and one of them, named Van Alstine, ran out and telephoned for an officer. Ruser met him at the door as he returned and assaulted him, and while this scrap was in progress Officer Ash arrived and arrested the combatants. When Van Alstine explained how he came to get into the mixup with Ruser he was released.

Jansen was found bleeding from a bad cut on his temple, caused by the broken tumbler, and a physician had to be called to sew up the gash.

The woman who was with Ruser made her escape through the kitchen when the fighting commenced.

nauseated. Since his return he had inquired of the men as to its effect, and complaints were made. He took no account of such matters, but he heard of no notable complaints, and did not consider action necessary.

Refrigerated beef was furnished after the surrender, and was satisfactory. Everybody, he said, liked it, and he never suspected any use of chemicals. Since that reflected, he was surprised that he had been able to keep it twenty-four hours after issue.

"A great many of the men would eat the canned roast beef and turn about quickly and vomit," Captain Ennis said, "and finally they refused to eat it at all."

This was said in response to a question as to the causes of illness among his troops. Captain Ennis believed much of it was due to this beef. No other food caused vomiting immediately after eating, he said, but the sickness was only transient.

Major Estep, occasionally retired, was said he thought the inability to eat the roast beef did not cause hunger, because there was an abundance of other food. The refrigerated beef kept twenty-four hours after its issue to the battery stationed at Morro Castle.

Major Estep, occasionally retired, was attached to the Fourth Infantry during the Santiago campaign, said canned roast beef was issued after landing and until after the surrender, and complaints of no very specific character were made generally by the men and Captains, and it was not attempted to remedy the defects in the ration, were made, he said, because all realized that the best possible was being done under the circumstances, and they were glad to get anything. After refrigerated beef was furnished no complaints were made, except on the subject of water, which was tainted or spoiled, when boards of survey were appointed and the beef condemned. Witness said he was surprised that the beef kept so long as it did, but he never saw anything unusual in its appearance. It was generally issued in choice and fancy grades.

Major Baker said he had made a special report upon the rations, pursuant to the Adjutant General's orders of September 20th, but thought had the orders not been promulgated he would not have felt called upon to make a report upon the matter. Prior to September 20th he had accepted the situation as being as good as possible. He did not think the sickness in the regiment due in any material degree to the food, but rather to the climate.

Major General Sumner of the volunteer cavalry, Colonel of the Sixth Cavalry at the outbreak of the war, and commanded a brigade of cavalry through the Santiago campaign, testified that complaints about roast beef were heard in the lines, but no action was taken, "because," as he declared, "there was not any use. That was all that was said, and I was not to be troubled with it."

Refrigerated beef was furnished after the surrender, and was good, except that much of it spoiled before reaching camp, five or six hours being required to bring it from the depot.

General Sumner said when he left Tampa his adjutant, Captain Howe, reported that some of the beef placed on board two quarters of beef which, he claimed, as the result of treatment, would keep in the tropics two or three days. The second day it became so offensive that it was thrown overboard. He did not know who put the beef on board, or by what authority, Captain Howe had been directed to write particulars.

General Sumner said he attributed none of the sickness to defective food. Major Jesse M. Lee, Ninth Infantry, who joined his regiment at Santiago, July 20th, said refrigerated beef was furnished, sent by day, and frequently spoiled before it could be gotten to camp two miles from the city. Much difficulty in transporting it was experienced, and, aside from putrefaction, there appeared little ground for complaint.

Major Lee was very strong in the opinion that the beef of the hospital had been more satisfactory in Cuba than refrigerated beef, although he said his opinion might result largely from the fact that all his experience in the civil and Indian wars had been with cattle in herds. Refrigerated beef supply was a novelty, and when the camps were removed three miles from the refrigerators in the tropics difficulty would be experienced in keeping it fresh while en route.

Captain James P. Jackson, Seventh Infantry, who was in the battle and siege of Santiago, said canned roast beef was issued off and on while they remained in Cuba. A few complaints were made, but he investigated and found it rather tasteless, but nourishing. Refrigerated beef was issued after the surrender, but about one-half was spoiled when delivered, the camp being about four miles from the depot.

Witness never had the idea of any chemical treatment of the beef in an open wagon, he said, and used in transporting the beef, and it was delivered in the open. He made a report recently on the beef, under orders from his Colonel, but otherwise his sense of duty to his men and the command would not have prompted him to make a report.
