

FOREIGNERS IN AMERICA.

ROSSIA has furnished us with 118,000 people. POLAND has furnished us with 147,000 immigrants. The Germans number 3,000,000 of our population. CHINA has given us 108,000 men, mostly laundrymen. AUSTRIA has sent to our shores 133,000 of her population. In 1890 the adult males of foreign birth numbered 4,848,452. DENMARK has 21 per cent. of native-born children of American parents. The Italians lead the foreign element in only one city, New Orleans. ITALY and Russia have each furnished about 103,000 immigrants to America. A LITTLE over one-sixth of the whole population of Boston is of Irish birth. OVER 19 per cent. of the foreign population in the Atlantic states is illiterate. The Irish lead the foreign population in six cities and are second in fifteen.

Rufus Sanders Once More Unto the Breach. The End and Marvelous Death of Little Jim Dargin. The Omission Father Had in His Mind. The Boy's Character and Future Visions. (Copyright 1905.)

Over there at old Cool Springs church there is a little new grave, with the hog weeds and the daisies growing round a boy's tomb. Little Jim Dargin, which got killed in a runaway scrape the last of last spring, lies buried there. One day last week I went to see the grave, and I was surprised to find a young man sitting on the ground by the grave, and he was looking at the tombstone with a sad and thoughtful expression.

DRABY NOBLEMEN.

Lady Ideas of Some Persons Born to the Purple. The late crown prince of Spain is said to have been an energetic, intelligent student, whose ambition was to become a scholar and statesman. If he had lived to wear the crown, his influence would probably have been favorable to the advance of the Spanish people in civilization.

Another royal prince—the prince of Naples, he is stated, lofty ideas as to the duty and work of a ruler. In spite of his weak health, he is an indefatigable student, rising at dawn every day, and working with the tutors until noon.

At a recent reception in Rome he addressed every minister and diplomatist present in his own language, speaking with fluency and precision, and started the discussion of the laws, and present condition of the armies, navies and commerce of their respective countries, with all of which he showed familiarity.

From a recent issue of the "Littell's Living Age" we learn that the prince of Naples, he is stated, lofty ideas as to the duty and work of a ruler. In spite of his weak health, he is an indefatigable student, rising at dawn every day, and working with the tutors until noon.

THE GUNMAKER OF LILON.

Jefferson M. Clough Refuses a Tempting Offer from the Chinese Government. The Health Was Too Poor to Permit Attention to Business—A Great Sufferer for Many Years, But Has Now Recovered. (From the Springfield, Mass., States.)

There isn't a gun manufacturer in the United States who does not know Jefferson M. Clough, and why? Because he has been intimately associated with the development of the two best American rifles, the Remington and Winchester. For years he was superintendent of the Remington & Sons' gun factory at Ilion, N. Y.

After leaving there he refused a tempting offer of the Chinese Government to go to China to superintend their government factories, and accepted a position as superintendent of the Winchester-Arms Co., at New Haven, at a salary of $7,500 a year.

It was after this long term of active labor that a man who has found himself incapacitated for further service by the emphysema which had laid upon him and resigned his position as superintendent of the Winchester-Arms Co., at New Haven, at a salary of $7,500 a year.

Being a man of means he did not spare the cost and was treated by leading physicians at New Haven and at other places without receiving any benefit worth noting.

During the summer of 1903 and the winter of 1904 Mr. Clough was confined to his home at Ilion, N. Y., and was unable to do any of his business, and suffering continually with acute pain, and with no desire for food, nor was he able to walk.

Early in the year 1904 Mr. Clough heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and began to take them, and to his surprise he found that he was able to do his business, and was able to walk, and was able to do his business, and was able to walk.

He has since then been able to do his business, and was able to walk, and was able to do his business, and was able to walk, and was able to do his business, and was able to walk.

GAUGE OF BICYCLE SPEED.

An Expert Rider Gives a Rule That is Claimed to be Reliable. The recent rapid growth of the list of fatal accidents by bicycling has convinced the public that the local laws regulating the speed of wheeling within city lines need to be strictly enforced.

To be compelled to keep within a speed of eight miles an hour on a stretch of perfect asphalt is not a little irksome to the expert wheelman, and riders are often tempted to exceed that speed and run the risk of detection on the strength of the difficulty the police will have in determining how fast the machine is traveling.

This difficulty, however, is only fancied. It is the easiest thing in the world to measure the speed accurately enough to swear to it without reading the cyclometer or knowing the distance ridden. All that is necessary is for the observer to note carefully the number of revolutions the pedals make in a given period of time, say five seconds, or a single second, and then if the gear is known the speed is known at once.

