A Sensible Girl.
 Elise De Wolfe is a sensible girl as well as a good advertiser. Last week she decreed that in the future all the lady members of her company should wear short skirts. Not because she wishes to see her request printed or commented upon does Miss De Wolfe ask this of her associates, but from purposes purely hygienic, as any one may see by reading her argument, which is here given:
 "This decision has not been reached suddenly," says she. "While I was on the road with 'The Way of the World,' I was forced to make the same request of my company, and it was cheerfully complied with when the women woke to a realization of the filth through which we were obliged to trail on gowns in traveling, especially in the railway stations and on stages where brooms and brushes had touched but lightly. I was further astonished to find that colds practically disappeared and the general health of my company improved. I did not intend to take the matter up while we played in New York, but for the recent prevalent colds, which I believe was largely due to damp skirts clinging around the ankles.
 "The only women who have the right to wear long skirts outside the house are those who ride in carriages. Any woman who walks should have on a walking skirt. Women who work for their living owe it to themselves and their employers to guard their health. We who act, work, though there is a general disbelief in this statement."

Eating at Bed-time
 Eating at bed-time was formerly considered very injurious; but at the present time it is favored by some of our best physicians, especially for invalids who are troubled with sleeplessness. Food of a simple kind will induce sleep. The sinking sensation felt by those who cannot sleep is often simply a call for food, while wakefulness is often a symptom of hunger. Gratify this desire and you will soon fall asleep. The feeble will be stronger at dawn if they partake of light food before going to bed. Some twelve or fourteen hours lie between supper and breakfast, and by that time the fuel of the body has become expended. When prolonged wakefulness attacks us and our thoughts go bitter and you, and we have no more control over them than over the wind, the wisest thing to do is eat a cracker or a cold biscuit, or some bread and milk; give the stomach something to do, and this will draw the surplus blood from the brain, and you will fall asleep.
 —Country Gentlemen.

GREATLY ALARMED.
 By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.
 Mr. H. P. Burge, a student at law, in Greenville, S. C. had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough which he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burge, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by V. H. Frederick, Druggist.

Teddy—"Pa!"
 Pa—"Yes, dear."
 Teddy—"May I ask a question?"
 Pa—"Certainly, Teddy."
 Teddy—"Where's the wind when it don't blow?"—New York Times.

TOO GREAT A RISK.
 In almost every neighborhood someone has died from an attack of cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. A reliable remedy for these diseases should be kept at hand. The risk is too great for anyone to take Chamberlain's Cholera and Dysentery Remedy has undoubtedly saved the lives of more people and relieved more pain and suffering than any other medicine in use. It can always be depended upon. For sale by V. H. Frederick, Druggist.
