Bill Nye as a Dairyman.

When I was young and used to roam around over the country, gathering watermelons in the light of the moon, I used to think I could milk anybody's cow, but I don't think so now. I do not milk the cow unless the sign is right, and it hasn't been right for a good many years. The last cow I tried to milk was a common cow. I remember her brow was low, but she wore her tail high, and she was haughty, oh! so haughty.

I made a commonplace remark to her; one that is used in the very best society; one that need not give offense. I said: "So"—and she "Soed." Then I told her to "Hist"—and she "Histed." But I thought she overdid it. She put too much impression in it.

Just then I heard something crash through the window of the barn and fall with a thud, sickening thud, on the outside.

The neighbors came to see what it was that caused the noise. They found that I had done it in getting through the window.

I asked the neighbors if the barn was still standing. They said it was. Then I asked them if the cow was injured much. They said she seemed quite robust. Then I requested them to go in and calm the cow a little, and see if they could get my plug hat off her horns.

I am buying all of my milk now of a milkman. I select a gentle milkman, who will not kick, and feel as though I can trust him. Then, if he feels as though he can trust me, it's all right.—Bill Nye.

"Well, yes a man may live without taking a newspaper, and so could he live without wearing shoes. The merchant can sell some goods without advertising and so could he sell some goods even if kept in a cellar. But it is our observation that the man who takes the paper and wears shoes gets along better than his neighbor who does neither. So does the man who advertises get a better trade than the man who fails to do so."—Ex.

Editors may not be so bad as other people think. The Prison Mirror, published in the Minnesota penitentiary, says: "Why is it that from our first inception of our paper until the present time we have never had an editor sojourn in our midst? Other professions have been well represented; of preachers we had enough to furnish subsistence to an African chief for a year; doctors enough to depopulate a State, enough lawyers to start a fair sized colony in hades, but no editors—not a single one."

It was in a Pullman sleeper, and just across from the bachelor's berth, was a handsome little woman and her three-year-old boy. Early in the morning the two were laughing and playing together, and the good-natured bachelor smiled to himself as he rose to dress. Suddenly a little foot peeped out from under the curtains of the opposite berth, and with a twinkle in his eye, the bachelor grabbed the plump toe and began: "This little pig went to market, this little—""That is my foot, sir," said the indignant voice of a woman. The silence which followed could be heard above the roar of the train.—Ex.

Something That Will Do You Good.
 We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that would be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we have no doubt but that has time and again prevented croup. This testimony is given upon our own experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their homes as a safe guard against croup.—Camden (S. C.) Messenger. For sale by V. H. Frederick, druggist.
