The Atlantic Monthly for March (Boston) has these papers: "A Wholesome Stimulus," "The Politics," "Some Cranks and their Crotchets," "John Fiske," "Our Contemporary Ancestors in the Southern Mountains," "William Goddell Frost," "Talks to Teachers on Psychology" (11), "William James," "Reminiscences of Julia Ward Howe" (14), "Julia Ward Howe," "Comida: An Experience in Famine," "Frank Norris," "President Eliot as an Educational Reformer," "William deWitt Hyde," "The Kindergarten Child—After the Kindergarten," "Marion Hamilton Carter," "An Edicted Spirit," "Marguerite," "Musing," "Chief," "James E. Hodgkin," "The Autobiography of a Revolutionist" (VI), "P. Kropotkin," "The Vital Touch in Literature," "John Burroughs," "Writers That Are Quotable," "Bradford Torrey," "A Winter Holiday," "Bliss Carman," "The Largest Life," "Archibald Lampman," "Benedictine," "Julia M. Lippmann," "Such is the Death of the Soldier," "Robert Burns Wilson," "The Upbuilding of the Theater," "Norman Hapgood," "Experiences of a War Censor," "Grant Squires."

Commodore Melville, in "The Engineering Magazine" for March (New York) reviews most instructively the naval engineering lessons drawn from the Spanish-American war. He treats fully the service-efficiency of the different types of war vessels, and the general facts established as to the design of warship machinery. Mr. Melville's economy and resourcefulness to emergency demands for speed and power. An extremely entertaining portion of his paper is that devoted to the auxiliaries—the distilling ships and the naval repair ship, which was a new feature in naval operations. Mr. Hunter has an illustrated article on the Nicaragua Canal, especially important in its suggestions and general types of war vessels, and the general facts established as to the design of warship machinery. The March "Ladies' Home Journal" (Philadelphia) has a noteworthy feature in the page—showing "Pope Leo XIII. as He Lives in the Vatican." The pictures were made by the only photographer who has been admitted to the Vatican for a number of years. An article that will be widely read will figure out "The American Girl's Chances of Marriage," and another, "Social Life in America's French City," "The Most Wonderful Musical Festival in America" recalls the great peace jubilee held at Boston in 1872. "Churches Decorated for Weddings," "The Prettiest Country Homes in America," "Flowers and Flower Beds," and "Fifteen Good Mantels and Fire-places" are shown from the photographs submitted in the contest for "Journal" prizes. "In Nature's Garden" pictures and describes the flowers. On his editorial page Edward Bok pays tribute to his late associate editor, Isabel A. Mallon, who also wrote for the "Journal" under the pseudonym of "Ruth Ashmore." Considerable space is given to Easter hats and frocks, etc. Besides the concluding chapters of "The Chris of Camp Arroyo" by John Kendrick Bangs, Mrs. S. T. Rorer continues her cooking lessons and advice upon domestic economy.

"Harper's Magazine" for March (New York), richly illustrated, has these special features: "English Characteristics," by Julian Ralph; "The Spanish-American War," by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge—Part II, "The Coming of War," "The Massacre of Fort Dearborn at Chicago," by Simon Pokagon; "The Building of the Modern City House," by Russel Sturgis (illustrated with plans and photographs of the latest developments in city architecture); "Major General Forrest at the Battle of Gettysburg," by John W. Wyeth, M. D.; "The Rented House," a psychological story by Octave Thanet. The issue contains also the third part of "Their Silver Wedding Journey," by William DeWitt Hyde, illustrated by W. T. Smedley; and the conclusion of the historical romance, "The Span of Life," by William McLennan and J. N. McIlwraith, illustrated by F. de Myrbach. The number presents an unusually rich variety of interesting short stories. These are: "Without the Courts," by Sarah Barnwell Elliott; "The Way of the Cross," a story of Siberia, by Stephen Bonsai; and "On the Steps of the City Hall," by Brander Matthews. "The Editor's Drawer" opens with "The Curing of the Judge," by L. Morgan Hill, and contains the fifth installment of "He, She, and They," by Albert Lee, and the usual variety of light verse and humorous anecdotes. "The Drawer" is illustrated by H. M. Wilder.

"Harper's Weekly" presents a thorough discussion of tobacco culture in Porto Rico by William Dinwiddie, special correspondent in the Antilles. It is stated that tobacco equal to the best Havana in quality can be grown very easily in Porto Rico, and that much of the tobacco imported from Cuba has been grown in the smaller island, imported to Cuba and branded with the magical word "Havana." Mr. Dinwiddie states that tobacco culture in Porto Rico affords an opportunity for American enterprise and investment fully equal to the sugar and coffee planting, which industries he has so ably discussed in previous issues of the "Weekly." Chief Justice William L. Chambers, whose decision in the disputed kingship caused an uprising in Samoa, and almost brought about a collision between the German and English war vessels at that place, has furnished two pages of photographs of notable Samoan scenes for the current issue of the "Weekly." Among these is an especially fine group which represents the new King, Malietoa, surrounded by his guards.

The March number of the "Critic" (New York) is in many respects the most notable of that magazine yet. It contains among other attractions a frontispiece portrait of Washington painted from life by Rembrandt Peale in 1795, when the latter was a lad of 17. The "Critic" has the honor of reproducing it for the first time. This number contains a portrait of Thackeray, from a photograph taken by Gurney in New York in 1855, and never before published, as well as several sketches made by Thackeray when he was a pupil at Dartmouth.

