

St. Tammany Farmer.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Melons are coming in and going down. Court week passed off very quietly. Eggs are a little backward in coming forward this year.

The Police Jury will meet on the second Tuesday in July. Rice is looking well, and soon the harvest will begin.

The Parish School Board will meet on the first Saturday in July. Our summer visitors are rapidly increasing in number, there being new arrivals every day.

In a short time the first bale of cotton will arrive, soon to be followed by the oyster boat. We have printed a number of raffle tickets lately, but the law won't allow us to mention it.

The Luna residence, in Covington, in good repair, is for rent. Convenient location. See advertisement. The Salmen Manufacturing Company will be sold out at Commissioner's sale in July. See advertisement.

Mr. C. W. Thompson left last Wednesday with a fine assortment of merchandise for the popular house of Mr. E. B. Thomas, of Thomsville. Dandruff is an exudation from the pores of the skin that spreads and dries, forming scurf and causing the hair to fall out. Hall's Hair Renewer cures it.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.—Last Friday, in Nashville, Tenn., Congressman Price, of Louisiana, had thirteen valuable horses, worth $13,000, destroyed by fire. STRAYED.—From Barker's Mill, in the Second Ward, a Bay Mare, slightly away-backed, with fetters mark on left shoulder. A reasonable reward will be paid for her return to Barker's Mill.

Our office "paste pot" comes in handy when we have to stick postage stamps on letters. It wasn't this way before the war, when there were not so many ways of monopolizing the "glue."

We learn that the drama "Emeralds" which was performed in the Town Hall last December, will be repeated at an early date, for the benefit of the talented young writer, Miss Mary Belle Poole.

There was some lively bidding at the Tax Sales last Saturday, and the places sold brought unusually good prices, which shows that property in St. Tammany parish is steadily increasing in value.

District Court has been in session all the week, Judge Robt. R. Ed presiding and Hon. Bolivar Edwards District Attorney, at his post. Our court reporter has been too busy to give us items, but we will give the list of cases tried next week.

DIED.—In Covington, La., Friday, June 28, 1895, at 8 A. M., Mrs. Wilhelmina Munsch, relict of the late John T. Munsch, aged 65 years. The funeral will take place this (Saturday) morning, at 10 o'clock, from the Gouthier House. Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend.

Mr. Benj. Feld, dealer in watches, clocks and jewelry, who has been doing business in our parish for several years past, will pay regular monthly visits to Mandeville, Madisonville and Covington. Jewelry of all kinds for sale, and repairs promptly attended to. All goods and work in his line guaranteed to give satisfaction. See advertisement another column.

ORDAINED.—Rev. A. R. Edbrooke was ordained to the priesthood at St. Paul's Church, New Orleans, last Sunday, Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, of Mississippi, officiating. Rev. Edbrooke is a hard working and conscientious minister, a calling to which he seems peculiarly well suited, and his many friends in Covington will rejoice at the news of his promotion.

The fifth annual commencement of the Deaf-Mute Institute, at Chinchuba, occurred last Wednesday. Many visitors were present from New Orleans, Covington and Mandeville. The pupils acquitted themselves in a highly creditable manner, and evinced great progress in their studies. An attractive program was prepared, consisting of recitations, singing, drills, etc., and was carried out with rare ability. This noble institution is doing good work, under the fostering care of Father Maguet, and deserves liberal encouragement on the part of the public.

Next Saturday, July 6, a grand entertainment will take place in the hall of the U. F. B. Association, at Madisonville, given by the ladies of St. Francis Xavier's Catholic Congregation, for the purpose of raising funds toward the erection of a new church building. The cause is a most worthy one, and even a necessarily, considering the very dilapidated condition of the old structure. We understand that the managing committee have spared nothing to make it a most enjoyable affair. There will be fine vocal and instrumental music, piano and mandolin solos and duets, nice tables, all kinds of refreshments, sweet and cold. A fine restaurant will save you from the worry of preparing a supper at home. A band of ten musicians will delight your ears. By the kindness of the manager of the steamer New Camelia, our Mandeville friends will be enabled to give us a call, as the steamer will leave Madisonville Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, and land at Mandeville.

