HUNT FOR COUNTERFEITER END IN NEW ORLEANS-ACTIO.

Postal Inspectors Say W. H. Fanning Confesses Wholesale Money Order Frauds. New Orleans, Feb. 17.—In a three story attic room at 838 North Rampart street early Wednesday, four postoffice inspectors arrested Wm. H. Fanning, charged with wholesale counterfeiting of postal money orders, for whom Federal authorities all over the United States have been looking.

Entering the house suddenly the inspectors caught their quarry as he was preparing to go to bed, and, though he at first denied his identity and told a smooth story, he finally confessed, according to the inspectors, that he is the man wanted. The extent of Fanning's alleged operations are not known here, but it is alleged that he floated bogus money orders in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Chicago and possibly other cities. It is said that he began operations about the first of last December, setting up his plant, consisting of a printing press and type, in a rooming house in Baltimore.

Four days Postoffice Inspectors S. W. Purdum, of New Orleans, Charles G. Kinzel, of Austin, Texas, James B. Robertson, of Washington, and J. M. Sandoz, with headquarters in New Orleans, have been drawing the net about Fanning. Orders were sent out from the postoffice department several weeks ago to look out for him in New Orleans, following a tracing of his operations in various cities. Fanning and To Have Confessed.

After Fanning's tale about having come to New Orleans to attend the races and see the carnival had failed to work with the inspectors, he was taken to Inspector Purdum's office in the Federal building and grilled. Here it is alleged he made a complete confession. Wednesday morning he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Browne and was held under bond of $3000 to await removal proceedings.

When seen by reporters after his arraignment Fanning declined to talk. Fanning says that formerly he was a sailor on Hamburg-American Line ships out of New York. He says he is 30 years old and unmarried. What money he is alleged to have made out of the bogus money orders, of which he admitted, it is alleged, appears to have parted from him. His shoes were dilapidated and his clothing was well worn.

While none of the bogus money orders which he is charged with manufacturing by wholesale have yet appeared in New Orleans, some of those which he is alleged to have floated elsewhere are excellent imitations of the genuine postal money orders of the new series. Some of the bogus money orders that were floated call for amounts as high as $5150.

It is alleged that in some instances Fanning bought watches and jewelry with bogus money orders, drawn for amounts in excess of the price, receiving the difference in cash. In order to have the orders cashed, it is said, he managed to secure the signatures of letter carriers and forged them to the orders as endorers. The carriers, being known at the postoffice, he had little trouble in getting the money, it is alleged.

Tuesday, Fanning, who has been shadowed by the inspectors since shortly after he arrived here, about two weeks ago, led inspectors Purdum and Kinzel a merry chase through the Carnival crowds.

Purvis, Miss., Feb. 16.—Pretty Louise Lee, at Agricultural College, is in a critical condition today, physicians report, as a result of the "hazing" by three other girl students. She is suffering from a nervous collapse and since Monday has been in the care of a physician.

News of the "hazing" was learned Tuesday morning, and an investigation is said to have been conducted already at the College by the authorities. Whether the three girl "hazers" have been or will be suspended is not known.

After a desperate fight with an unidentified negro crackman in a New Orleans Great Northern Railroad coach at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning near North Slidell, W. G. Before he was overpowered by Mason and the negro porter of the train who came to the officer's assistance, the negro got two guns out of his clothes. He was crushed up, however, before he could fire. The negro got on the train about six miles north of Amos carrying a big sack. When Mason questioned him he showed fight at once and the melee in the coach followed.

The sack contained shoes, meat, tobacco, clothing and other articles of merchandise thought to have been stolen from New Orleans Great Northern cars at Rio Monday night. CHILDREN'S COUGHS, CHILDREN'S COLDS—BOTH ARE SERIOUS.

"YEGGS" OPERATE IN HEART OF CITY ON THREE SAFES.

Despite Carnival Illumination Crackmen Use Explosives Unmolested. New Orleans, Feb. 16.—Daring safe-blowers, who risked their lives playing their profession sometimes between Saturday night and early Sunday morning, looted three stores of money and valuables amounting to nearly $2,000.

The places robbed are the millinery store of S. G. Kreger, 805 Canal street; the Fashion Millinery store 811 Canal street, and the clothing store of Guy Pres, 809 Decatur street. From the Kreger store $800 in cash was stolen from the safe. From the Fashion Millinery store nearly $500 were stolen from the safe. While nothing was stolen from the store of Mr. Pres, on Decatur street, clothing and other articles valued at about $100 were stolen.

The safe in the Kreger store was blown open with a charge of nitroglycerine, while the combination of the safe in the Fashion store was knocked off and the tumblers forced open by means of a heavy wire. In order to effect entrance to the Canal street stores, the burglars scaled a long iron ladder, used as a fire escape, on the front of Kreger's store. The ladder stands in front of the second floor to the roof, which is five stories from the street. In order to reach the ladder the crackmen had to scale the wall to a gallery on the second floor. There is an electric light short distance from the fire escape, and it is a puzzle to the police and the detectives how the burglars ascended to the roof without being detected.

Use Nitro-Glycerine. Finger prints showed that the burglars used the fire escape. After getting to the roof, the men had no trouble in forcing open a skylight which led to an elevator shaft. From the top floor they had little difficulty in getting to the second floor of the Kreger store, where the safe was kept in the rear. Two holes were drilled in the safe near the combination, nitro-glycerine was poured in, after which the holes were plugged up with soap, then the safe was covered with rags and other coverings before the fuse was ignited.