From the author, Miss Mae Gleason, 831 M street, Sacramento, we have her song, "Half Once More the Flag Old Glory." It is set to music by Joseph B. Carey, and is dedicated to Mrs. May Milliken Ross of Sacramento. The words are spiritedly patriotic, and have special reference to the justifiability of the United States in intervening in Cuba's behalf. The music is lively, has a martial movement and is of the quality that attaches to the memory.

The "Midland Monthly" for February (St. Louis) comes late to hand, but it is welcome at the end as at the beginning of a month. It is a sterling and thoroughly good magazine, and has won a place in the front rank. The leading papers, with many fine illustrations, are: "A Visit to Charleston Hall," "A. D. Abbott," "The First Continental Congress of North America," "Indians," "Horace M. Rebok," "Queen Louise of Prussia and Her Posthumous Portrait," "Countess de Montagu," "Grant's Vicksburg Campaign" (a history), "Colonel John W. Emerson," "Anglo-Saxon Colonization," "Willis G. Barker," "Yellow Fever," "Whitman," "Colonel B. E. Cross," "Walt Whitman and the West," "Johnson Brigham," "A Hero and His Wife" (short story), "Clara H. Holmes," "The Old Bachelor's Story" (short story), "Mattie A. Curl," "The Way of the World" (short story), "Duff Reed," "Edith" (short story), "C. H. Roberts," "The Stairway of Fate" (short story), "Maidna, Cleaver, Paville," "Tommy Taylor's Ambition" (short story), "Amelia Wofford," "The Helioscope—In Love" (short story), "N. H. Crowell," "The Chickoo" (short story), "C. L. Andrews."

It has been estimated that there are at the lowest count 500,000 American women who are directly interested in some form or other of club work. For a long time there has been a growing demand for a thorough discussion of the interests of American clubs in the field of social and domestic economy. Such a demand has existed is fully proven by the wide favor which has greeted "Club Women and Club Work," the department conducted for "Harper's Bazar" by Margaret Hamilton Welch. It is enough to say, that in this department the club women can get a discussion of this important subject before the "Radical," the new California monthly, is all that its name implies. It treats of political, religious and social topics in a way that will not only make it some admirers and many enemies. The sex problems are dealt with in too plain language. It is published at Stockton by the Radical Publishing Company.

A United States Senator. (From the Santa Cruz Sentinel). No instructions were given two years ago to the Republican Senatorial candidate from this district. The same can be said of the Assembly candidate of last fall. Both gentlemen were elected as Republicans, and it was expected that they would help elect Republicans to the United States Senate. A Republican United States Senator was elected in 1897, and his name is Hon. George C. Perkins. So far so good. There was no deadlock then. Mr. Perkins' vote has been needed, repeatedly since, in the McKinley administration. With this vote should be cast another Republican vote from California during the next two years. The nation is entitled to it. The Republicans of this district and county have elected a Senator and an Assemblyman. The voters did not pledge the legislators to vote for this man for the United States Senate or against that man for the same position. These voters did expect these legislators to vote to send a Republican to Washington. This fact cannot be disputed. Otherwise these legislators would never have been nominated. The voters did not ask that the United States Senator be elected on geographical grounds and taken from the extreme southern end of Southern California at that. The preposterous theory had not been heard of here that Southern California, with two-elevenths of the population, was to have half of the Senators. With equal justice, and more wealth and population, might Northern California have demanded the Senator on geographical grounds. But that division of the State lays down no such dictatorial proposition.

Had it been known in 1896, and again in 1898, that Senator Trout and Assemblyman Radcliff would vote for no one in 1899 for Senator but a candidate from San Diego, the first gentleman named would now be in the forest shades of Boulder Creek, and the latter gentleman in the sugar glades of Watsonville.

The people of this district, regardless of party, do not care one continental for U. S. Grant and his lofty aspirations. He has not one single pre-eminent qualification for the elevated station he seeks. He is not a statesman in any sense of the word. He has never done a thing for his party. He wants to begin officially when the very great men of the nation leave off. The legislators who are voting for him only put forth the feeble claim in his behalf that Southern California is entitled to the Senator this time, and that the son of his father is the only man altogether lovely of that territory, although Los Angeles County, about all there is of Southern California, wanted State Senator Bullis of that county.

The man who considers himself above his party should never accept a legislative office. The minority that attempts to run the majority is the dog's tail wagging the dog. With us majorities rule. The present California Legislature is not made up entirely of Republicans. On a joint ballot there are thirty-four Democrats and Populists that must be overcome. They never can be overcome so long as twenty-six Republicans will refuse to vote with the balance of the Republicans. Grant has twenty-six votes. Burns has an equal number. No Republican can be elected a Senator who does not receive at least one of the votes of one of these candidates and all the other Republican votes. This result can only be brought about in caucus. Let the caucus be held at once, and may the caucus nominee receive the solid Republican vote. Were we a legislator, and Grant the choice of the Republican caucus, as much as we are opposed to his election, he would receive our vote and undivided support. Otherwise we would draw out of the party electing us and set up a party of our own, on the theory that the party is above the individual, and not the officer greater than his constituents.
