MAKES AN ATTRACTIVE ROOM.

Apartment Furnished in Egyptian Style is an Oddity.

A young woman recently turned one of her small rooms into Egyptian headquarters and with a few well-chosen articles of furniture and pictures has made it very attractive. The walls were innocent of paper, since it was a new house, and they were painted a light buff with green trimmings. The floor was oil finished, being hardwood, and covered with a rug in Egyptian pattern of buff, green and yellow-brown. The scenes were all taken from magazine and art journals and framed in gold frames, some bright gold, others dull. The narrow frames looked neat upon the buff walls. Pieces of Egyptian pottery—or rather imitations of such—added much to the attractiveness of the room, and a few small bits of Egyptian bric-a-brac imparted additional beauty to the very cleverly arranged apartment. It would be quite an easy matter to furnish a room in this style, and at comparatively little cost, because there is every opportunity to purchase at little cost everything needed for such. Of course mission furniture would be used in a room of this description.

SIMPLE DRESS AND SMOCK.

Attractive Garments Designed for the Juveniles.

The first sketch shows a simple little dress of butcher linen; it is made with three wide box-plaits back and front, which are set to a yoke cut in points; the edge of the yoke is embroidered, but a fancy galloon or insertion would do just as well; the belt, which is put below the waist, is trimmed in the same way. A little slightly-puffed sleeve, is set into an embroidered cuff at the elbow. Material required, 1 1/2 yard linen 46 inches wide.

Holland is used for the little smock; the yoke is cut quite plainly; the front and back are smocked; it is feather-stitch in worked round the hem, cuff and collar. The sleeve is set into a turn-back cuff at the waist. Material required, 2 yards 32 inches wide.

The Directoire Sash.

The shops are selling the directoire sash in soft liberty satin with crocheted silk slide and silk tassels. They are three yards long, in all colors.

Little Girls' Frocks.

Cute little frocks of gingham or linen for small girls are made with a full skirt gathered to a belt, attached to a blouse waist, which simulates a front closing by means of a box plait down center front, decorated with large buttons.

The neck is finished with a Peter Pan collar and silk tie, and a breast pocket is added on the left front, just like a grown-up waist.

The sleeves are three-quarter length full bishop, confined by hand cuffs. This model is well adapted for school wear if made from woolen fabrics.

Eyelash Stain.

Here is a perfectly harmless stain for eyebrows and lashes: Gum arabic, one dram; India ink, one-half dram; rose water, four ounces. Powder the ink and gum and triturate small quantities of the powder with the rose-water until you get a uniform black fluid in a powder, and then add the remainder of the rosewater to it. It should be applied with a very tiny camel's hair brush.

WILL BE PALATIAL

NEW SENATE OFFICE BUILDING NEARING COMPLETION.

Two Rooms and a Bath for Each Statesman—Tunnel and Electric Cars to Carry Member to Chamber.

That palatial establishment for the comfort of senators, the new Senate office building, it is now announced will be ready for occupancy by the time congress meets next December. It is now about 80 per cent. completed and the purpose is to rush it to completion in the next few months. When finished the new Senate office building will have cost $4,500,000, inclusive of the site. This provides office rooms for 92 members of the senate and their attaches. It is rather more than the cost of the House office building, which was occupied early in the last session of congress. There is no doubt that a genuine need for an office building of some sort, both for the senate and the house members, has existed.

In the capitol there are not enough committee rooms to go around. Some of the senators have little, dingy rooms down in the terrace and many are obliged to have their offices in the old Melby building, known as the Senate Annex, a short distance northwest of the capitol. The senator who is able to get an office room inside the capitol building, even if it is dismal and cramped, considers himself fortunate.

When the Senate office building is completed it will connect with the capitol by a subway, as is the House office building, and in the subway will be a sidewalk and an electric car line. One will be able to descend an elevator in the capitol, get into an electric car and get out at the foot of an elevator in the office building. The subway itself is already finished.

Each senator will be entitled to a suite, consisting of two handsome rooms and a private bath. The building will have 99 such office suites in the three principal stories above the basement, ten single offices and six committee rooms, besides a conference room and a dining-room. The larger room of each office suite is intended for the use of the senator himself, and will be 16 by 25 feet. The smaller room, 12 by 25 feet, is for the senator's secretary.

One of the convenient features of the building will be the conference room, back of the main stairs on the second floor. It will be 52 by 74 feet, will seat 300 people easily, and is intended for public hearings.

Not the least interesting room of the office building will be the dining-room, 30x35, on the second floor, overlooking the capitol grounds and the library of congress. Here the senators hope to be able to partake of their lunch and milk and senate pie in something more of peace and solitude than they have been able to find in the senate refectory at the north end of the capitol.