Apparently the explosion was almost noiseless, at least the police who heard any noise in the vicinity. The outside door of the safe was blown completely off leaving the inner part and the contents undamaged. The inner door was forced open and the $200 in cash was removed.

It is believed by the detectives that the crackmen, confident that they were not detected, again got to the roof and went directly to the Fashion store building where they gained entrance by breaking a window close to the safe.

The safe of the Fashion store was on the second floor. Instead of using nitro-glycerine, the thieves used a heavy instrument of some kind to knock off the combination knob, and with a heavy piece of wire worked at the tumblers until the door opened. Besides $500 in cash the burglars obtained gold rings, watches, chains, diamonds, earrings and stick pins. From the appearance of the two safes, the detectives are confident that the burglars are professional yeggmen and had been laying their plans to rob the two stores for several weeks.

Apparently Two Gangs. It is not believed that the burglars who entered the Canal street stores are the ones who robbed the Pres store on Decatur street. This store was entered in the rear by sawing through a panel of one of the doors. The safe in this store had been left open by the proprietor and although it was ransacked by the intruders, they overlooked $125, which was in a small box in one of the drawers. It was the overlooking of this money which caused the detectives to believe that the job was not the work of professional crackmen.

Clothing of various descriptions was stolen from the Pres store, while on Canal street, where the thieves had the opportunity to carry off many valuable plumes, they contented themselves with money and jewelry.

The robberies were not discovered until the stores were opened for business Monday morning. Superintendent of Police Reynolds immediately sent Assistant Chief of Detectives Mounsey and other detectives to make an investigation. The detectives investigated a report that two men purchased an electric flashlight in a Canal street drug store Saturday night and then drove off in a taxi-cab. The men were located and it was learned that they were members of a ship's crew which was in port and both had excellent reputations.

As the result of the robberies on Canal street, Patrolman Frederick Mischler, who had been patrolling that block, was suspended. Photographs of the finger prints on the roof and in the two buildings on Canal street were taken by Bertillon Operator Norris for comparison with the finger prints of safe blowers whose pictures and records are in the Rogues' Gallery.

FRUIT FLAVORS IN GUM MUST BE REAL. "Fig Paste" Must Be Made of Figs, Decrees Bureau of Chemistry. Washington, Feb. 16.—No chewing gum that is not actually flavored with fruit should be labeled as if it were, according to a recent opinion published in the Service and Regulatory Announcements of the Bureau of Chemistry. Chewing gum, the labels on which declare that it is flavored with fruit when such is not the fact, will be regarded as adulterated and misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drug Act. In the same way the term "fig paste" should no longer be applied to any form of confectionery in which figs are not the principal flavoring.

In another opinion the bureau declares that where stock labels—labels designed and printed by label companies and sold to manufacturers and the bureau holds that the responsibility for seeing that the product conforms to the labels rests on the dealers and not upon the label concerns. This question came up in connection with the use on packages of South American coffee of labels indicating that they contained an Arabian or Mocha product. It also appears that canned crawfish have frequently been marketed under such names as "spiny lobster," "crab lobster," and "Pacific lobster," and the bureau holds that the term "lobster," either unqualified or when accompanied by a geographical name such as "Cape" or "Pacific," cannot properly be applied to this product. The terms "spiny lobster" or "rock lobster," however, may be used if the words "spiny" and "rock" are made as prominent as, and in direct connection with, the word "lobster." Furthermore, labels showing pictures of the true lobster on canned crawfish are regarded as false and misleading. The bureau also has issued a warning against the use of the term "attu mackerel" on labels of packages containing fish of the family of greenlings, is discontinued. This fish is not included in the mackerel family. The terms "attu-fish," "attu greenling" or "greenling" are suggested as substitute names for this product. The so-called scallops in fresh water in order to increase their weight or volume is also held to be improper under section 7 of the Food and Drug Act.

MORE FEED FOR STOCK—MORE STOCK TO FEED. There's no getting away from this big fact; we need here in the South, first of all, more feed for our livestock, and then more livestock to feed. There's no getting round our urgent need of more feed crops; we need these, millions of bushels of grain and thousands of tons of hay, because no country can ever become a livestock-producing country, not claim to be a country of even half-way good farmers, that depends upon imported food and feedstuffs. Hence we deem it of primary importance, in urging the production of more livestock on Southern farms, to couple with it the admonition to grow an abundance of feed crops. We must never forget that feed is of more importance than bread, and that in the South far too many purchased animals have degenerated into worthless scrubs through lack of adequate feed and the belief that they could shift for themselves. At the same time there must be acquired the knowledge that will enable us to properly balance our feeds and feed them to best advantage.—The Progressive Farmer. "Why should we worry?" said one of the South's leading thinkers to us a few days ago. "I used to think we couldn't grow corn in the South, but I know better now. With as good fertilizer and cultivation we can usually make fifty bushels of corn on an acre that will make a bale of cotton. If the war lasts till August, as I believe it will, corn next fall will be about $2 a bushel and cotton seven cents a pound. Why worry about getting only $15 a acre from the cotton if we can get $75 or $100 an acre from corn?" The Progressive Farmer does not intend to vouch for this gentleman's prophecies, but we may cut his estimate of $2 corn in half and find it a comforting reflection. It's results that count, and $50 worth of corn per acre is as good as $50 worth of cotton.—The Progressive Farmer.