The dwelling of Z. L. Magee, president of the Public School Board, who resides four miles east of Franklinton, was burned last Thursday week. Mr. Magee and family barely escaped from the burning building. Only a small part of the bedding was saved. A large stock of provisions, all the furniture, valuable tools and many highly prized family relics were consumed. Probable loss about $1000; insured for $600.

St. Tammany Lodge, No. 96, K. of F., will hold memorial service on Sunday, July 14th. The public and brother Knights are invited to attend. See notice.

PERSONALS. Miss Annie Willis, of Meridian, Miss., is here on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Harralson. Prof. J. Hanno Deiler, of Tulane University, New Orleans, arrived with his family last week and are occupying their summer residence, on the banks of the Bogue Falls. Mr. Wilfred Masson, Miss Marie Masson and Mrs. E. Rags, of New Orleans, spent last Sunday with relatives in Covington. An enjoyable dance was given by the Covington young men at Castle Hill last Saturday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hawkins. Misses Lucy Bohmer and Lillie Huett, of New Orleans, are the guests of their cousin the Misses Warren. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Franklin have returned from a visit to relatives and friends in Tennessee. Mr. Willie Alford, of Tangipahoa, visited Covington this week. Miss May Ernst, of New Orleans, arrived last Wednesday, and is the guest of Miss Bertha Wunderlich. Mrs. North Abbot and little daughter Clara, of New Orleans, are here on a visit to her sister, Mrs. H. H. Smith. Miss Pauline Martindale has returned from a visit to the Crescent City. Mrs. Wunderlich and daughter Bertha, of New Orleans, are occupying their lovely home in the suburbs. Mr. Thos. Sully and family were among the guests at Claiborne Cottages this week. Mr. C. V. Wunderlich, who is at present connected with a Chicago house, paid a pleasant visit to his relatives and friends in Covington this week. Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hawkins left last Wednesday for their future home in Bel Air, Md. They take with them the best wishes of all Covington. Mr. Alfred P. Alexius, one of our St. Tammany boys, who received the scholarship of this parish through Hon. Representative Jas. H. Murphy, received his diploma last week and is now spending the vacation with his parents. Miss Katie Kentzel is spending a few weeks with her cousins, the Misses Singleton, in Jackson, La. Mrs. Dr. F. Julius Heintz has returned from a few months stay in the Crescent City. Miss Minna Wachenfeld, of New Orleans, arrived last Sunday with her little sister Ida, to spend the summer with their aunt, Mrs. Professor J. Hanno Deiler.

MARRIED.—At Madisonville, La., Wednesday, June 26, 1895, in the Protestant Church, by Rev. W. T. Currie, Mr. Edward Heugan and Miss Ninie Chatterlier, all of this parish. The East Louisiana R. R. has made a change in its schedule, and now leaves Covington and Mandeville, enroute days, at 6:15 p. m., thereby enabling visitors to remain an hour longer in the afternoon. This is a good move and will be appreciated by the traveling public. See notice in another column. The Town Hall was crowded last Wednesday night on the occasion of the entertainment and ball given by Covington Lodge, No. 121, Knights of Pythias, for the benefit of their Castle Hall fund. The vocal and instrumental music was exceedingly well rendered, under the leadership of the talented New Orleans artist, Prof. H. Wehrman, and was repeatedly encored. The grand ball, which followed, was enjoyed till a late hour, and the refreshment tables were well patronized. The entire affair was most enjoyable and a complete success, and the gallant Knights doubtless realized a good sum in aid of their Castle Hall fund.

