MOTHER-IN-LAW WINS.

Brookhaven, Miss., Sept. 21.—That the sea of matrimony is tempest-tossed and filled with many hidden reefs, is the conclusion of Will King, a young man of the Union neighborhood, who took himself a "rib" only three weeks ago.

Separated from his bride by her unfeeling parents, and unable to compass her return, even with the assistance of a constable, the young man's harrowing experience is unique and absorbing.

Mr. King and his young bride went to church at Union Tuesday night, after church was over Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Gill, the girl's parents, who object to their son-in-law, clubbed the girl, one on each side, and hurried her off to their home a half mile distant.

Young King was so taken back by the boldness of the parents that he could make no move until it was too late. He was appalled by what transpired. Doing next morning he arose early next morning and found that Mrs. Gill had taken his wife in a buggy to this city.

He at once secured the services of Constable Peyton Coon, and came on in after them. All yesterday afternoon he and the constable, accompanied at various times by friends and others, out of curiosity, tramped over the town in an effort to locate the young wife, whom King claims is held captive against her will.

They kept the trail well, but were just a little late, as at every place where the mother and wife had been, this morning they were rewarded when Mrs. King and the girl walked up unexpectedly on the sarchers in the courthouse yard. King attempted to explain to the elder jury and take the girl, but Mrs. Gill gave him "a dip" of her mind, "much to the displeasure of the bystanders. She took her daughter into the courthouse and the foiled groom went in another direction, not seeming able to brave the wrath of a strong-minded and hard-spoken mother-in-law, who had won out.—Piscayne.

THE BRIDGE ACROSS THE LAKE.

Alton, La., Sept. 22, 1911.

Editor St. Tammany Farmer:

Sir—Now that the mass meetings for the bridge across the lake have been held and the necessary arrangements of committees, etc. are nearly completed, I would beg to say a few words to the people of Mandeville who are so enthusiastic on the subject. If the bridge is intended for railroads to cross, in order to secure entrance to New Orleans, it would be well for the people of Mandeville to have the bridge at some distance from their town, for the reason that all property on the street through which the railroad would run would become almost worthless, and would sooner or later be used for purposes to which the railroads might see fit to use it.

The beautiful town would lose its attraction to a great extent, and people now owning property along the proposed street or streets through which the railroads are to run, would be heavy losers in place of any gain which they might expect from the bridge being constructed. But if the bridge is made to terminate a good distance east of the town and have the Orleans and the bridge would not be near so long, and would cost much less money to construct. So far as the bridge is concerned, the raising of the funds seems to be the problem now before the people interested, and if Mr. Riggs says about the number of railroads that are seeking entrance into New Orleans is a fact I should think the money question is easily solved: let the committee wait on some of the roads and have them raise the money as it may be needed for construction, the people of St. Tammany and Orleans agreeing to pay the interest on the amount used until the bridge is completed—the railroads then to collect the revenues until the bridge is paid for, when it would become the property of St. Tammany and Orleans parishes. By this means the railroads would gain an entrance to New Orleans without the expenditure of a great deal of money for a bridge and the people of St. Tammany and Orleans parishes would only pay the interest on the amount of the cost until the completion of the bridge when the revenues would take care of the principal and interest; as I am satisfied that the traffic over the bridge would be greater than expected. By this means we would have a bridge which would in the end, not only cost us nothing but would be a source of revenue and an ornament to this section of country if properly constructed.
