Writing of the pure food bill, the Louisville Courier-Journal says: "We all know of the embalmed beef that was furnished our soldiers during the war with Spain, but this is only one item. We pay out our round dollars for champagne, for instance, and imagine we are drinking the Widow Cliquot's grape juice, when, as a matter of fact, there is more champagne drunk in Paris than is made in the entire champagne district. Our champagne is also grape juice or cider, or a combination of these, all inferior, and made to boil and sparkle by adding poisonous gases and acids. Under a receiver's hammer, whisky may send a barrel of spirits of salts, and it comes down to barrels of alleged whiskey. Rose attar is made from the rose of sweet-billy, catch, caught in White River, and the food is called salmon. Sardines are made of any kind of small fish, and the famous Roquefort cheese is made from snakes from the Everglades and the lagoons of Louisiana. Canned beef is made from the flesh of broken down horses at Hammond, La. Chocolate candy is made of iron rust and grease. Stick candy is a combination of glucose and white clay painted with poisonous paints. Sausages are made of anything from rats, dead or alive, down. Lard is simply a scrape of anything. Creamery butter is made of oleomargarine."

Tea was cultivated in China 2700 years before the Christian era.