To determine if the rider is going faster than the eight miles an hour allowed by law the gear of the bicycle fastened to the rider's feet can be used as a gauge of speed. A very little figuring will then show whether the rider is breaking the law or not.

An expert rider gives the following as safe figures to go by: First, to ascertain the number of revolutions the pedals make in a second you may be sure that he is riding faster than 8 miles an hour. If his bicycle is geared at 60, one revolution a second will carry him 10 1/2 miles an hour; if at 68 it is 12 1/2 miles; at 72 it is almost 13 miles, and 75 it is a little more than 13 1/2.

One revolution a second is, therefore, faster than the rider of a 60 gear can legally travel. It will be advisable for riders to test these figures for themselves, and then they will no longer be under a false impression as to whether the speeder knows or does not know how fast they are riding.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

HOW A SWALLOW DIED. Impaled in Its Flight on the Sharp End of a Weather Vane. This is the story of a curious mishap which befell a swallow near Cold Spring, N. Y. W. L. Calver was standing in a barnyard at that place. It was a blizzard, and the weather-vane on the barn was kept in constant motion by the shifting wind. Mr. Calver looked at the vane. He had looked at it twenty times before during the day, but this time it was different. Evidently a bird had perched upon it. Mr. Calver thought it the most unstable perch possible. But the bird remained there all day.

Towards evening the boys on the farm tried to dislodge the bird by throwing stones at it. It did not budge. Next day it was still there, and then an investigation was made. One of the boys climbed out of the barnyard window and, looking up, found the bird was a swallow, that, far from being perched on the vane, it was impaled. The vane stuck right through the bird's breast. The swallow was, of course, dead. Its position made reaching it an impossibility, so it had to be left where it was. At last only the skeleton was left. Finally even that fell to pieces. It is thought that in one of the downward swoops which swallows make in flight the bird did not see the rapidly-shifting vane, and that the latter veered around just in time to impale the swallow through the breast.—N. Y. World.

Blowers and Their Uses. "Say you do not believe in blowers?" said the new girl to the old-fashioned woman. "I do not," the latter replied severely. "Do you think them immodest?" "No, necessarily; but certainly unwomanly." "Fool!" exclaimed the new girl, in her superior way. "With such old fancies as you there would be no advancement at all. You do not realize the needs of the new woman. For some things blowers are almost essential. There are certainly a vast improvement over the costumes usually worn."

"Well," admitted the old woman thoughtfully, "possibly that is so, I myself can think of one place where blowers might be preferable to the costume in vogue." "On the wheel, of course." "No. On the bathing beach." "The new girl declared that she would die before she would wear such hideous things on the beach.—Chicago Post.

A Freight Car Loaded with Grain was Side-tracked a few days ago in Philadelphia. One of the attaches about the yard opened the door and stepped out. He was looking at the grain and left it standing ajar. Shortly after this a little animal poked its nose out of the door and then jumped to the ground below. It was a ground hog. A little colored boy, who happened to be near, saw the animal and gave chase. The ground hog was so fat from feasting upon the inexhaustible supply of wheat that it couldn't run a little bit, and the boy soon caught and killed it. The animal had probably crawled into the car in western Pennsylvania, before it was loaded, and had simply gorged itself upon the wheat with which the car was afterward filled.

A Curious Royal Collection. One of the most curious collections in the world is one upon which the queen of Italy has been engaged for years. It consists of old boots, shoes and slippers, to many of which a historical interest attaches. Queen Margherita is the happy possessor, for instance, of a pair of coarse, heavy shoes that are said to have belonged to Joan of Arc; she has also a dainty pair of boots supposed to have been worn by Marie Stuart at her execution, as well as some slippers of Queen Marie Antoinette and the famous velvet, Ninon de Lenclos, of whom tradition says that she had lovers after she had reached the age of fourscore. It is said that the kingdom of Italy is shaped like a boot that suggested to the queen her strange hobby.—London News.

Best-Best. The disease is not common in this country, and the word has a heathen sound. The word is Cingales, from "beri, weakness," the reduplication is intense. Another spelling, "ber-beria," is sometimes found. The disease is acute, generally presenting drooping symptoms, with paralytic weakness and numbness of the legs. It prevails chiefly in India. In 1879 the total number of such patients in India amounted to nine thousand, eight hundred and seventy-three. Some say that in this disease there is scurvy from the first.—Boston Journal.

How Much Water It Might Have Been. "I suppose I'm the only person that ever drank the breath of life," murmured Factors, as he sat on Mr. Fellows' kitchen step. "I was gnawed a tough steak the girl had handed out to him." "The only thing on earth I've got to be thankful for is that I wasn't born triplets."—Chicago Tribune.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of Roxbury, Mass., has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humors). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken. When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, right out over the chest through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.
