CARD OF THANKS.

The excellent vote cast for me in the late primary election is a source of great pride and gratification to me. I wish to thank all who voted for me, and to especially emphasize my gratefulness to those who devotedly worked in my behalf.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to thank my friends and all those who cast a vote for me in the late primary. The fact that I was unsuccessful in my candidacy only the more impresses upon me the staunchness and fidelity of those who stood by me to the last, and I express to them my gratitude and appreciation.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to thank all those who supported me in the late primary. The fact that I was unsuccessful in my candidacy only the more impresses upon me the staunchness and fidelity of those who stood by me to the last, and I express to them my gratitude and appreciation.

The Dealing in Futures.

The largest and most successful movement of the "moral wave class" in the State of Louisiana accomplished the downfall of the Louisiana State Lottery, and impressed upon the mind the strength and power of organized movements for the suppression of anything supposed to be detrimental to public morals or to a healthy state of social existence.

From the corrupting influences of the poker-room and the race track to the gambling transactions of the bucket shop, the debasing influences of which are easily traced, the mind readily comprehends the mischief and is converted without effort. Led along these lines the dealing in cotton futures has been classed in the category of the bucket shop, by the unthinking, to be included in the reformatory movement. We say by the unthinking because mature thought cannot but develop the error. The fundamental principles underlying the conduct of business in the Cotton Exchange enforce the rule that there must be an actual delivery of all future cotton, of the price, quantity and grade specified.

It is true, there is a system of hedging that brings the total transactions of the Exchange above the actual amount of cotton raised, by cancelling contracts, still its effects are not in any way, that we can see, injurious to the interests of the cotton planter, but rather induces an activity in the market that is beneficial, inasmuch as it permits the laying in of a future supply of cotton without the danger of a rise in prices making competition in the manufactured fabric impossible for future delivery of goods, and it creates a uniformity of price that would not otherwise exist.

This may be called speculation, but not gambling. If it was announced that the cotton crop was a few million bales short, nothing on earth could prevent cotton from going up. The rules of supply and demand govern here as in all other products.

Is it not, then, apparent that in eliminating the dealing in cotton futures you are simply taking out of existence a part of the trade in cotton? Small and large sums of money are invested in all kinds of enterprises and failures are frequent. In legitimate trade people become bankrupt, and the tendency to speculate will exist as long as there is a desire to possess riches.

If the farmers were wealthy enough that they could afford to hold their cotton indefinitely they might be able to force prices exorbitantly high, but the result of this would ultimately defeat the very object in view, either by enticing overproduction and a consequent collapse, or inducing other countries to a final successful cultivation of the plant, or perhaps the manufacture of a substitute material. In the meantime, the people would have to bear the burden of cost—not the manufacturer.

Our cotton exchange is composed of intelligent men, representing the best and most progressive citizenship of the state. It is to their interest that the farmer shall be successful in his farming operations—for if there were no cotton planter there would be no Cotton Exchange. It is not possible with the space we have to outline the community of interests of the planter and the Cotton Exchange, but if it shall come to pass that the dealing in futures are prohibited the planter will learn that one of his greatest assistants has been destroyed; that instead of having his cotton handled in his immediate vicinity he has shifted operations to some distant point, perhaps New York or Liverpool, where there are no ties of local pride or friendships of years standing to guard his interests or prosper his community.

A Public Letter.

HENRY L. GARLAND, JR.,
Attorney at Law,
New Orleans, Jan. 31, 1908.

Dear Sir—I ask the support of the people of St. Tammany Parish for Hon. J. Bailey for Lieutenant Governor.

He is entitled to their support because of his splendid record in the General Assembly, and to mine by reason of the added ties of blood and kindred.

Respectfully,
H. L. GARLAND.

Abita Lutheran Church.

The Lutheran Church of Abita Springs, while of recent establishment, has been built up by the efforts of Pastor Kaub to a position of prosperity and influence, numbering among its congregation not only residents in Abita but many living in the surrounding country.

In the course of a sermon delivered by him January 26, Pastor Kaub made the following remarks:

"What Christ has done and is still doing for his followers in administering comfort and consolation to weary and broken-hearted souls, the Church is, in obedience to Christ's will, doing unto the world at large. A great question which is being extensively agitated by Socialists and others: 'Is the Church, and are the clergy, doing anything for the welfare of the masses, especially for the toilers, for the poor, for the weak, inefficient and helpless and for the fallen and vicious?' The accusation is made repeatedly, on the platform and in the press, that they are not. The Church is charged with absolute indifference to the great social and economic problems of the day."

Pastor Kaub denounced these biased and indiscriminating attacks as scurrilous false and unjust, and maintained that the Church has done, and is still doing, more for the improvement of the ethical and sociological conditions, for the uplifting and purification of society, than all other agencies combined. He called attention to the erection of hospitals for the diseased, asylums and orphanages; the relief for suffering in general. He said that, all criticisms to the contrary notwithstanding, the Church has not proven remiss in this duty imposed upon her; but the most important work of the Church still continues to be the preaching of the gospel and the saving of souls, and this duty must not be sidetracked while endeavoring to supply relief for man's physical wants.
