Seiler-Strain
 Mr. Adam Seiler and Miss Lenora Strain were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at St. Peter's Catholic Church, in Covington on Thursday, September 24, 1908, Rev. Joseph Koeger, officiating.
 Mr. Seiler is well connected and one of Covington's well-known citizens, and is the son of Mrs. N. Seiler, and a brother to Alderman Jake Seiler, and N. J. Seiler.
 The bride is the daughter of Mrs. C. Strain, is very popular, and comes from one of the old, respected families of St. Tammany, having numerous relatives throughout the parish.
 Mr. Charles Herbes was groomsmen. Miss Caroline Strain was maid of honor, and the bride was given away by Mr. Eugene Strain. Both bride and maid of honor were gowned in white.
 After the ceremony dinner was served at the residence of Mrs. N. Seiler, in Twenty-Fifth Avenue.
 A large number of invited guests were present, and the wedding will be remembered among the most prominent social events of the season.
 A large dancing platform was erected in the yard of Mrs. Seiler's residence, and the guests who were worshippers of Terpsichore enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent while the sweet strains of music from the string band filled the air of the open dancing quarters.
 The bride will be at home at the residence of the groom's mother, Mrs. N. Seiler.

Revival Meeting In Progress.
 Everybody cordially invited to attend the revival meetings now in progress, at the Baptist Church. Evangelist John T. Walters is doing the preaching. He makes frequent reference to scenes in Bible lands where he recently spent a year studying and teaching. His special lectures on the Holy Land have proven very popular everywhere Mr. Walters has spoken. Services each day at 3:30 p. m. and 7:45 p. m.
 J. E. BRAKEFIELD, Pastor.

The Grand Jury
 The meeting of the Grand Jury has been postponed until the second Monday in October, the 12th.

Wickliffe-Favrot Joint Debate.

A Wickliffe sentiment pervaded, and Cantrelle Hall resounded with the cheers that greeted Mr. Wickliffe's clear, able exposition of the late primary.

Notwithstanding the very bad weather, a large crowd filled Cantrelle's Hall to listen to the joint debate between Mr. Wickliffe and Mr. Favrot last night. The numerous Wickliffe badges worn showed that the Wickliffe sentiment largely predominated, and the applause that greeted him still further accentuated the warm regard in which he is held by the people of this section.

The speakers were introduced by Hon. Jos. B. Lancaster. It was some minutes before the applause subsided so that Mr. Wickliffe could be heard.

WICKLIFFE'S SPEECH.
 He said that when he spoke here before he had told a few jokes, but that his limited time of one hour would only allow him to discuss the most important question of the issues of the returns—the figures that had expressed the will of the people at the primary election. His friend George was still discussing the issues of the campaign. I know these figures by heart, he remarked (as he failed to find the official returns among his papers), because I have studied them. George don't, because he don't like to look at them. George's home people did not endorse him. The further George got away from home the better able he seemed to be to convince the people that he should be returned to Congress. When he made the remark that if George had not spent so much time trying to convince his home people he might have made more speeches throughout the district, Editor J. B. Adams, of Hammond, who was in the audience, asked, "How about you?" Mr. Wickliffe's reply, that he had never made a single speech at his home, brought down the house, and the cheering and clapping continued for some time. Also Mr. Wickliffe caused hearty laughter when he told that Mr. Favrot had corrected him for stating that none of his numerous bills had passed. "How many passed," he asked. "One," answered Mr. Favrot. But he could not tell which one. Mr. Wickliffe said that when he got a federal building for the town of Covington, he would remember that the bill had passed.

Mr. Wickliffe moved from the official returns, which he held in his hands, that Mr. Favrot carried but four wards of ten in the parish of East Baton Rouge; that one of the two wards in the city of East Baton Rouge cast its vote for Mr. Wickliffe; that the ward in which the Louisiana State University is situated, where Mr. Favrot was educated, was carried by Mr. Wickliffe. He further showed that Mr. Favrot was defeated in his own home parish in the country wards; that he came to the city of Baton Rouge with majority against him which the yeomanry of his own home parish had cast against him. He further showed that not a single one of the seven parishes that are contiguous to the parish of East Baton Rouge gave Mr. Favrot a majority.

On the other hand, in the Feliciana's where he (Mr. Wickliffe) lives, there was not a single precinct, much less a ward, that carried a majority for Mr. Favrot; that out of 1200 votes polled, in round numbers he (Mr. Wickliffe) received 800 majority.

Two years ago Mr. Favrot himself advocated the doctrine that popularity should begin at home. He challenged Mr. Robertson to let the home people decide the question whom the nominee should be, at the meeting at White Castle in 1905, and when Mr. Robertson refused to let their home people decide it, Mr. Favrot faulted that fact over the district. What now has caused this change, that Mr. Favrot is unwilling that the home people of the respective men should decide the matter? If his doctrine of a few years ago were applied now, he (Mr. Wickliffe) would be from 700 to 1000 votes in the lead. Yet, with these well known facts confronting him, Mr. Favrot undertakes to deceive the people into believing that the parish of East Baton Rouge never gives any large majorities.

