The Effective Use of Cretonne as Window Drapery.

Pretty over-curtains for service at bedroom windows are made from cretonne lined with cheese cloth in some tone which appears in the cretonne pattern. Used over ruffled Swiss or muslin curtains, these give the room a very dressy appearance. For small windows, where two sets of curtains would look heavy, curtains made of dainty sprigged dimity, such as used for summer gowns, and costing from eight to fifteen cents a yard, make very desirable lighter filters, writes Bessie Blanchard in the Home Magazine. If a choice delicate pattern of dimity can be secured, a bed spread, with valance and bolster roll, should be made of the material, and one or all leaves of the screen filled with the same. The very cheap, loosely woven crash, such as is used for dish towels, makes very attractive curtains and bed spread when set together with cheap torchon insertion or fagoted together. If a special color scheme is to be carried out, this crash and insertion combination is very effective, since it can be successfully dyed by the veriest amateur. White or cream-colored spreads are generally more satisfactory than colored ones, especially if there is much coloring in wall paper and draperies.

Utility boxes are now recognized as being as necessary as a bureau in the house. The most expensive are covered with leather and used in hall or library. The woman who is proficient in the delightful art of woodcarving has a chest in her dining room for the table linen. If she be a bride, she will have one in her boudoir that will be lined with white satin and be called her "dower box," holding the lingerie of her touseau. In miladi's bedroom the box is covered with cretonne matching the other furnishings and neatly lined with cambric, with a sachet pad covering the bottom. In this shirtwaists are kept free from dust and wrinkles, and if the room is large enough there will be a shirt box to hold the dainty thin gowns that are apt to look unkempt if kept in a crowded clothes closet.

If furnished with springs in the lid, a heavy box of good size serves as a bed when a thin mattress is placed over the springs. Such a couch covered with corduroy or velour and supplied with a generous number of pretty cushions adds considerably to the furnishing of any room, as well as supplying a dust-proof closet for seldom-worn clothing. Two shirtwaist boxes with cushions form an attractive cozy corner in a girl's room, and if one has a tray fitted in, made with tiny bamboo rods laced together with broad ribbons, resting on brass screw-eyes in each corner, ribbon, stocks, collars and belts can be kept with the waists. A shirtwaist box will be found invaluable for keeping the wash dresses of the small daughter, and should be mounted on casters so it can be easily moved for the weekly sweeping. A large packing box having the cover hinged for a lid that will fit closely provides a desirable chest for winter clothing. If carefully lined with tar paper throughout. Sacks made of several thicknesses of newspaper pasted together are moth proof for clothing, provided the garments

MAKES A GOOD COMBINATION.
Street Suit of Ecu Pique with Wool is Decidedly Pretty and Effective.

It is a decided innovation to have ecru pique combined with wool for a street suit, but the combination is pretty and effective. The pique is used for collars, cuffs, a band around the skirt and panels. The one gown which has been seen so far in this new fashion belonged to a girl who gets the latest cry from Paris, and it is pretty and effective enough to serve as a model. It was made in the long as to skirt and coat which prelines in the winter and of the three-piece variety. The foundation was of Henrietta cloth, dull brown, shading almost into gray. The skirt barely cleared the ground, and panel sides were down the front, back and sides were tapering strips of pique, beginning with a mere inch at the top and widening out until they almost met when they were reached the hem. The four pieces of the pique, which was entire surface of the gown, was braided in golden brown, was braided in metallic effect, with abundant penwork in-are thoroughly brushed and shaken so no moth eggs are lodged in them. These sacks should be pasted together, not tied.

With the extraordinary cheapness of material, the lack of a folding screen in one's bedroom is inexcusable, especially if the morning bath needs to be taken in one's room. Where two are occupying the same room, it insures a degree of privacy, and in sickness is invaluable for softening the light and shutting off draughts. If you can not afford to buy one of three leaves, manufacture one yourself. Any one with two-inch strips of soft wood, four hinges, brass-headed tacks, the necessary cloth and a degree of "gumption" can secure something serviceable if not beautiful. But with good common sense, time and a model to guide, whether in the store window or a magazine advertisement, something artistic as well as useful can be made at slight expense; and the comfort will be so great there will speedily be a screen in every bedroom in the house.

IN THE LATEST MODE.

Hat of Cherry Colored Straw, lined with black taffeta. Wreath of cherries and crown of drawn net.

The Shawl.
The shawl is coming into its own again. The fashion is not generally accredited to London, but it is probable that the fact that Edward VII revived his mother's custom of sending out half a hundred Indian shawls for Christmas gifts among his friends has something to do with it. At present the shawl is being worn highland fashion, with the right end thrown over the left shoulder. Perhaps the most desirable material is real Chinese crepe. It comes in many colors, with heavy embroidery and a thick silk fringe. The Spanish shawl, so popular at the very first, is not so much seen. Wonderful old shawls are to be found, to harmonize with any and every costume. The edges are always heavily fringed, and there is usually a border of rich colors. They are worn out driving, in boxes at the theater and at afternoon affairs, over the smart one-piece costume.

sets edged in gold. The collar and cuffs on the long coat were of pique and the same panel effect was noted down the back and on the fronts of the coats. The waist was of soft silk with the same pique insets and a collar of gold braid.—New York Press.

