

ON TRUSTS.

Lecture by H. Weinstein Before Socialist Labor People. The San Francisco "Bulletin" says an eloquent and scholarly address was delivered by Colonel Harry Weinstein of Sacramento on Sunday night before Liberty Branch of the Socialist Labor party, upon "Government and Trusts."

The lecture was a reply to the oft-proposed question, "Will the Trusts Absorb the Government, or the Government the Trusts?" Colonel Weinstein spoke as follows: "When the economic mind of this country discovered that the competitive industrial and commercial system was most costly and destructive, and that the competitive warfare was forcing up the cost of production and of distribution to the highest maximum and reducing the margin of profit to the minimum by excessive underbidding, and causing overproduction and a glutting of the market, the remedy seemed to lie in overcoming the excessive competition."

"This could be done only by regulating production and distribution. Such regulation demanded united action on the part of producers and distributors and out of that desire sprang the organization which soon became known to the world as the trust."

"This new creation was a trust in the proper sense of the word. It consisted of a number of individuals, chosen for their known character and ability, to regulate the production and distribution of certain wares in the interest of all concerned. Soon the cry arose that the trust was inimical to the best interests of society; that it was a corruptor of the courts, of Legislatures and of public officials; that it was an oppressor of labor and tended to monopoly, which would wrong the people and would in time absorb the Government. So great was the hue and cry that Congress was moved to establish an anti-trust law, making the formation of trusts illegal."

"The world is so constituted that it cannot afford to lose anything that tends to the economy of production or distribution. The march of progress toward an upward world of today is better than the world of yesterday. The best human thought and energy of the day is working and striving for the betterment of humanity."

"Concentration of the powers of production and distribution is one of the mediums for the making of such betterment. In the interest of society and civilization it must and will go on. It is wiser for us to accommodate ourselves to the newer conditions and help them onward than to cry out against them and obstruct them—better for our own good, for the good of our country and for humanity."

BASEBALL TALENT.

What the "Sporting News" Has to Say of Sacramento Players. The St. Louis "Sporting News" of the 21st runs a fine portrait of "Pop" Lockhead, the supple shortstop from Sacramento, and has this to say of him: "Harry Lockhead, the shortstop of the Cleveland National League, is a graduate of the famous Gilt Edge team of Sacramento, Cal., from which Brooklyn secured Pitcher Hughes. Unfortunately for Lockhead, he made his debut into National League company with a tall team, and he acquitted himself creditably under the circumstances. Manager Quinn speaks highly of the Californian, whose good arm enabled him to complete many sensational plays by great throws to first. Lockhead batted at a .233 clip in 1898. He will play ball on the Pacific Coast during the winter."

Lockhead arrived home Sunday and will probably don a Gilt Edge uniform in games yet to be played. The same paper has this to say of Tommy Sheehan, the midge third baseman of the local team: "Some of the big league clubs have their eyes on Tommy Sheehan, who has covered third for Sacramento. President Hart of the Chicago club has instructed his representative there to watch Sheehan closely and not let any other club grab him up."

"Uncle Hank" Harris, the San Francisco baseball magnate, has had his eye on Tommy, and when last he was with this people he stated that he would in another season be one of the best third basemen in the country, and when "Uncle" speaks Eastern cranks listen. Tommy Sheehan is a Sacramento product. He is a well known citizen."

AMUSEMENTS.

There was a good house in attendance at the Clunie last night, when the Ellettsford Company produced the comedy-drama, "A Night's Match." It carried the younger portion of the audience by storm; the gallery was so insistent with encores that its applause became all but tireless in its exertions. The plot-driver scene was well worked and made very effective melodramatically. Miss Norton, the soubrette, had full swing for the parts she played, and improved the opportunity to the full. The piece was certainly a pronounced success, though not moving on a very intellectual plane. To-night, for the first time in this engagement, the entire company will be cast in the romantic and spectacular war drama, "The English." It is to be staged effectively, with scenery especially prepared for it and mechanical effects in number.
