The 4th of July Barbecue

2,500 PEOPLE GATHER AT SULPHUR SPRINGS

And Under the Auspices of Regular Democrats Have a Good Time.

The citizens of Covington and vicinity gathered in large numbers at Sulphur Springs, on the banks of the classic Bogue Bayou, to celebrate the natal day of American independence. The crowd was one of the largest and most orderly ever seen in our town, and the management of the entire affair was a great credit to those under whose auspices the celebration was given.

The Mandeville band discoursed sweet music. A large platform was erected on which the band, the speakers and a few invited guests were seated. Judge Thos. M. Burns presided, and in a neat and well timed speech stated the object of the gathering, and introduced the speakers, with some happy reference to each.

The speakers were H. L. Garland, Jr., Fred A. Middleton and St. Clair Adams, of New Orleans, and Lewis L. Morgan, of Covington. Hon. J. Y. Sanders, candidate for governor, and James J. Bailey, candidate for lieutenant governor, had been invited to be present, but owing to previous engagements at Baton Rouge they were unable to attend.

Mr. H. L. Garland stated that no less a personage than the President of the United States had been invited, but was unable to attend. He read the following telegram to show this fact:

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Washington, D. C., July 1, 1907. To—Teddy Roosevelt. Can we count upon your presence at our great barbecue July 4th. Answer quick and come at once. WARREN BADON. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., July 2, 1907. Warren (alias Brood) Badon. Maitre de Ceremonies, Covington, La.

Remembering the many bear and coon hunts we have had together, you may imagine my disappointment at inability to be with you July 4. Have missed one of the sweetest joys of my life. If you have any spare bear meat save me a hind quarter. Sun-dry it and ship by express. Remember me kindly to the St. Tammany Rough Riders. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Garland's address was along patriotic lines, appropriate for the day, a synopsis of which follows:

One of the most gratifying signs of the times is the more general observance by the people of the South of the great holiday commemorating the birth of our great Republic, on July 4, 1776, when Liberty Bell peated forth the most thrilling message ever delivered to mankind, save that great message which the son of God delivered from the hillsides of Judea.

Not that the Southern people for one moment wavered in fidelity to the great ideals which were and are embodied in the Declaration of Independence, but for the last four decades and a half these Southern States were overshadowed by the black cloud of war and the blacker cloud of reconstruction, so that a proper observance of the greatest event in the nation's history was neglected; but with the return of normal conditions in her political life comes a return of normal conditions in the moral life, and we find the South second to no part of our beloved country in the patriotic observance of the natal day of American liberty and free government.

God grant that it may ever be thus, and that with the flight of years the patriotism and love of liberty of our people of the South shall be evinced by a suitable and proper observance of the glorious 4th of July.

This is our government. It was conceived in the hearts and brains of Southern statesmen like Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson, and protected by the unsullied sword of George Washington. Southern brains fashioned the Constitution of our country, and Southern valor defended it on many a bloody field. Southern statesmen vindicated its eternal principles before the civilized world, and Southern soldiers, in its defense, exhibited valor which has never been surpassed in the history of mankind. Hence it is entirely proper that this great day should be observed throughout the South with special fervor.

At the conclusion of Mr. Garland's address, Mr. F. A. Middleton was introduced and made a splendid impression. He said there was no reason for pessimism as to our country. We have to day men as great as any the country has produced, mentioning Dewey, Schley, Roosevelt, Bryan, Folk of Missouri, Hughes of New York, and Spreckles of California. He spoke of the heroism of the women of our country, and singled out Miss Sophie B. Right as a shining example.

Hon. Lewis L. Morgan followed and recalled the meaning of the day we celebrate, and eulogized the great heroes, Washington and Lafayette and other revolutionary heroes who achieved American liberty. He sketched the growth of the country and its present unity and strength, in spite of the ruin of war. He paid a high tribute to the Confederate soldier. Turning to the current history of our State, he paid a glowing tribute to J. Y. Sanders, who had made himself almost a citizen of St. Tammany by building a home in our midst and identifying himself with our people.

The last speaker of the day was St. Clair Adams, of New Orleans, who made an impassioned address to the people. Commenting on the large number of young people present, he said there was no danger of race suicide in St. Tammany. He spoke of the meaning of the day's celebration, of the noble traditions of which it reminds us, and of the imperishable principles of the Declaration of Independence, and the growth and development of the country under the Constitution. There was, he said, but one dark cloud on the horizon—anarchy; by which he meant not alone the anarchy of the pauper class, but of the plutocrats and multimillionaires, who flaunt their ill-gotten fortunes in the faces of the people, citing Herr Most as one example of anarchy, and E. H. Harriman and John D. Rockefeller as of the other. If the country is to live, it must get rid of both classes of anarchists.

In the course of his address he delivered a warm eulogy of Hon. J. Y. Sanders as a man of the people, and a fearless and incorruptible Democrat, and predicted his election by a large majority at the approaching primary.

During an interval in the speaking, a splendid repast of barbecued meats, etc., was served under the oaks on tables constructed on the ground.

Upon the whole, the affair may be said to have been one of the most enjoyable barbecues ever given in our parish, and we congratulate all concerned in the management upon the success of their undertaking.

RHEUMATISM IS CURABLE.

No matter how severe your Rheumatism is, no matter how long it has continued, no matter how many remedies have failed to give you lasting relief—your rheumatism is most decidedly curable, if you will but treat it in the right way.

The right way to cure rheumatism—in fact the only way to thoroughly and completely cure it—is to go right down to the root of the disease and remove the CAUSE.

This is precisely what BALTAR'S RHEUMATIC CURE does. It positively removes the cause of rheumatism and PERMANENTLY CURES rheumatism in all its forms—acute or chronic—muscular, inflammatory, sciatic or paralytic.