One of the banalities of senate membership is that, whereas the average senator would like to be himself away to some secluded spot for lunch, where his ears will not be beset with the troubles of pension-hunting and office-seeking constituents, it is impossible to exclude the proletariat entirely from the senate restaurant as it now exists. It often happens, even, that a senator has to wait for several days while a waiter is serving a meal to some mere private citizen. Senators hope that under the new regime they will be enabled to be more thoroughly in retreat when they want to partake of something to eat.

In design the Senate office building resembles the House office building, the two being fashioned to harmonize with the exterior of the capitol. The house members are allowed but one room each. A number of the committee rooms will be rearranged when the office building is completed, some of them being in the new structure. While in some respects the new building is expected to prove a great convenience, yet it will have its drawbacks. This has been shown in the experience on the house side.

Many members find their rooms in the office building so convenient that they absent themselves more freely than before from the house chamber. So it is expected to prove on the senate side, especially when Superintendent Elliott Woods gets installed in each office the occupant to see at a glance just what is going on in the body to which he belongs. The new office building will, moreover, greatly increase the difficulties of finding members. This was the experience with the House office building last winter.

The next great building that will be erected by the government near the capitol will doubtless be a commodious home for the United States supreme court. The present quarters in the capitol are inadequate and unsatisfactory. Even the accommodations for attorneys who are forced to attend the supreme court sessions and who are anxious to hear arguments and opinions are insufficient. On Mondays, when opinions are handed down, a large number of visitors, as a rule, are turned away from the doors because there is no more room for them.

Home-Made Barometer.

Those who love experimentation may try the following method of making a cheap barometer, practiced in France, suggests the Youth's Companion: Take eight grams of pulverized camphor, four grams of pulverized nitrate of potassium, two grams of pulverized nitrate of ammonia, and dissolve in 60 grams of alcohol. Put the whole in a long, slender bottle closed at the top with a piece of bladder containing a pin-hole to admit the air. When rain is coming, the solid particles will tend gradually to mount, lit the star crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise remains clear; if high winds are approaching, the liquid will become thick, as if fermenting, while a film of solid particles forms on the surface; during fair weather the liquid will remain clear and the solid particles will rest at the bottom.

LAWLESSNESS IN WASHINGTON.

Caustic Comments of a Neighbor on Conditions in the Capital.

Washington, in its public structures and private residences, its hotels and business buildings, its parks and boulevards, is becoming not only the most beautiful city in America, but one of the finest of the world's capitals, says the Baltimore Sun. All Americans are proud of its growth and its magnificence.

Therefore it comes to them as a shock when they learn that women are not safe on its broad avenues and that purse snatching and robbery are the most common of crimes.

During the last two years the records show an almost unbelievable number of attacks upon women. These range from assaults and attempted murders in the suburbs to brutal attacks and robberies in the very heart of the most fashionable residence section. Most of these offenses are committed by negroes and they seem to think that they have a license to commit any crime. The daughter of an army officer was attacked and robbed by negroes almost at the door of the British embassy. Judging from the number of crimes of which they are the victims, in no city in America are women so poorly protected as they are in the nation's capital.

What paralyzes the arm of the law? Why is it that negro hoodlums are allowed to run riot, terrorize certain sections and even attack the police? Why is it unsafe for women to go out on the streets or roads after dark in the District of Columbia? Is it because the arm of the law is weakened by an inefficient police force and sometimes by absurdly inadequate punishment when criminals are arraigned in the courts?

Most of the crimes are committed by negroes, according to the accounts, and the criminal negro element acts as if it could defy the police and as if it need have little fear of severe punishment, even if it were a large crowd of negroes on Policeman W. J. Field when he went to arrest a negroess is only one of a number of such attacks. If the laws were rigidly enforced and disorder suppressed with a firm hand such contempt of the police would be impossible.

The district commissioners and the police could undoubtedly prevent Washington from becoming the unhappy hunting ground of thugs and thieves if they acted with sufficient firmness and energy. What is the matter with the representatives of the district government? If they cannot meet the conditions by which they are confronted and keep in check the lawless elements which are disgracing the capital of the country men should be put in their places who can.

Just Too Cute for Anything.

"Speaking of peanuts," observed the man with the red whiskers, "they ain't the only thing in the world what is small."

The man with the Hall Caine expression murmured that there was a great and universal truth, and then the man with the Auburn capillary appendage continued:

"A friend of my wife's was visiting a friend of hers, who had just moved into an up-town apartment house. The friend of my wife's friend was showing her friend (i. e. my wife's friend) around the place, as she was enthusiastic over it as women always do. Finally the friend of my wife's friend showed her (my wife's friend, you know) into a small room in the rear, and she (my wife's friend again, of course) went into spasms of rage over it.

