IRISH BULLS.

The following letter, supposed to have been written by Sir Boyle Roche, during the Irish rebellion of 1798, gives an amusing collection of his various blunders. Perhaps he never put so many on paper at a time, but his peculiar turn for "bulls" is here shown at one view:

"Dear Sir—Having now a little peace and quiet, I sit down to inform you of the bustle and confusion we are in from the bloodthirsty rebels, many of whom are now, thank God, killed and dispersed. We are in a pretty mess; can get nothing to eat and no wine to drink except whisky. When we sit down to dinner we are obliged to keep both hands armed. While I write this letter I have my sword in one hand and my pistol in the other. I concluded from the beginning that this would be the end, and I am right, for it is not half over yet. At present there are such goings-on that everything is at a stand-still. I should have answered your letter a fortnight ago, but I only received it this morning; indeed, hardly a mail arrives safe, without being robbed.

"No longer ago than yesterday the mail-coach was robbed near this town; the bags had been very judiciously left behind, for fear of accident, and, by great good luck, there was nobody in the coach, except two outside passengers, who had nothing for the thieves to take.

Last Thursday an alarm was given that a gang of rebels, in full retreat from Drogheda, were advancing under the French standard, but they had no colors nor any drums, except bag-pipes. Immediately every man in the place, including the women and children, ran out to meet them. We soon found our force a great deal too little, and were far too near to think of retreating. Death was in every face, and to it we went. By the time half our party were killed we began to be all alive.

"Fortunately the rebels had no guns except pistols, cutlasses, and pikes, and we had plenty of muskets and ammunition. We put them all to the sword; not a soul of them escaped, except some that were drowned in an adjoining bog.
After the action was over we went to rummage their camp. All we found was a few empty bottles filled with water, and a bundle of blank French commissions, filled out with Irish names.

"Adieu. I have only time to add that I am yours in haste. B. R."

The prayer of Socrates: "Oh, beloved Pan, and all ye other gods, grant me to become beautiful in the inner man, and that whatever outward things I have may be at peace with those within. May I deem the wise man rich, and may I have such a portion of gold as none but a prudent man can either bear or employ. Do we need anything else, Phaedrus? For myself I have prayed enough."—Plato.

Oil cake and cotton seed meal is valuable for horses, cows, sheep and hogs, and keeps them healthy and vigorous. When fed with roots the effect on animal life is astonishing.