MARRIED. In Covington, on Wednesday, June 19, 1895, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. A. Evans, Miss Lillie E. Evans and Mr. Gilbert S. Hawkins were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony. Only a few friends and the immediate family witnessed the beautiful and impressive ceremony. The spacious parlors were transformed into a garden fair, adorned with flowers, blossoms and ferns. At the appointed hour Mr. Hawkins, attended by his best man, Mr. Chas. H. Kammer, entered, followed by the lovely maid of honor, Miss Jessie Evans, who was charmingly gowned in pure white. Leaving on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. Evans, came the bride, "the fair one," clad in an exquisite creation of rich, snowy white silk, elegantly trimmed with sprays of orange blossoms and white of the valley. The bride wore the breastpin that was worn by her grandmother and mother when they were married. A slay veil of illusion completely enveloped the graceful and queenly girl in its cloud-like folds. Rev. Jos. Koeger performed the impressive ceremony, after which followed an informal reception. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Fountain, C. Childress, M. L. Childress, Belle Kennedy, Adrienne Givens, S. L. Kennedy, Eva Kennedy, Mary Hossmer, Messrs. A. L. Evans, E. J. Frederick, E. D. Evans, Alex. Kennedy, Julian and Louis Smith, Willie Kennedy and master Cyril D. McCann. After a few days of Covington sunshine, the happy couple left Wednesday for their future home in Bel Air, Md., followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

MARRIED. In Covington, on Wednesday, June 19, 1895, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. A. Evans, Miss Lillie E. Evans and Mr. Gilbert S. Hawkins were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony. Only a few friends and the immediate family witnessed the beautiful and impressive ceremony. The spacious parlors were transformed into a garden fair, adorned with flowers, blossoms and ferns. At the appointed hour Mr. Hawkins, attended by his best man, Mr. Chas. H. Kammer, entered, followed by the lovely maid of honor, Miss Jessie Evans, who was charmingly gowned in pure white. Leaving on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. Evans, came the bride, "the fair one," clad in an exquisite creation of rich, snowy white silk, elegantly trimmed with sprays of orange blossoms and white of the valley. The bride wore the breastpin that was worn by her grandmother and mother when they were married. A slay veil of illusion completely enveloped the graceful and queenly girl in its cloud-like folds. Rev. Jos. Koeger performed the impressive ceremony, after which followed an informal reception. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Fountain, C. Childress, M. L. Childress, Belle Kennedy, Adrienne Givens, S. L. Kennedy, Eva Kennedy, Mary Hossmer, Messrs. A. L. Evans, E. J. Frederick, E. D. Evans, Alex. Kennedy, Julian and Louis Smith, Willie Kennedy and master Cyril D. McCann. After a few days of Covington sunshine, the happy couple left Wednesday for their future home in Bel Air, Md., followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

PIONIC.—There will be a Basket Picnic at Liberty Schoolhouse, on Thursday, July 4. The Public are cordially invited to attend. Refreshments and dancing, both during the day and night. Refreshments can be had on the grounds at reasonable prices. FRANK P. BERRY.

MARRIED.—At Madisonville, La., Wednesday, June 26, 1895, in the Protestant Church, by Rev. W. T. Currie, Mr. Edward Heugan and Miss Ninie Chatterlier, all of this parish. The East Louisiana R. R. has made a change in its schedule, and now leaves Covington and Mandeville, enroute days, at 6:15 p. m., thereby enabling visitors to remain an hour longer in the afternoon. This is a good move and will be appreciated by the traveling public. See notice in another column.

The Town Hall was crowded last Wednesday night on the occasion of the entertainment and ball given by Covington Lodge, No. 121, Knights of Pythias, for the benefit of their Castle Hall fund. The vocal and instrumental music was exceedingly well rendered, under the leadership of the talented New Orleans artist, Prof. H. Wehrman, and was repeatedly encored. The grand ball, which followed, was enjoyed till a late hour, and the refreshment tables were well patronized. The entire affair was most enjoyable and a complete success, and the gallant Knights doubtless realized a good sum in aid of their Castle Hall fund.

