Maude Caswell and Arthur Arnold, well known in Sacramento, had their first streak of bad luck at Fairmount Park, Kansas City, recently.

The Sam T. Shaw Company have been playing new territory in Oregon, but everywhere they are greeted as old friends.

Willie Collier will do "The Man From Mexico" in London.

Mrs. Leslie Carter wants to appear in "Macbeth" next season.

Charles Frohman has bought an American comedy from J. K. Jerome.

Bobby Gaylor will star next season in "A Tammany Man," by Daniel Sullivan.

"A Milk White Flag" will be the next American farce to join in the London invasion.

The First Philippine drama has been written. It is called "The Siege Against Aginaldo."

Madame Modjeska, who commands such esteem and respect from all who are interested in feminine achievement and the drama in particular, is an untiring woman. A student by nature, she is familiar with the literature of many countries.

Eleanor Duse has made up her mind to give up d'Annunzio and return to Shakespeare.

The managers of "Ben-Hur" are already receiving orders for seats for the opening performance.

Hall Caine and Wilson Barrett are still disputing about the stage rights of "The Christian."

Eugenie Blair will head a summer stock company, which will open next week in Washington.

The French composer Massenet was the youngest of twenty-one children.

"Arizona," Augustus Thomas' new play, has scored a decided success in Chicago.

James A. Herne will next season put on an elaborate scenic production of "Heart's of Oak."

It is not generally known that Henrik Ibsen, the dramatist, was for many years a druggist.

Anna Held won first prize for the best-acted equipage in the recent floral festival at Paris.

Otis Skinner is to star next season in "The Liars." Mr. Skinner has also been successful in "Rosemary."

A writer in the "St. James' Gazette" gives the following description of the allegorical birth of spring in the Masque performed recently in the London Guildhall.

When the yellow curtains were first drawn back, then from either side fluttered in the forest, children in brown and red and yellow, driven on to the stage by the four winds, maidens with long horns to their lips.

The winds blew and the leaves danced and flickered and rustled as you may see them do on a boisterous day in autumn when you are in the woods.

Among the American actresses who have married millionaires are Edith Kingdon, now Mrs. George Gould; Hope Booth, now Mrs. James A. G. Earl; Julia Arthur, now Mrs. B. P. Cheney; Grace Filkins, now Mrs. Adolph Marx; Rolande Davis, now Mrs. Charles S. Leahr; Ada Dace, now Mrs. Frank Ehret; and Grace Kimball, now Mrs. Lawrence McGuire.

Charles Frohman has commissioned John Davidson to make the English version of Cautle Mendes's play "La Reine Flammette," in which Julia Marlowe is to appear later on.

Kyrle Bellew is the author of a new play in four acts, dealing with the power of youth. It contains four prominent characters—three men and a woman.

There is a report that Charles Wyndham intends to follow the example set at the London Lyceum, and put his new theater and his interest in the old one into the hands of a limited liability company.

It is announced that Miss Olga Netherese will assume the management of a London theater next May, making her first appearance there in "Sapho."

"A King and a Fool" is the title of a new four-act play which Aubrey Boucicault has made out of "Chicot, the Jester," and another novel of the elder Dumas, and which is likely to be seen in London before long.

New York Post: This is the very duldest period of the theatrical year. There is not a house open for regular dramatic performances, and such persons as cannot keep away from the footlights, even in the dog-days, must content themselves with vaudeville performances and the delights of such comic operetta as is furnished by the Casino and the New York.

New York Post: Beerbohm Tree has now decided to produce his revival of "King John," in Her Majesty's Theater, London, about the middle of next September, and it is announced that he will assume the title part, because "the purpose of the play will be better served by his appearance in that character."

No one moved, and in a few minutes the train was speeding along, not to stop again for nearly an hour. Then an old Scotchman turned to a lady sitting near her, and said:

should not play the King fairly well, although he will not be able, probably, to give it much prominence or distinctness. He will not have much to fear from comparison, as comparatively few play-goers remember the striking impersonation of Phelps, or even that of Walter Montague, which was very good. Mr. Tree, however, deserves credit for collecting a supporting cast which is almost certain to overshadow him.

Alice Nielson has signed a contract for five years more to her present manager, Percy, and the contract includes appearances in London and Paris, beginning in London on Easter Monday, 1900. Miss Nielson's next American appearance will be at the New York Casino.

It is a mistake to suppose that the shining lights of grand opera confine their attention to the style of music of which they are the exponents. Jean de Reszke's favorite amusement is said to be the imitation of music-hall singers of rag-time melodies, and he is credited with being an expert mimic.