To Patch Wall Paper.
It is sometimes necessary to patch the wall paper where it has become defaced or torn, and the new paper of the same pattern is much too bright to use. Try hanging the new paper in bright sunshine until the colors are faded or dulled and it can be applied to the damaged paper on the walls and will match it perfectly.—Good Housekeeping.

Tendency Toward Fullness.
A great many of the skirts hint at drapery, which emphasizes the fact that the tendency is toward more fullness.

Small Brims on Straw Hats.
The new straw hats have brims not over two inches wide, and some of them have no brims at all.

TAG ENDS USEFUL

DAINTY COLLATIONS MADE FROM THE LEFTOVERS.

How Tempting Salad May Be Put Together in an Emergency—Iced Cold Meats Go Well with Vegetables.

How to make something out of nothing is a time-worn problem for the housewife, but if she will remember the words of the popular song, she can concoct many inexpensive dainties for every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more." Suppose, for instance, that your larder displays nothing much but the tag ends of a number of vegetables, both cooked and uncooked. Out of these you can concoct a tempting salad that will serve as a dainty main course for luncheon or supper. Cut the carrots into strips, the string beans—large—into inch lengths, the onion into paper-thin slices, and the potato into dice. Heap the peas, the onion, the potatoes, and the lima beans—if you have any, otherwise kidney beans or diced beets—in the center of your salad dish, arrange them in a circle, and add the mayonnaise dressing in a little mound in the middle.

An equally attractive macedoine of vegetables consists of canned corn drained from the milk, diced boiled turnips, and pickled cabbages surrounded by a "nest" of cabbage cold slaw. French dressing is best with this combination.

Where you have not a great variety of vegetables, you can make a substantial dish of it by adding iced cold meats, chicken and veal being perhaps the dainties for company, though "well done" roast pork, beef or ham can be used in the same way. The tart cucumber or tomato may be combined to good advantage with cold boiled potatoes and the meat, and pickled beets and asparagus are delicious with chicken. Canned salmon is also very much relished with peas, celery, lettuce and beets. Being such an oily combination, it is perhaps better with plain boiled dressing, or with vinegar, salt and pepper.

If you have a little cauliflower, and two or three onions left over, they combine deliciously when boiled, cut up together and served with a cream gravy.

To turn to desserts: If you want a really lovely dish, open a can of frozen peaches, fill each cavity with the shredded Hawaiian pineapple that is now so plentiful in the markets, and add a sprinkling of chopped nuts and serve with whipped cream.

The "boarding house" prunes that the family sneer at may also be disguised into the form of a plum cake. To make the batter, take two-thirds of a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, three eggs, two cupfuls of flour, four tablespoonfuls of milk, a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda, a heaping cupful of prunes, two teaspoonfuls of allspice, two of cinnamon and one of nutmeg. For this one tablespoonful of baking powder will be required.

Our last recipe is far from being a new one, but there may be some young housewife who does not know the very best way to make this queen of evening desserts, rice pudding: One-half of a cupful of rice, one cupful of water, three cupfuls of milk, two eggs and three-eighths of a cupful of sugar. Cook rice and water over the flame till the water is absorbed. Add one pint of milk, and cook over water till rice is tender. Beat the eggs, and add them to one cupful of milk; pour this into the rice mixture, add sugar, and pour all into a buttered dish. Set over a dish of hot water, and bake in a slow oven till custard is set. Sprinkle cinnamon or nutmeg over the top, and add raisins if liked.

By a Public Official—County Treasurer of Granbury, Texas.

A. A. Perkins, County Treasurer of Granbury, Hood Co., Texas, says: "Years ago a severe fall injured my kidneys. From that time I was bothered with a chronic lame back and disordered action of the kidneys helped to make life miserable for me. A friend suggested my using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, with the most gratifying results. I made a public statement at the time, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, and am glad to confirm that statement now."

All Over.
While work on a new building was going on in a southern town not long ago an old negro employed as a hod-carrier suddenly slipped while near the third story and plunged headlong to the ground. Several passers-by rushed over expecting to find a man dead with a broken neck, as the old fellow had struck squarely on the top of his head. Finding the old man still alive some one emptied the contents of a whisky bottle down his throat. In a few moments the old negro sat up and looked around.

"How do you feel now, uncle?" asked a bystander kindly.
"Well, sah," came the reply, "I wuz sorter cornfused when I fust started, but now dat I's hit I's all right!"
