

PROFITABLE OLIVE CULTURE

SECRETARY B. M. LELONG SPEAKS REGARDING IT.

Fertilization, Scientific Pruning and Irrigation the Factors Necessary to Success.

Secretary B. M. Lelong of the State Board of Horticulture was called on to speak regarding the olive, at the Pomological Society meeting in Anaheim last week.

"I find a great many trees do not produce because they are not growing under conditions adapted to that particular variety of the olive. From investigations I have found that some orchards waste their energies going to wood, while there is no effort being made by the owners to increase the bearing branches.

"Other trees are not trimmed as they should be. They should be so pruned as to keep a continuous succession of shoots for the bearing of fruit. The only orchard which can be expected to bear an annual crop is that in which scientific pruning is kept up.

"The black scale is also a great menace to the production of fruit. When the tree becomes badly infested it stops bearing. I have seen many cases where the scale has been removed and the tree has again begun to bear.

"I was criticized severely a number of years ago because I claimed that in many sections the olive must be irrigated the same as the orange tree. There were too many orchards which had been planted where water was not to be had.

"So far some types of the Mission olive have given the best results, though there are types of the Mission that are deficient in floral strength. During the discussion of the olive question here in Southern California it has been stated that the tree does not bear. This is too sweeping an assertion, and I want to warn you against condemning that tree.

"There are some points upon which the 'Fruit World' wished Mr. Lelong's opinion, and he added the following: "In years past many people recommended that the olive be planted on soils and locations where nothing else will grow, and that the olive would flourish under such conditions.

"I may also cite the walnut orchards, which everywhere are found to contain trees producing flowers of but one sex, or flowers of both sexes, or flowers with one sex coming out two or three weeks before the other. In other words, by the time the tree bore the female flowers, the males had dropped the pollen, either washed away by rain or carried away by the wind, and the failure of the female to receive the pollen from the male flower at the proper time shriveled away and dropped, therefore failing to set.

"There are numerous other trees of the several varieties which require cross fertilization in order to produce fruit. Of these I may mention the Carob tree, there being male and female trees, the males never producing pods, while the female does, from the pollen it receives from the male tree.

considerable length by Mr. Lelong in the report of the State Board of Horticulture for 1895-96, and any person who has an orchard of any kind which does not produce fruit will stand a chance of learning the cause for the failure by securing a copy of that report and reading up on the question of floral fertilization.

GOING TO HIS REST.

Death of Colonel Cornelius V. Kellogg Yesterday.

Many friends of Colonel C. V. Kellogg, the well-known hardware merchant on J street, will be both pained and surprised to learn of his death, which occurred at his home yesterday.

Mr. Kellogg was born in East Hartford, Conn., in 1840, and when but 11 years old became an apprentice in Colt's pistol factory, where he remained four years. Then he spent a year at sea. In 1857 he came to California and entered the employ of his brother Leonard in this city.

In 1861 he enlisted in Company E, First Infantry, California Volunteers, and served as such for four years. He was the seat of war in the East, but instead was sent to look after hostile Indians in Arizona and New Mexico. The regiment was mustered out in 1864. Mr. Kellogg then returned to his old home in Hartford, Conn., and after spending four years there in the employ of a prominent hardware firm he again came to California and secured an interest in his brother's business in this city.

In a short time Mr. Kellogg became identified with the local military and joined the Sarsfield Guard (now Company G, Second Infantry). In 1872 he was elected Colonel of the regiment and served as such for four years. He was a very active member of Summer Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and at one time its Commander. He also held several positions in the G. A. R. Department. He was a member of the Masonic order, the United Workmen, and Knights of Honor.

Mr. Kellogg left a wife and three children. He was married in 1830 to Miss Alice Vorrey of Hartford, Conn. Since the death of his brother in 1884 the business in this city has been conducted by Colonel Kellogg, and it is thought he leaves his family in very comfortable circumstances.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Two Arrests Made by Special Officer Payne.

A man named Joseph Martin, who was hauling potatoes from the lowlands north of the city, was yesterday arrested by Humane Officer Payne for driving a horse with a horribly diseased shoulder. Martin said he got the horse in a trade only a few days ago, and its shoulder was sore then. He said he took from the sore a hard substance like a core and had since been driving the horse. He knew, however, that the animal was not in fit condition for hauling heavy loads.

Payne had the horse taken from the wagon, and allowed Martin to go on his own recognizance until the case comes up in court.

The other arrest was that of J. Diersen, who was using in a delivery wagon an animal with a foot so badly diseased that, Payne says, it could scarcely put it to the ground. The horse had been under treatment for several months.

As Officer Payne was leaving the Police Station a drunken woman was brought in, and he learned that she had left a horse tied up in the rain at Third and U streets, where it had been for several hours. He had the animal taken to a stable.

If the horses of this community—in fact, of the county—could get together and hold a convention they would give Mr. Payne a very warm vote of thanks for all that he has done to protect them from their worst enemies, the men who owe them every possible kindness.

And the chickens and turkeys would say "Amen," if they could.

BRUTAL ACT.

A Man Destroys a Horse's Eye With a Stone.

There was a teamster, with blood in his eye, hunting for a man yesterday, and if he had found him one or the other would have received a thrashing. The teamster was driving out of town yesterday with a string of fourteen horses and a prairie schooner loaded to the guards. On Twenty-eighth street, as the outfit passed a man who was waiting for a street car, the latter picked up a stone, threw it at the horse, and then hastened away. The driver did not think it worth while resenting the act, and kept on his way.

He soon noticed, however, that one of the horses was acting uneasily, shaking its head and giving other indications of something being wrong. The teamster got it up perch and investigated, only to find that one of the animal's eyes had been destroyed—actually cut out of its socket—by the stone the man had thrown. Before the teamster could attend to the poor horse the stone-thrower had boarded a car and come into town.

The man was laid before Humane Officer Payne, and he is making an effort to find the man who threw the stone. The teamster said he did not care about arresting the fellow, all he wanted was to just get his hands on him. If the Humane Society cared to deal with what would be left of the fellow he had no objection, but insisted on having the first whack at him.

ANOTHER PATERNAL "JIT."

Had His Infant on His Wheel—Narrow Escape From Death.

A few days ago the "Record-Union" called attention to a so-called "accident" in Los Angeles, wherein a man caused the death of his child by carrying it on the handlebars of his bicycle and dumping it in front of a locomotive.

The suggestion was then made that such a case should be prosecuted. It is not always "the unexpected that happens." One day this week a man rode a bicycle along the cement walk on N street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth, and he had a small child strapped in a seat on top of the handlebars.

Some schoolboys were playing marbles close to the walk—there being no fence there—and one of them, while on his knees, happened to shove one of his feet backward on the walk just as the wheelman came along.

The result was that the wheel ran over the boy's foot and was capsized. The man was, fortunately, expert enough to alight on his feet and catch the child before its head struck the stone walk, else it would probably have been killed.

The City Trustees should add a section to the ordinance governing the use of bicycles, making it a crime for any person to carry a child on a wheel.