For the medium of her reintroduction to the stage, Lily Langtry has chosen Robert Buchanan's version of Dumas's "The Queen's Necklace." Mrs. Langtry will produce the play as soon as possible, and will then be bound to it to America. She will appear in the leading female role of Marie Antoinette.

An American comic opera actress is to break into the harem of the Sultan of Nisims, but was arrested, although released by the Sultan, who declined to lend himself to an advertising trick. But her press agent is now working up her violation of the law and her escape from punishment as a sensation.

Two monuments to the memory of Alphonse Daudet are being made by Paris sculptors. One by St. Marceau, which is nearly completed, is to be erected in Paris, and the other, recently begun by Falguere, will be for the city of Nisims.

A story illustrating the reticence of the Scotch regarding their private affairs was told by Ian Maclaren when in Boston.

A train was at a railroad station, when a porter put his head into a car and called out:

"Any one in 'this car for Doun? Change for Doun? Any one for Doun?"

When the porter had finished his duties, the train was speeding along, not to stop again for nearly an hour. Then an old Scotchman turned to a lady sitting near her, and said:

There is now on exhibition at a public gallery in London a collection of twenty old Italian pictures, which is of surpassing interest, because it contains a newly discovered and undoubtedly genuine portrait of Raphael.

It has long been known that the great master, during his Florentine period, painted several portraits which have not been identified, and many have been claimed to the honor of being one of these, says a London letter.

None of them, however, has established his claim in a way to satisfy the exacting tests of modern criticism. But this picture, which, until lately, occupied a modest place in a private Italian gallery under the name of Rinaldo Ghirlandajo, was no sooner seen by one of two of the leading authorities than they proclaimed it as a certain work of Raphael's, and probably the picture which tradition declared him to have painted of the brother of Angelo Doni.

Everybody remembers the marvelous portrait of Rinaldo Ghirlandajo, was no sooner seen by one of two of the leading authorities than they proclaimed it as a certain work of Raphael's, and probably the picture which tradition declared him to have painted of the brother of Angelo Doni.

keen eyes, the bushy hair, are alike wonderful, and the condition of the picture after almost 400 years, is extraordinary.

Cleveland Leader: Of all the effects of prosperity reported from the great centers of trade and population, nothing more curious has been noted than the extraordinary sale of rather poor paintings at this year's exhibition of the Royal Academy. London never knew sales to be so numerous or prices so liberal, and yet the average quality of the pictures was below the usual level.

Artists have often complained with exceeding bitterness, that the public had plenty of money to buy pictures with, but simply would not spend it in that way. The world has been accused of brutal indifference to the claims of art. The painters have refused to give people who do not buy their work credit for desires far out-reaching their means.

The late Augustin Daly left a large and valuable collection of art objects. There was not a trip which he made to Europe in which he did not return with an extensive assortment of old furniture, arms and armor, ceramics, paintings and prints.

His judgment of pictures and engravings was hardly that of an expert, but he possessed a good knowledge of furniture, and in his home in this city were many fine pieces of genuine Chippendale and Sheraton, besides old carved Flemish cabinets and specimens of Buhl and marqueterie work.

Is it possible that an accurate likeness of the Apostle Paul is now in the possession of Christendom? This intensely interesting question has been suggested by J. F. Given, manager of the Powers Opera-house at Decatur, Ill., who owns an exceedingly pretty iron medalion, three and one-quarter inches in diameter, which was found in the catacombs at Rome in 1846, during excavations by the Italian Government.

This remarkable relic is so peculiarly inscribed and has so seriously affected the minds of the archaeologists who have seen it that it has been considered not only possible, but probable that it is a true image of the great apostle of the heathen. On one side are the words "Paulus Apostolus Nasceatensis," and on the other the Latin equivalent of the words, "Blest by the most high God is this one, from out of the source of Israel, being a child of Benjamin and a master mind."

The first inscription, when translated, reads: "The Apostle Paul of the born elect." The precise date of the medal is unknown, of course, but the experts who have looked it over pronounce it to be of undoubted antiquity. Roman describes St. Paul as an earnest looking man, with deep set eyes and black beard. This description is met in Mr. Given's medal. Whether or not it is to be taken as an ancient portrait of the so-called "founder of Christianity" may never be determined, but it must possess, nevertheless, a keen interest for all who admire the enthusiastic convert of Tarsus. The medalion was recently sent to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Increase in Population. Of all countries, British India shows the largest gain in population every decade, though the annual rate percent, of increase is higher in many other lands.

