The following communication from Madisonville, which was read by Judge Barlow, contains some very interesting facts in regard to that town:

A FEW HISTORICAL NOTES FROM MADISONVILLE, LA.

It has been said that Madisonville antedates New Orleans in time of settlement.

Going back to the Spanish regime the beautiful banks of the Tchoufunctua, now occupied by the town of Madisonville, was the point of landing or embarking of the Spaniards as they passed to and fro from their settlements to inland stations, and on to Baton Rouge, where they were strongly established.

They built the road from Madisonville running west to Ponchatoula, and from thence to Baton Rouge, giving it the name of "King's Highway." It was their overland route between the two points, and it was traveled frequently.

The noted Lafitte and his men found safe rendezvous on the banks of the Tchoufunctua.

Later, Mr. Joseph Baham, a French gentleman, came from Mobile and settled at the spot chosen as a settlement and landing place by the Spaniards, making a plantation of the spot. The old plantation residence is still to be seen in the town, surrounded by modern dwellings.

The plantation was afterwards laid off in town lots and sold. Thus it was transformed into a village.

The Choctaw Indians lived near the village. Peace and harmony existed between them and the white people. One of their greatest chiefs, Mingo, spent much of his time in the village, frequently slept under an oak tree on the bank of the river. This tree is known as "Old Mingo." It stands a fitting monument to his memory.

General Andrew Jackson entered Madisonville by the King's Highway, having marched into that road a mile from town, when he left the "Kentucky Road."

Here he embarked, with his troops, crossing the lake in vessels, and reaching New Orleans in time to prevent its capture by General Pakenham.

The plantation home of General Morgan, the friend of General Jackson, was near Madisonville. After the General's death it passed into other hands. It is a fine old place, and in a good state of preservation. General Morgan's body rests in the town cemetery.

Madisonville became a summer resort for visitors from New Orleans, and a resting place for travelers journeying to or from the city. They crossed the lake in fine steamers, which ran on regular schedule time.

During the Civil War, while no battle took place in or near the town, the shot and shell of the enemy reminded the inhabitants that they, too, had a part in the great conflict.

Recovering from the ravages of war the place has increased in population and in prosperity.

It is a noted lumber export. Here were shipped the products of the surrounding country.

The landing place of the Ft. Biloxi Spaniards has become the thriving town of 1911.

TCHOUFUNCTUA.

April 18, 1911.

At the Madisonville public school children then sang a song, and Frances Paine, Dedy Vix, Mamie Newman, Lee Newman, Norma Favron, Stanley Bierhorst, Julius Levy, Morris Levy sang a song about how Jack Frost made the little boys and the little girls say "oh! oh! oh!"

"Oh! that was very amusing."

"You mustn't mind a little thing like that" was also sung by pupils of the Mandeville school.

Oh! Daddy Dear, was sung by Inez Frances, Ella Bridges, Julius Levy, and received its share of applause.

"Playmates," a song that seemed to strike the fancy of the audience, was loudly applauded, and that evening drew from some of the prominent gentlemen on the stage the wild whoop of the erstwhile woodsman, pictured the feminine character under the influence of two pink ice creams. It was sung by Carl Golden and Marian Payne, and very nicely sung and very nicely acted.

The St. Scholastica Orchestra played some very nice selections with credit to the excellent instruction of that institution. The violins were: Leaders, Sister Lawrence, O. S. B.; Sister Placida, O. S. B.; Miss Nettie Gast, Miss Cecile Warren, Miss Ruby Walsh, Miss Rosa Lee Walsh, Miss Josephine Gossett; other Miss Bridges, Miss Collo, Miss Louise Englehardt; Cymbal, Miss Adrien Dendinger; snare drum, Miss Ferdinand Cole.

The games, necessarily abandoned on account of the extensive program and the lateness of hour, will take place at some future time and the prizes be awarded to the contestants.

The receipts from sale of tickets, for All Tangled Up were $131.30.

The Personal Element Has no Place in Business

Like oil and water, business and family affairs don't mix. A man may die and make his personal friend his executor. He (the executor) may have the best intentions, but his own business demands his first attention. He may not give those interested any definite information as to the condition of the estate. It becomes embarrassing to insist upon a statement. A suit for accounting may be absolutely necessary, but friendship stands in the way. Thus it goes.

Compare this to the impersonal, business-like methods of a Trust Company. Its offices are always open. Accounts are accurately kept and promptly referred to. Experienced officials are absolutely impartial in the administration. Its entire resources are a guarantee of faithful performance of duty. Its existence is permanent. Such advantages only require to be known to be appreciated.

The Covington Bank and Trust Company acts in the capacity of executor or administrator of estates.
