CARNIVAL NEWS

Indications all point to a record breaker for the Covington Carnival Club in drawing crowds to Covington. The nearer the time approaches the greater the interest manifested by the people. Letters have been received from as far as Cincinnati, and reports from along the routes of the railroads show that the traffic will be largely increased on Mardi Gras Day.

The demands for invitations to the ball have been greater than can be supplied under the rules laid down by the Carnival Club, and it is expected that even the immense floor space of Carnegie Hall will be none too great. The drill of the members in costume, which will precede the three call-out dances, is being rehearsed and will be a very pleasing feature of the ball, and next to the tableaux will be the most certain feature of the program.

The preparations for the street parade have been nearly completed. Capt. Jos. Elchinger is being assisted by Mr. P. J. Lacroix in the final work and everything is moving along smoothly for the grandest parade that has ever been witnessed in Covington.

Lunch rooms have been established in prominent locations so that the meals can be obtained at reasonable prices by those who wait on the line of the parade and who do not care to template securing a room or remaining over night, and the hotels and restaurants are equipped for quick and satisfactory service.

Arrangements have been made with the New Orleans Great Northern Railroad for special rates along their line, as will be shown by the following communication:

Local Passenger Tariff of the New Orleans Great Northern Railroad Co.—Covington Carnival Club, Covington, La., February 27-28, 1911.—To the ticket agents at all stations in Louisiana, except New Orleans:

On account of the above occasion you are hereby authorized to apply the following fares and arrangements in the sale of round trip tickets to Covington, La.:

FARE—One and one-third first-class fare (as shown in N. O. G. N. Local Passenger Tariff No. P-62) for the round trip.

Fare for Children—Tickets for the transportation of children five years of age and under twelve may be sold at half the above fares. Tickets to be plainly marked stamped or punched, and the child accompanied by parents or guardian.

Children under five years of age will be transported free when accompanied by parents or guardian. Children twelve years of age will be charged full fare.

Dates of Sale—February 27 and 28, 1911.

Return Limit—Tickets good to reach original starting point, up to midnight of March 1, 1911.

Baggage—One hundred and fifty pounds of personal baggage (over one hundred and fifty pounds on each whole ticket and seventy-five each half ticket).

On baggage weighing over one hundred and fifty pounds on each whole ticket and seventy-five pounds on each half ticket, charge will be made for the excess weight will be in accordance with the N. O. G. N. Baggage Tariff No. 1, supplements thereto or released thereof.

Materials for decorative purposes can be obtained of most merchants, as well as masks and dominoes for those who wish to join the street maskers.

ROUTE OF PARADE

On the arrival of the chief of the war, the parade will be up to Columbia to City Hall to receive keys, up New Hampshire to Jefferson Avenue, to Den. Den is on 27th Avenue. Parade forms in front of Den out 27th to Jackson, to 26th, to Jefferson, to Boston, to New Hampshire, to Rutland, to Columbia to Lockwood to New Hampshire, to Boston, to Columbia, to Jefferson, to 27th, to Den.

ALL TANGLED UP.

"All Tangled Up" was given at Cantrelle's Hall on Wednesday night for the benefit of the Kington Carnival Club.

Despite the great cold, a goodly crowd attended and thoroughly enjoyed the amusing little comedy. This play is full of puns and is full of laughter-provoking situations, and the interest of the audience was never allowed to flag. It was more than pleasingly staged and presented, and every member of the cast seemed anxious to make it a success.

Mr. Fred Roehl is an excellent stage manager, and deserves much credit for having so successfully presented two good plays in so short a time. Mr. Roehl showed himself the same as good actor as ever. When we remember how well Mr. Roehl played the role of old Ephraim Stebbins we readily accord to him the power of versatility, which, added to his pleasing appearance, to his clear and distinct phrasing, and to his ability to slip that he put into his parts, places him far above and beyond the average amateur actor.

Mr. Sidney Fuhrman followed close to Mr. Roehl, and gave much meaning and expression to the part of the henpecked husband, whose sully conscience makes a coward of him and hides his better qualities. Mr. Fuhrman pleased his audience as he always does, and we gladly give him a round of genuine applause. Mr. Lewis Morgan "sat today" as Keelman Plantum, the son of the fact undertaker whose anxiety to please his business and his overcoat kept him busy and his audience interested. Mr. Morgan gave happy expression and emphasis to his lines and his effort to make the Major "understand the misunderstanding" was especially well said.

Mr. Diendorf, the young lover, was most pleasing and every one was sorry there was not more to the part and that Mr. Diendorf was not more often on the stage.

Mr. Louis Hennessey's O'Toole was the surprise of the evening, being not only the most successful impersonation of the red-headed rishman was a delightful bit of comedy, and Mr. Hennessey was irresistibly funny. His best friend would scarcely have known him, as he seemed to entirely sink his individuality into that of the brogue-speaking-self-indulgent Mr. O'Toole. "Come again" Mr. Hennessey. We'll be glad indeed to see you.

Miss Mae Poole made a graceful, all-too-youthful matron with a crown-up daughter, but she did full justice to the character, and kept her audience interested in her lines, which were read in a clear musical voice. Misses Lyons and Bokenfohr both appeared well, and added to the success of a most delightful evening, notwithstanding the temperature. Right here, let me say that some provision should be made for just such predicaments as Wednesday night's. Here was a good play, a good crowd and a very good cause almost finished up by a drop of the thermometer, and why, because we have a great hall, with lots of windows and open ventilators, and not a sign of a stove or means of even taking the icyness off the atmosphere, to prevent people from being desperately ill. It's not right from a humanitarian point of view, much less the success of the entertainment or money end of the affair.

Can't something be done about it? Thanks are due to Miss Winnie White for the very sweet music furnished on the piano.

The Women's Progressive Union had charge of the refreshments on Wednesday evening, but as they had too much confidence in the "Sunny South" and the recent warm spell, the good ladies had ice cream, lemonade and cake for sale. The ice cream remained uncut, and a few rash lancers hazarded a glass of lemonade. As the cake "was too good to eat," it was all sold before the evening wore away. But it's a cold lay when the Women's Progressive Union are outwitted, and as they were quite determined the K. K. K. should not lose the proceeds of that ice cream, three of the members, Mrs. Albert Smith, Mrs. H. H. Smith and Mr. B. B. Warren started out on an itinerary Thursday morning with that freezer in the front of the surfer and kept going until every bit of that ice cream was sold. How does that strike you for grit and enterprise? So, hooray for the Union, hooray for our amateurs and hooray for the K. K. K!