But Mr. Favrot sings a different tune today and asks the rest of the district to overthrow the will of the candidates' home people. If a man's home people are not willing to trust him, how can he ask endorsement from those away from home, especially in view of the fact that every parish that touches the confines of his own rejected him.

Mr. Wickliffe absolutely refuted Mr. Favrot's assertion that his (Favrot's) vote in the Constitutional Convention against the suffrage act eliminating the negro could cause him no embarrassment in defending us against Crumpackerism in Congress, by reading from the Congressional Record the debate on the Crumpacker amendment in Congress last April, showing from the discussion there that the charge of the Southern States having lynched the Constitution was the main part of the discussion that took place, and that John Sharp Williams and others defended the Constitutionality of the laws of the Southern States.

In regard to Mr. Favrot's statement that everybody familiar with the political history of East Baton Rouge knew that it was a political storm center, and that no man had carried it by 300 votes, not even the beloved Jastremski when he was running against a man from Caddo, Mr. Wickliffe said that in 1904 O. B. Steele, the home man from East Baton Rouge parish had received a clear majority of 700 out of 1300 votes polled, over both opponents. On January 23 last T. E. McHugh received 574 clear majority over his opponent in East Baton Rouge.

Mr. Wickliffe said, that his (Favrot's) two opponents were unknown men, and since in the first primary, although the present representative in Congress, he had fallen not only 3000 votes short of having a clear majority, but even 1036 votes short of coming up with one of his opponents, he should follow the example of Hon. Shed. Hill, of Mississippi, who withdrew from the primary, although his leading opponent was only 300 votes ahead of him, thus saving the people and taxpayers the worry and expense of another primary.

FAVROT'S SPEECH.
 Mr. Favrot was also heartily received, but he did not seem to be up to his usual strength as a speaker. He said that you should send a man to Congress because of his power to be of use to you. That no man could accomplish anything during his first term, and he cited numerous instances of congressmen who were now prominent who had accomplished nothing during their first terms of office, and he did not think if Bob Wickliffe was elected he would accomplish anything his first term. That there was no similarity in the position he took when he ran against Mr. Robertson. That Mr. Robertson had held the office for years. If he was returned to Congress for another term and did not accomplish anything then, he would be willing to be kicked out; but he did not think it fair to be given only one term. That if that principle is applied we will never have a congressman that can be of any service to us, because he would be retired before he could be of any service and another put in his place. That the member would not have time to learn his trade before he was thrown out.

Mr. Favrot devoted most of his speech to a denial that his vote in the Constitutional Convention against the disfranchisement of the negro in any way affected his usefulness in defending the South from the Crumpacker amendment. He said that some of the best men of the South had entertained the opinion that the act was unconstitutional, and that his anxiety had been that the object of the law would be defeated by its unconstitutionality. That everyone knew he was opposed to negro suffrage. That Senator Caffrey had sent a telegram to the Convention advising that such a law could not be defended in Congress, and asking that it be not adopted.

Mr. Favrot devoted his further remarks to the usefulness of his speech in Congress on the Philippine question, and the vital importance of the Monroe doctrine in its relation to the Panama Canal, etc. He said that the retention of the Philippines meant disaster to the sugar interests of the State, and that this matter was of vast interest to the South.

Mr. Favrot did not consume his allotted time of one hour, but spoke a little over twenty minutes.

Covington Park Association.
 On Wednesday, September 23, a meeting was held in the Council chamber at which the Covington Park Association was organized, with Joe Eichinger as President and C. V. Richard as Secretary.
 The object of the Association is the improvement of the new park. At this meeting it was decided to arrange for some form of amusement, probably a two-day fair at the park, with an entertainment on the night of the first day, at Cantrelle's hall and a ball on the night of the second day.
 The various committees will report Wednesday evening, September 30, at a meeting of the Association, in the Council chamber, and the date of the affair will be decided upon.
 Mr. John Coitton donated a White sewing machine, to be used by the Association as they saw fit for the raising of funds.
 All indications are that this will be one of the most successful movements generally that has ever been inaugurated in Covington, which carries with it the inference that there is going to be a bushel of fun and entertainment for everybody in and about Covington who is not dead to all sense of enjoyment. The Woodmen of the World, the D. D. Is, the Town Council, the Women's Progressive Union and the Fourth Troop Cavalry are all pledged to the support, and each had a duly empowered delegate at the meeting.
 The Women's Progressive Union held a meeting at Cantrelle's hall, Friday evening to consider in what way they can best aid the movement, and every influence in the town will be brought to bear to make it one of the grandest events in the history of public entertainment and justification within its experience.
 The Committee representing the different orders were: Fourth Troop Cavalry, Julian Smith, Fred J. Helitz, F. F. Flaehel, W. O. W. Robert L. Labell, E. Patecek, Robert B. Druide, Jos. Eichinger, Jr., E. Seiler, Town Council: Marvin Poole, E. J. Frederick, J. L. Smith, W. P. U.: Mrs. Wm. Bodebender, Mrs. R. G. Hedden, Mrs. B. B. Warren.

Notice! Attention!!
 There will be a special meeting for men only, in the Baptist Church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Evangelist Walters will speak on this subject: "The Greatest Sentence in Literature."
 Come and bring the other fellows with you. Yours Fraternaly,
 J. E. BRAKEFIELD, Pastor.
