GAME DISAPPEARING
STEPS NECESSARY TO SUPPLY THE INCREASING DEMAND.
Deer Raising Has Proved Profitable and the Department of Agriculture Now Recommends the Growing of Pheasants.

The department of agriculture some time ago issued a bulletin on the raising of deer for the market. It was a thing that had been tried privately and had proved a success. It is becoming necessary to find some substitute for the rapidly disappearing game of the United States, for the supply is diminishing all the time and the demand is increasing and the prices are remunerative.

The experience with the deer bulletin was so encouraging that the department is now issuing a pamphlet on raising pheasants for the market. At present there is no lack of demand for pheasants for various purposes. Owners of private preserves and state game officials pay profitable prices for certain species for stocking their covers.

Zoological and city parks and owners of private aviaries are ready purchasers of the rarer and more beautiful species, and large numbers of dead pheasants are annually imported from Europe to be sold at several times the price they bring in European countries. The demand for pheasants is increasing.

In response to numerous inquiries for information on pheasant raising the present bulletin was prepared by Prof. Henry Olds of the biological survey, and contains a chapter on the diseases of pheasants by Dr. George Byron Morse of the bureau of animal industry.

It presents a clear and concise account of the methods used by successful pheasant raisers, and gives practical information to those now engaged in or contemplating entering this comparatively new but rapidly growing industry in methods of propagation, care of young pheasants, protection from enemies, housing, feeding and marketing, both in field and covert.

It takes up in detail the question of species suited to various purposes, game and exhibition stock; how to obtain stock; mating and hatching, and the proper and requisite provision for the successful rearing of these valuable and interesting additions to the food supply of the nation.

The 17 illustrations make very clear the descriptive text, presenting actual conditions at the Illinois state game farm, the New Jersey preserve and the preserve on Long Island, besides showing pictures of ten species and photographs of coops, rearing fields, breeding pens and runways.

HUMAN HAIR TRADE GROWS
Demands of Fashion Create a Highly Profitable Industry in German Cities.
Owing to demands of fashion, German imports and exports of human hair have increased greatly during the last year, as is shown by the following statistics made public at Washington:

"ROOKIE" AS A SOCIETY MAN
Corporal Myer, Millionaire, Attends Capital Functions Where Many Officers Are Guests.

There is a condition of affairs over at Fort Myer that is making the older officers there tear their hair in despair over the situation. Discipline is in a bad state, and all because one of the enlisted men is a corporal by day and a millionaire club man by night. This young man is Albert J. Myer, Jr., who is a corporal in the signal corps when he is on duty. He obtains leave and then flies around in his auto, accompanied by Puffy Ruffles, feathers and flowers to beat the band and garbed in full dress, with a shiny silk hat on his head, meets his superior officers on the street or in the club on an equal footing. Recently at the banquet of the Society of the Caribou this young corporal occupied a seat next to Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff, U. S. A., and Col. Joseph Garard, U. S. A., commanding at Fort Myer. The commanding officer of Fort Myer thought there was something mighty familiar about the young man's face, but he could not place him until the next day, when he was much astonished to find that the very attractive young man who sat at his right at the swelt banquet was a corporal at the post. Furthermore, at the Bachelors' cotillion, held at the New Willard, Corporal Myer, as the society man, danced with the young ladies from Fort Myer much to the annoyance of several young officers from the fort who were present, and who, under military rules, cannot associate with an enlisted man.

The story of Myer is somewhat unique. He is the third of his name and is the grandson of the founder of Fort Myer. He inherited a large fortune from his grandfather, and enlisted purposely to follow in the footsteps of that fine old general. His home is in Boston. Corporal Myer has developed a love for aeromantics and is expecting to purchase a Wright machine, which the signal corps will use for experimental purposes at Fort Myer. Corporal Myer has taken an examination for second lieutenant, and it is said that he has passed with flying colors. If he gets his commission it will, of course, lift from him the obligation of being an enlisted man.

He keeps a man who performs the duties of a valet in his quarters at the fort. Taking it altogether, it is rather a funny situation.

BROTHERLY LOVE IN HOUSE
Foss, Republican, Tells How Foss, Democrat, "Supported" Him on Measures in Congress.

Congressman Foss of Illinois, Republican, chairman of the committee on naval affairs, is sort of divided in his affection for his brother, Congressman Foss of Massachusetts, lately elected Democrat.