MARRIED. In Covington, on Wednesday, June 19, 1895, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. A. Evans, Miss Lillie E. Evans and Mr. Gilbert S. Hawkins were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony. Only a few friends and the immediate family witnessed the beautiful and impressive ceremony. The spacious parlors were transformed into a garden fair, adorned with flowers, blossoms and ferns. At the appointed hour Mr. Hawkins, attended by his best man, Mr. Chas. H. Kammer, entered, followed by the lovely maid of honor, Miss Jessie Evans, who was charmingly gowned in pure white. Leaving on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. Evans, came the bride, "the fair one," clad in an exquisite creation of rich, snowy white silk, elegantly trimmed with sprays of orange blossoms and white of the valley. The bride wore the breastpin that was worn by her grandmother and mother when they were married. A slay veil of illusion completely enveloped the graceful and queenly girl in its cloud-like folds. Rev. Jos. Koeger performed the impressive ceremony, after which followed an informal reception. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Fountain, C. Childress, M. L. Childress, Belle Kennedy, Adrienne Givens, S. L. Kennedy, Eva Kennedy, Mary Hossmer, Messrs. A. L. Evans, E. J. Frederick, E. D. Evans, Alex. Kennedy, Julian and Louis Smith, Willie Kennedy and master Cyril D. McCann. After a few days of Covington sunshine, the happy couple left Wednesday for their future home in Bel Air, Md., followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

MARRIED. In Covington, on Wednesday, June 19, 1895, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. A. Evans, Miss Lillie E. Evans and Mr. Gilbert S. Hawkins were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony. Only a few friends and the immediate family witnessed the beautiful and impressive ceremony. The spacious parlors were transformed into a garden fair, adorned with flowers, blossoms and ferns. At the appointed hour Mr. Hawkins, attended by his best man, Mr. Chas. H. Kammer, entered, followed by the lovely maid of honor, Miss Jessie Evans, who was charmingly gowned in pure white. Leaving on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. Evans, came the bride, "the fair one," clad in an exquisite creation of rich, snowy white silk, elegantly trimmed with sprays of orange blossoms and white of the valley. The bride wore the breastpin that was worn by her grandmother and mother when they were married. A slay veil of illusion completely enveloped the graceful and queenly girl in its cloud-like folds. Rev. Jos. Koeger performed the impressive ceremony, after which followed an informal reception. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Fountain, C. Childress, M. L. Childress, Belle Kennedy, Adrienne Givens, S. L. Kennedy, Eva Kennedy, Mary Hossmer, Messrs. A. L. Evans, E. J. Frederick, E. D. Evans, Alex. Kennedy, Julian and Louis Smith, Willie Kennedy and master Cyril D. McCann. After a few days of Covington sunshine, the happy couple left Wednesday for their future home in Bel Air, Md., followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do not weep as those who have no hope, for her earthly lot is her heavenly gain. To the bereaved we would say, weep not. She is free from toil and care, and lives as so to meet her in the 'Celestial City,' where waiting is no more." W. A. CLARK.

OBITUARY. Mrs. Penile Fitzgerald (nee Williams) was born in St. Tammany Parish, La., in 1861. Deceased this day May 18, 1895, after a prolonged illness which she bore with patience. She was united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Sept. 7, 1883. Her life was a life of consecration to God, and always willing to make a sacrifice for the comfort of others. To the sick and sorrowing she was sympathetic and always ready to contribute to their needs. Her devotion for her home and church was unexpressed. The minister always met with a cordial welcome in her home. She was truly a "mother in heaven." She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother and a consistent Christian. The writer had the privilege of being with her during her illness, and always found her trusting in Jesus. Only a short time before the spirit winged its way home to God she sang: "Jesus can make a dying bed, Feed soft as downy pillows are, She leaves a heart-broken husband, seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her, but we do