It is probable that the census to be taken in 1901 will disclose a population of more than 310,000,000 in India, and that will mean a gain of about 20,000,000 in ten years. The increase in the Russian Empire in such a period is about 18,000,000. In the United States it has reached 12,000,000. For the present decade the gain in this country may be a little more than that, but not much.

REMARKABLE RESCUE AT NEW ORLEANS.

Mrs. Weisz Tells of Her Release From Despair and Misery.

Her Sufferings Had Reduced Her to a Complete Physical Wreck.

It is a wonderful story that Mrs. Weisz tells, and it comes straight from a heart that is filled with gratitude for what has been accomplished in her behalf. She says: For the benefit of sufferers such as I was, I write these few lines. I was a most miserable woman, for I was a chronic invalid. Suffered with pains all over my body, in particular, I was pale, thin and very weak. My nerves were shattered, and I would tremble nearly all the time.

New Orleans, La. MRS. S. WEISZ.

Hudyan Cured Mrs. R. L. Williams.

OGDEN, Utah. Dear Doctors: Every woman and man in this world should know about the great and good Hudyan. I know from my own experience that it will cure dyspepsia and nervous trouble. I suffered for many years. Could eat but a few things. I was thin, pale and very nervous. Could not sleep; suffered with headaches; in fact, was a complete physical wreck.

Hudyan Cured J. A. Brown.

LEBANON, N. H. Gentlemen: I feel indebted to you, and if my testimonial is worth anything, here it is. Your Hudyan has cured me of insomnia entirely. For many months I was unable to sleep more than two hours at night, and this in broken doses. I was harassed by unpleasant dreams. My memory was getting poor, and I was reduced to a skeleton. Your Hudyan has effected a wonderful change, for I am cured. You may send me six boxes for a friend, who is afflicted as I was. I shall always feel grateful to you. Yours truly, J. A. BROWN.

WEAK AND PALE WOMEN Women Who Suffer and Are Run Down in Health and Strength

FIND THAT "HUDYAN" RELIEVES AND CURES.

It is astonishing how quickly woman is robbed of her good looks, her hopes, joys and ambitions, by those diseases that are peculiar to her sex. Women lose all interest in life, and become a burden to themselves and to those who love them.

The delicate organism of woman, with which her whole system is in harmony, is easily and quickly deranged. Her nervous system is the seat of many of her ailments. Her system is a delicate mechanism, and it is easily deranged.

When the wonderful curative properties of Hudyan were discovered, this great remedy was at once applied to cases of this nature. The result was almost magical. Women who were run down and weak, as a result of suffering from heart trouble, and weakness, and emaciation, were quickly restored to health and strength.

Women in all stages of physical decline find that Hudyan is a friend indeed, for invariably it restores to them the glow of health. Hudyan will obviate the necessity of passing through a terrible ordeal to get healthy and strong.

GENERAL DEBILITY. A NEURALGIC STOMACH. A Serious Disorder—How to Overcome It.

Nature's Own Remedy—Hudyan—Will Promptly Relieve and Cure.

HEADACHES ARE DUE TO DIGESTIVE disorders in nearly all instances. There is no ill that is the source of a greater degree of discomfort to the human race than headache. Pain is a warning that the system is being attacked by some injurious influence. In the case of headache, it points to the stomach as the seat of disorder.

In consequence of debility or a chronic catarrhal condition of the stomach, there is not the proper secretion of the digestive solvents, and the result is indigestion. The great nerve that controls the stomach has its origin in the brain; thus one may readily understand the intimate connection of the two organs, and why any overwork or derangement of one will manifest symptoms in the other organ.

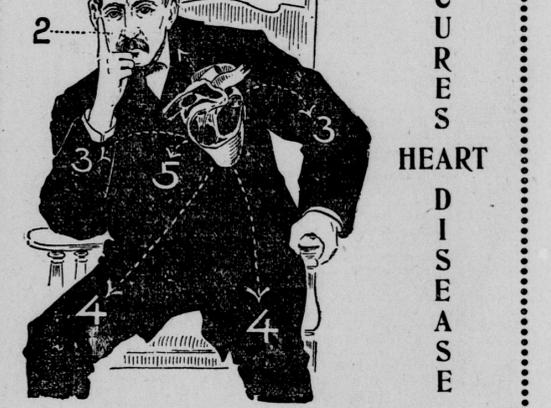

Hudyan will cure all stomach disorders and nerve disorders, therefore it will cure the most distressing symptoms of indigestion.

Alterations in the nerves are by far the most common cause of chronic and functional diseases for the organs of the body. Hudyan's curative and reconstructive influence upon the nervous system is a superior remedy for the cure of all chronic ailments.