"That Democratic brother of mine," says Foss, Republican, "came home after we had the vote on the naval appropriation bill and enthusiastically informed me that he had voted with me twice during the day. I asked him on what propositions he had voted so, and he declared that he had voted for my motion to put an end to the debate and against an amendment calling for the construction of four battleships."

"How about your other votes?" I asked.

"Well," he replied, "I could not agree with you on the two-battleship proposition, so I remained true to Democratic principles and voted for only one. Of course, being a large employer of labor, and being in sympathy with their demand for an eight-hour day, I voted for the amendment making compulsory an eight-hour day for men working on the construction of battleships."

"You see, he voted with me on the two most insignificant votes we had on the entire bill and voted against me on the two most important, and yet he tells me how glad he was to be able to get a great bill through the house. His sense of humor is far more acute than I suspected. However, his votes that day satisfied me that neither Democrats nor Republicans will ever be able to guess how he is going to vote on any proposition. He votes as he pleases and party lines do not influence him."

Which last sounds a good deal like brother stickin' up for brother.

STOOD WHERE SHE WAS PUT
Wife Obeyed Orders to the Letter, But Unfortunately Workmen Moved Post Hole

In a western state workmen began to dig a post hole for an electric light in front of a Dutchman's dwelling, when the master forbade them to continue. After some discussion the Dutchman bade his wife stand on a large, flat slate with which he covered the hole. "Now, Gretchen," he said, "dat ish where you sthand till I comes back mit en enjunction." The solid frau stood there like a statue, her hands on her hips. When the husband disappeared, the leader of the workmen ordered the slate, with the frau on it, to be removed. With perfect politeness the lady was set on one side as if she had been a fat teapot on a salver. The Dutch wife stood like Casablanca, but the hole was well in its place when the householder returned with the injunction. He was overcome with astonishment and wrath. "Vy was you not stood on dat hole?" he demanded of his wife. "It was on dis stone dat you vas puts me," she answered. He looked at her in helpless indignation a moment, and then cried: "I was not mean dat you sthand on dat stone ven dat hole was rarrid away!"—Christian Register.

Public Library Has Roof Garden.
New York's first roof garden to open this season was opened on the roof of the Hamilton Fish park branch of the public library. It is a children's paradise, with gaily striped awnings to protect against sun or showers, and on the newly painted green tables big vases of lilac and dogwood blooms.

And over in one corner of the roof garden Hans Christian Andersen's story of "The Ugly Duckling" was read out of a big blue and gold fairy book by Miss Eva Wheelock, the assistant librarian, who rejoices in the nickname of "Peter Pan." Twenty-five small children on 25 small bamboo stools surrounded Miss Wheelock, and at exciting crises in the tale the tiny stools would tip away forward till their legs were lifted several inches in the air. When the exciting moment was past down they settled with a thump, only to rise again a few minutes later. They literally hung on the words of the speaker.—New York World.

"Generally speaking, an old chestnut, my son."

Boats That Nature Built.
Man makes the largest sea-going vessels, but nature constructs the smallest. This is a species of Jellyfish, is found only in tropical seas, and it has a sail.

That part of the fish that is submerged resembles a mass of tangled threads, while the "sail" looks like a tough membrane, shaped like a shell, and measuring quite five inches or more across. The jellyfish can raise or lower this sail at will.

Knowing seamen avoid contact with this curiosity of nature, for the reason that each of the threads composing its body possesses the power of inflicting a very painful sting. This sting enables the jellyfish to defend itself from porpoises, albatrosses and other natural enemies.

It may be added that this odd little creature has no other means of locomotion aside from its sail. When seen skimming along the surface of the water it closely resembles a child's toy boat, giving no indication whatever of a living creature in search of food.—Harper's Weekly.

Wedding Fee Counterfeit.
A well-dressed stranger entered the office of Justice William B. Williams, Montclair, N. J., and after shaking hands astonished the justice by saying: "I'm here to redeem that counterfeit $10 bill I passed on you. Two years ago I called on you with my girl and two witnesses and you married us. I handed you a $10 bill. I had a counterfeit in my pocketbook that I'd carried for several years. I never missed it until yesterday. Then I remembered that I'd accidentally handed you the bill." The caller produced a good $10 bill, but the justice refused to take it. "Don't let that worry you, my dear fellow," he laughed. "I never knew it was a counterfeit. No kind of money sticks to me over night. I'm married, myself."

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Iraburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Iraburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?
For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.
Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.
