EXTRACTED SPLINTERS.
Ancient Grease—Old butter.
An old letter—An aged landlord.
Good taste is the flower of good sense.
"Down in front"—An incipient moustache.
The organ grinder must exert a strong turn for music.

An elevated railway station is, of course, station airy.
Is the fellow who tends an oyster saloon an oyster supe?
There are musical flies. People often speak of that base fly.
It takes a great deal of log-rolling to make a candidate boom.
A yacht can stand on a tack without saying anything. A man can't.
When a man's temper gets the best of him it reveals the worst of him.

The improvident man is hard to kill, because he won't die worth a cent.
You can't tell the bent of a girl's mind by the bend in the hat she wears.

It is one of the most difficult feats imaginable for a bee to hold its stung.
When a man gets tanned by the sun, does not his face wear an orbburn hue?

Whom the gods wish to destroy they first tell that the gun isn't loaded, and that there's nothing like kerosene to light the fire with.

A young lady, in a letter to a friend, states that she is not engaged, but she sees a cloud above the horizon about as large as a man's hand.

Some men are captivated by a woman's laugh, just as some men predict a pleasant day, because the sun shines out for a moment. They forget the chances for squalls.

An Irish crier at Ballinasloe being ordered to clear the court, did so, by this announcement: "Now, then, all ye blackguards that isn't lawyers, must lave the court."

An unfortunate Mistake.—Magistrate—"You are charged with having emptied a basin of water over the plaintiff." Woman—"Sure, your honor, you must forgive me;
in the dark I took the gentleman for my husband."

It was a very mean man who slipped his hands between a young man and a young lady in the front seat, as the train entered a tunnel.
He said the young man's beard was very stiff, but the pressure on the other side of the hand felt like the tips of a fur tie.

"That land ought to be used for a cemetery," remarked a gentleman as the train glided by a field in which sand and stone were the principal productions.
"Excellent idea," replied a friend,
"for nothing but the dead could ever be raised there."
Three medical celebrities met together to consult at the sick bed of General X—. After they got the General rings for his man-servant.
"Well, Jacques, you showed those gentlemen out, what did they say?"
"Ah, General, they seemed to differ with each other; the big fat one said that they must have a little patience, and at the autopsy—whatever that may be—they would find out what the matter was."
