England.

The banquet to the Queen, in Guildhall, London, passed off most satisfactorily.

Alluding to the Queen's visit to the city of London, for the purpose of being present at the grand concert given by the Lord Mayor, the Evening Times says:

"It was well timed; it has shown the foreign strangers in London that a constitutional sovereign reigns in the hearts of a free people, and can go abroad amidst their rejoicings, unprotected by military bayonets and military."

A moral cannot fail to be drawn from the civic invitation to royalty by all who see how state pageantry is managed in despotism.

"The events of Wednesday will make an abiding impression on the thousands of continental visitors who are now in the British metropolis, in the greatest concentration on earth. The development of the liberal institutions, and while the energies of the nation are reflected in its material prosperity, the power of self-government is witnessed in the orderly disposition of the myriads whose cheer and salutations fell so gratefully on the sovereign's ear."

It is much to have succeeded so admirably with the Hyde Park exhibition, but it is still more consolatory to show our neighbors at such a time the nice adaptability of our political institutions to every phase of social existence.

There are hundreds of thousands of human voices loosed the midnight air with vociferous cheers, that spring from the hearts, in favor of the ruler of a great people, and that the great monarch, in her recognitions of her mild and gentle sway, at once complimentary to the sovereign herself, and to the intelligence and gallantry of her subjects."

The Ecological Association were invited to the celebration, and were the first time in London. A motion in the lower House for leave to introduce a bill for the protection of Parliamentary elections, by the introduction of the bill, has been rejected by a strong majority.

The annual Stock Exchange took place in London on the 10th and 11th, and was unusually attended, despite the extreme unpopularity of the war.

A grand fête was to have taken place on the 11th, on board the U. S. steamship Atlantic, after which there would be a monster review at the Tower Hall.

Many distinguished Americans were invited to the Crystal Palace, and nearly 20,000 visitors were present, a very considerable increase on the numbers of the preceding Friday.

On Saturday the receipts were £1,555 15s., and the number entering the building 25,000. The Queen, Prince Albert, and the Princess Victoria, visited the building at their usual early hour.

Opinions in regard to the Compromise.

On William Bigler, democratic candidate for Governor in Pennsylvania, has at length publicly defined his position in regard to the Fugitive Slave Law. He says:

"The fundamental law of our land cannot be maintained in part and abandoned in part. The constitution must be maintained as a whole. It is the clear intention of this instrument that every fugitive from labor shall be returned to his master with as few exceptions as possible. It is the duty of the people of the free States, however, to support it in their consciences, to maintain and carry out (as fully as any other clear obligation of the constitution) the present law, and in view of the extension of the law, and with the sanction of those who are charged with the administration of the law."

Gov. Johnson, it will be perceived, takes a similar position. He said in a late message to the Legislature:

"It has been intimated, that of questionable origin, the institution of slavery, and the rendition of fugitives from labor, have been in the dictations of a disregard to her Constitutional obligations. To the clause of the Constitution relative to fugitives from labor, and the legislation made thereon, there ever has been in Pennsylvania, with all her avowed aversion to domestic slavery, implicit obedience."

The recently-quoted fugitive slave law, while it remains a statute, demands the support of all her citizens, and unless our written constitution is worthless parchment, until the judiciary declare it unconstitutional, must be esteemed a constitutional enactment.

Masonic Contributions to the National Monument.

The Grand Lodge of Masons in Maryland have prepared for them, by Mr. Alexander Gadden, marble worker, corner Sharp and German streets, a beautiful block of marble, destined for the National Washington Monument. The block is of the best Maryland white marble, about four feet by two wide. Over the top it is inscribed: "By the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Maryland; built this, in the center, is sculptured, with much skill and elegance, an emblematic design, representing a broken column, one fragment resting on the other prostrate on the ground, and significant of the fall of a tower; beside the upright fragment is a column, with his eye on his breast, the inverted hour glass at his feet. In front is the same altar, with an open Bible upon it bearing the scales and compass. The eyes of Time are directed to a base inscribed above the altar, which is emblematic of the high moral attributes and character of Washington. At the side of the altar a root of Jesse is springing up, in token of the immortality of the good name of Washington, by the Rev. Mr. Milburn, and will be generally recognized as equally pleasing and appropriate."