"Oh, what a cute little room to keep your refrigerator in!" she cries.

"My wife says that her friend says that the atmosphere got several degrees colder right off, and then her friend (the friend of my wife's friend, you know) says rather sharply to her:

"Why that's my kitchen!"

After every one had stopped trying not to laugh, the man with the John Kendrick Bangs expression started to spring the joke about the dog who was trained to wag his tail up and down, and the meeting adjourned sine die.

Ban on "Hurry-Up" Wagons.

Eight miles an hour is the limit in Washington for fire engines, patrol wagons and ambulances.

No matter what the emergency—fire, riot or street car crash—the "hurry" wagons of the city will hurry no more. Corporation Counsel Thomas has decided that they are subject to the laws governing the speed of all other vehicles.

Recently several persons have been hurt by the galloping horses of patrol wagons. Citizens complained to the commissioner who suggested to Major Sylvester, chief of police, that more care be exercised. The major replied that a patrol wagon, fire engine or ambulance is not called unless it is needed badly and that when it is needed it ought to get to its destination in the quickest possible time.

Besides, he did not believe that the law makers had city vehicles in mind when they made the speed laws. But the corporation counsel overruled him. It is understood that the Anti-Noise society, encouraged by this ruling, will ask that the clanging gongs be removed from the wagons and engines on the grounds that they disturb the peace of the citizens and that they are not needed on slow moving vehicles.

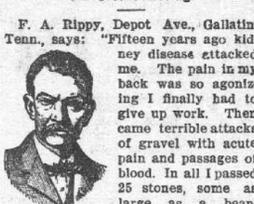

School for Diplomats.

J. Pierpont Morgan, John Hays Hammond and others have contributed more than $50,000 of the fund of $125,000 which Dr. Richard D. Harlan of George Washington university is raising to broaden the work of political sciences in that institution.

The college, which recently was formed for training young men for the diplomatic, consular and public service, has been largely attended. Great interest has been manifested throughout the country in the betterment of the foreign service. The university hopes to place the new school thoroughly before the people, indicating its importance to the nation and the opportunities it offers to young men to fit themselves for the service of the government.

AWFUL GRAVEL ATTACKS.

Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills After Years of Suffering.

F. A. Rippey, Depot Ave., Gallatin, Tenn., says: "Fifteen years ago kidney disease attacked me. The pain in my back was so agonizing I finally had to give up work. Then came terrible attacks of gravel with acute pain and passages of blood. In all I passed 25 stones, some as large as a bean. Nine years of this ran me down to a state of continual weakness and I thought I never would be better until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The improvement was rapid, and since using four boxes I am cured and have never had any return of the trouble."

PRESCRIBED CUTICURA

After Other Treatment Failed—Raw Eczema on Baby's Face Had Lasted Three Months—At Last Doctor Found Cure.

"Our baby boy broke out with eczema on his face when one month old. One place on the side of his face the size of a nickel was raw like beefsteak for three months, and he would cry out when I bathed the parts that were sore and broken out. I gave him three months' treatment from a good doctor, but at the end of that time the child was no better. Then my doctor recommended Cuticura. After using a cake of Cuticura Soap, a third of a box of Cuticura Ointment, and half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent he was well and his face was as smooth as any baby's. He is now two years and a half old and no eczema has appeared. Mrs. M. L. Harris, Alton, Kan., May 14 and June 12, 1917."

Sometimes Hard to Tell.

George Elliot says that the expression on a woman's face when she is sewing tells the story of the woman's heart. If she is happy and contented, or possibly sullenly and indifferent, she may smile and look the happiness she either feels or is incapable of feeling. If she has many things to worry her and is possibly planning how to make ten cents do a dollar's worth of good, or if she is naturally a vixen, it will show in her face, so after all it is not safe to predicate as to what her sewing face reveals.

Good English.

A French lady living in America engaged a carpenter to do some work for her at a stipulated price. She was surprised later to find that he charged more than the price agreed upon. When she attempted to remonstrate with him, however, her English failed her and she said: "You are dearer to me now than when we were first engaged."—Success.

Aptly Defined.

A woman in a town lying under the Rockies was much distressed at hearing a small claque in her town refer to themselves as the "smart set." She appealed to an ex-United States senator and asked him what he understood by the term "the smart set." He replied: "I think I can give you an inkling. In the eastern part of Colorado and the western part of Nebraska there is a large tract of land known as the 'rain belt.' It never rains there."
