HARMONY VERSUS POLITICS.

Isn't it probable that the people of this country are getting a little tired of so much politics? Not merely the State of Louisiana, but the whole country. The original political idea was to provide the very best material for the construction of a government. The cry has been to make every office elective so that the people might choose the best fitted man to make laws for the government of the people and the conduct of the affairs of the nation, but it has not been calculated to provide for a perpetuity of power in the hands of a few or to make office a medium of exchange for that power.

Continuous elections are hurtful to business interests, not because certain men are chosen for office, but because business interests get protection from one party or the other. With the elimination of this condition business would not suffer. There is too much platform-making; too much caucus binding; too much pledging of policy. Local needs are recognized in national politics not because they are local needs but because the locality is an important factor in carrying out some particular program.

It is getting to be that even municipalities are divided into factions that are more or less controlled by business interests, with the result that many have withdrawn from political activity for fear of antagonizing business. The result is alarming. Instead of harmonious action for the general development of commercial interests there is timidity and uncertainty—a fear that active work will bring a clash between conflicting interests and that well meant efforts will be construed as a device for the furtherance of hidden schemes and the advancement of factional strength. New York reveals such a situation today. Louisiana is full of such situations.

But there is a limit to all things. Louisiana has learned a lesson in national politics that will quiet her enthusiasm for political solidarity for the sake of a name. Municipalities will learn that harmony is worth more to business interests than factional strife for political ascendancy. Harmony may come out of it all, when everybody will be satisfied to work shoulder to shoulder for prosperity, recognizing that upon the success of each integral part depends the success of the whole. Then the office holder will be responsible to the people for the conduct of his office and not for his attitude toward any particular power, and the people will assume their responsibility for good government.

THE NYAL REMEDIES.

In buying medicine, how many people stop to consider the importance of the quality of the drug used in them. When you buy tea, coffee, baking powder or other goods you want a particular brand, because you have found it to be trustworthy. When you go to the dentist or the doctor, you want to know what his reputation is. Very well, then when you go to the druggist you should not only require that he be reliable, but that the medicine he is selling you is backed by a high reputation. The Nyal remedies we believe to be the best on the market. We have so much confidence in them that we have no hesitancy in offering them to our patrons, and the Nyal people have so much confidence in them that they guarantee them. Does not this strike you as a recommendation that should have some weight? It struck us that way, and when we investigated further we found as much said in praise of these remedies that we concluded to handle them. We shall have something hereafter to say of the remedies individually. In the meantime we would be glad to talk to you about them if you will call at our store. If you have kidney trouble, if your blood is bad, if your system needs toning up, if your nerves are out of order, if you have piles or skin disease; in fact if you have anything the matter with you that can be cured by medicine, we believe we can give you a remedy that will help you. Come and see us.

Mrs. A. H. Hammer, of Meridian, Miss., a picture artist from Arcadia, La., on her way home, discovered a very pretty three-story brick school building, and contains the statement that the place is but one-tenth the size of Covington. Mr. Bart Keen narrowly missed being shot by a stray bullet of a .44-calibre while standing in his field last Sunday. The bullet cut a wire of his fence and made a hole in the ground near him. The bullet came within a couple of inches of him, and would have made a hole in him instead of the ground had it struck him. It came from the direction of the old mill. People should be more careful how they shoot guns. A life may be sacrificed any time by a gun in the hands of a careless person.
