Determined to Work.

R. Dall McCormick, Jr., son of a millionaire, has made up his mind to work if he has to work for nothing. He was graduated from a university and passed through a law school. His father had a house in London; one in New York and another here. Likewise, he had a collection of paintings which cost more than a half million. But young Mr. McCormick did not care to loaf around in London, New York or Chicago, so he went to State's Attorney Healy and told him he wanted to practice criminal law. If he was appointed an assistant State's attorney he would work for nothing, and like to. Thereupon Mr. Healy appointed him an assistant, and he will now devote his time to "settling" the "crooks" and rubbers with which Chicago is overrun.—Chicago dispatched to New York W. r. d.

A London daily tells a short modern ghost story. A man was traveling on a north-bound train out of London. Opposite him was a silent stranger, his only companion. Between London and Derby no word was passed. Then as the train drew out of Derby he said pleasantly: "Good bye, this, sir, eh?" The stranger replied: "I think it is a beauty had line. I was killed on it two years ago"
