Description of the Adams Funeral Pageant.

We copy the following full account of the ceremony at Mr. Adams' funeral, from the Washington Union of Saturday night, 26th ult.

We have never witnessed a more august spectacle than was this day exhibited in honor of Mr. Adams. The crowd was immense. The Hall of the House of Representatives, crowded with the corpse and coffin of the late President, was the scene of the funeral pageant.

"The Season" Heretics.

Our Northern friends would be not a little surprised to witness the appearance of things, in the Vegetable world, that characterizes the neighborhood of our "Crescent City" about these times.

For some two weeks past we have been more and more surrounded by sights of spring—the green leaves, the blossoming of early trees, and so on.

At the period of this present writing, vegetable heresies are as far advanced as it is the latitude of New York by May, or the latter part of April.

The beautiful growth of our orange trees strikes the stranger always with a pleasant feeling—and particularly when he sees them growing, now, in full verdure in the open grounds.

It is not only the planting of shade trees, in some of our public places, as in Lafayette Square and Canal street, does not succeed altogether well. Is this unavoidable the case? Surely perseverance and care will overcome the difficulty.

Nothing could be pleasanter or more grateful, during the hot season in our city, than the refreshing presence of numerous large shade trees through our streets, and, indeed all about the city.

We find some remarks in the South Carolina newspaper, which will be of use for this latitude, too, on the subject of shrubbery and shade trees, as follows:

Shrub trees are indispensable in our climate, shade trees and in front of our dwellings. In the first settlement of our country, trees were not planted, and the natural enemies of the soil, and they were cut down without mercy; in many instances not a single tree was suffered to remain near the dwelling.

A better feeling in their favor began to manifest itself in many cases among our improving planters. Shade trees have been planted and grown around their dwellings. Some efforts, too, are beginning to be made to have the different choice varieties of fruits added to their orchards, and ornamental shrubs and trees are to be found around the homestead, while the honey-suckle, the climbing rose, and Carolina's favorite jasmine, freely trained, give to the place an air of beauty and elegance. These domestic and uncultivated shrubs, with a few well chosen, and the little ornaments which a natural hand might show around it, is a pleasing contrast.

The houses, which possess an inherent love for shade, and a taste for the cultivation of the garden, are to be seen in the exterior as well as the interior of their dwellings.

When we see a neglected garden, and a bare yard without a shrub or flower in beauty, it is not difficult to imagine the ladies who reside there, and who, in this respect, are beginning to be improved, and in some instances we know we shall not be far in error.

We hope truly that a spirit of encouragement to the growth of these children of the soil, flowers and shrubbery, will not be always kept down in our city, by the engrossing business cares of so many of our citizens. We are convinced that the development of this spirit could much beautify and improve the place, and make it more a place of homes.

THE COMEY ARTISTS AT CHARLESTON, S. C.—On the evening of Feb. 23d, the municipal authorities of Charleston, S. C., were convened to discuss the propriety of prohibiting an exhibition of the "Amel Artistic," which was advertised to take place at the Theatre that evening.

The Mayor, Mr. Preston, the Manager of the Theatre, and Professor Koch, appeared before the committee, and in answer to inquiries on the subject, stated that there was no indelicacy whatever in the exhibition proposed to be given—the costumes the same as usually worn on the stage in Roman characters; and requested the Mayor and Aldermen to attend the Theatre in the evening to judge for themselves of the propriety of the entertainment.

Resolved, That the Mayor be requested to take charge of the subject, and exercise his discretion in stopping the exhibition, should it conflict, in his opinion, with public morals.
