

AN ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY.

EIGHTH WARD REPUBLICANS' HIGH JINKS.

A Crowded Meeting and Candidates' Addresses Greeted With Cheers.

One of the most enthusiastic, wholesome Republican rallies of the present municipal campaign occurred at the high jinks tendered under the auspices of the Eighth Ward Republican Club last evening.

Shortly after 8 o'clock p. m. the meeting was called to order by President Thomas James, who after a rousing speech on Republicanism, introduced as Chairman of the evening M. J. Curtis.

The latter in a few pertinent remarks introduced George H. Clark, who was greeted with round of round of cheers, as the next Mayor of Sacramento, and ended by saying: "On next Tuesday there will be a grand funeral in the city and the director of ceremonies will be the gentleman I have the honor of introducing."

In his introductory Mr. Clark spoke in eulogy of the Republican city convention that had placed his name at the head of their municipality.

He also pledged his word that he would be in no manner influenced by the political bosses who had of their own free will advocated his cause, but would appoint only such men as were fully capable of filling the duties of the offices within his gift, and he concluded with a glowing tribute to the absolute fitness of all the candidates for municipal office who had been chosen to represent the Republican party.

After a song and encore by Mr. Oliver, who was also compelled to render a dialect speech, the Chairman introduced J. W. Johnston, who first complimented the club on their large attendance and very manifest enthusiasm, and then drew the vivid picture of the era of prosperity consequent on the Republican administration of President McKinley, who had fulfilled every pledge made by his party that the mills would be opened and the laborers afforded work.

In conclusion he paid a glowing tribute to the ability of the local municipal Republican party, and earnestly advocated a solid vote for the entire ticket.

C. C. Robertson, candidate for City Collector, was then introduced and attempted to make a speech, but was greeted with such a round of continuous cheers that it was impossible to make his voice heard. He earnestly recommended his associates on the ticket and after heartily thanking the club, retired.

After songs by Mr. Hanlon, A. L. Frost appeared and spoke heartily of his associates and the party. He was followed by W. D. Lawton, who gave an account of his experience as a member of the Board of City Trustees and heartily endorsed Edward Hook, the candidate for that office from the Eighth Ward.

He spoke of him as a young man of stanch principle and unshaken honesty, as a man who would always be on the side of right and who could be in no way influenced by corporate interests, and assured the voters of the club that the ward's interests would be made paramount to Hook's own individual interests.

A. A. De Ligne was then presented and made an appeal on behalf of the ticket and the party. Mr. Hook, candidate for City Trustee, was greeted with a volley of applause and when allowed, said that he fully realized the many grave responsibilities entailed by the important office to which he aspired.

He realized that he was a young man, and in consequence had much to learn as to the best methods of conducting the business affairs of the city, but would assure the voters of the ward that he would earnestly consider every proposition for the benefit of the city that might be brought before the board, and would only vote when he was fully assured that he was voting for the city's best interests and those of the voters of the Eighth Ward, and at all times would be willing to listen to the advice of his constituency. He also pledged his honor that his voice would always be uplifted in behalf of the right and that he would earnestly combat the wrong, and be free from the influence of bossism in every respect.

WHERE IS BLAKE?

Is He the Same Man Who Is Wanted Here?

Acting Chief Robert W. Ash has received a letter from Sheriff W. V. Buckner of Hanford, Kings County, requesting the local police to be on the lookout for one Warren C. Blake, a musician, who had been sentenced to four months imprisonment in Hanford for the crime of petty embezzlement.

While on his way to the County Jail Blake gave up and escaped. He is described as a slender built man of about 25 years of age, of medium complexion, and is 5 feet 10 inches tall, had brown hair, slightly curly and is thin in the face.

The description also states that Blake was a good musician, had been leader of a band at Ukiah, and had taught music at Hornita, Mariposa County, at which place he married under the name of A. P. Humes.

When Chief Ash read this description he at once concluded that Warren C. Blake, alias A. P. Humes, was the same man who under the name of John Smith secured a valuable guitar and also a fine grand piano from a crippled music teacher named G. F. Jones of this city about three months ago under the representation that his sisters were to play for a church benefit.

WHEEL AND FRENCHMAN.

Story of a Versatile Frenchman and a Stolen Bicycle.

A bright, intelligent and presentable young Frenchman, about 28 years of age, appeared in the city a few days ago and represented to several citizens that he was John D. Sabatte, late a member of the Tenth Regiment, Philadelphia Volunteers, who saw service in the Philippines. He told a plausible story and impressed a good many people favorably.

He said that he was a soldier in France, but espousing the cause of his country he had been captured by the United States, enlisted, fought in Cuba, re-enlisted and went to the Philippines with the Pennsylvanians. That his father, because of his desertion, died of grief; that certain of his relatives came from France to look him up, but as he would not return they saw to his welfare in June, 1898, on the Bourgoine and were lost at sea when that vessel was run down.

He represented that on his return from the Philippines he was in the hospital in San Francisco five weeks, had no money on discharge and applying for work was turned away. He had no other to Sacramento, being told work had been secured for him on the railroad bridge over the American. He was found to be untrue, and he was therefore stranded here. It may be added that certain committees in San Francisco have sent men here on just such wild goose chases and without having places secured for them.

Sabatte said he wanted work, not money, but a chance to earn it. He could not show his discharge papers, a thing the honorably discharged soldier always clings to and usually keeps with him. But in lieu of a discharge picture in a San Francisco paper, which he said was his, and below which was his story of service and adventure, as above related substantially.

At one hotel he represented that he was employed in a large mercantile house here. In other places he told other stories. At the end of the week he worked some days on the bridge and would have wages due him on Saturday.

He fell in with some society young men, and being a singer, was introduced into the choir of the Episcopal Church, where he sang once or twice. To one lady he said he was a reporter on this paper, and he made the same representation to a merchant on K street.

Tuesday afternoon he was found in the hallway of the "Record-Union" office and ordered out. Tuesday night between 10 and 12 he re-entered the hallway—he says to rest—and stole a high grade bicycle belonging to one of the staff. He went direct with it to the saloon of Angelo Flores, Second and L streets, and borrowed $250 on it, saying he had wages coming on Saturday from the bridge contractors, and would then return it.

While sitting in a blind, Sheehan heard ducks approaching, and reached for his gun, which was at full cock. The gun went off and the charge carried away the index, middle and little finger of the right hand. The ring finger was broken and the middle finger was broken. Sheehan was treated at the Receiving Hospital by City Physician Nichols.

William McCants was in trouble. He was driving a light wagon along K street, near Eighth, yesterday, when he connected with the wheel of a cart driven by a woman. The collision got his rig started off its course, and a second later he crashed into John T. Williams, a member of the local lodge. McCants was lodged in jail by Officers Maley and Logue. Whether a charge other than drunk will be laid against him has not been decided.

A MINISTER'S MISTAKE.

The clergyman started to read it in his class in the best of good faith. This was found to be the case. "Take Kemp's Balm, the best Cough Cure." This was found to be the case. At the moment's hesitation, he turned it over and found on the other side the matter intended for the reading.
