DEBATE

show any riotism, and should have an education, not so ignorant as they were asked. Would they make good citizens if they did not have these and high standards of character?

I know my opponents will say the foreigners should come in without restriction because they become business men and learn our language. Of course that is true, but if they were not restricted and living up to the law, as we know of, and have heard of, some making their money here, or stealing thousands and millions of dollars from our banks and government, and then skip, reaching their country where we cannot punish him for his deed, where he will be protected by his friends, when he has reached his boundary line, where we cannot take him and bring him back here to be punished.

Are not all our charitable institutions filled with the people from foreign countries. Do they not live around and spread disease. Do we not spend money on them when they should be a burden in their native land, not dragging around in the slums of the city.

Do you think they like our government? How can they when they are used to monarchy and think our law foolish and you cannot get them to understand.

When a foreigner comes in and he is not in the habit of a republican government. Might raise trouble or be shot by one of our men. For instance, if we take the European situation, was not the party taken up by the cause of a murderer of a duke?

Do you not think if some great man was shot in our country it would cause a great sensation or perhaps destruction, as we know how England and the other European countries will be fierce enough, and they began between the U. S. and Europe, just on account of a foreigner being admitted into our country, no matter who he is or what he is.

ing greatly to the wealth of our nation. 7. A stronger nation in case of war.

HAMILTON ROUBION.

In order to prevent false impression, I shall refer you to the report of the commission of immigration, which shall show that the evils, which arise from this course are considerably smaller, than shown by my opponents.

In America there's a demand for strength, people who are able to work and develop our resources. Take the report of the railroads, there's a steady demand for more men as those employed were chiefly Italians. What if these men were not allowed to come into this country?

Let me ask: Will not the able-bodied, industrious working men supply the vacant positions? Certainly, for whoseever is vigorous in body, sound in mind and honest, will make a good citizen, and we need citizenship.

A further reason that immigration should not be restricted is, the unsettled lands which would make good homes, for worthy immigrants. Take the land in our own parish. Would it not be better for foreigners to develop the soil than to have a barren waste as it is? Would it not be better to bring in worthy men and give them a chance to begin life?

Let us look back at the progress that our nation has made in the past fifty years. The great west has been opened and settled, forests felled, railroads and mines developed, and yet was it not labor that did this work? Why not give immigration this day the same opportunity. An idea of manhood.

Another reason for immigration is that most of them have been placed in a land by the Creator, where politics hinder education, but in America, each and every one has the opportunity for learning.

Take, for instance, if the amount of immigrants per year enlisted over 3000, and it took five yards of cloth to clothe each one, just think of the amount of cotton would have to be raised to supply all these people, just think of the laborers the plantations would employ yearly, also the machinery being made and retained in America.

Part Two. The American standard of living is lofty, as compared with other nations. I ask my opponents if this is not the fundamental reason and a question and answer in one, why foreigners immigrate to our U. S.

Then why should we restrict that influx of nations? We will begin with the shipping. The high seas is open to all nations, and why should we build an impassable barrier to our shores? We are not Chinese. Our merchant marine and passenger vessels would have less revenue for our government.

Immigration means colonization and citizenship. It has been proven that two-thirds become citizens, thus an increase in population and taxation and industrial conditions.

Every nation is bound to truth and honesty in its intercourse with other nations. Can we deny that our country is larger, better, more industrious because of foreign immigration? According to statistics found in the New Century book of facts, the new arrivals during three decades of 19th century amounted to over eleven million. These we find fitted for occupations and professions equal to our own nation, only a very small percentage are illiterate.

Our laws force the deportation of those diseased and afflicted. This protects us from all that to me seems undesirable. We will refer you, my friends, to the reports of the railroads. There is a steady demand for increased immigration. Only last week the Texas & Pacific opened an immigration bureau of its own. The policy of the department will be to co-operate with various agricultural agencies for development, and to have commercial bodies give aid in solving the problems of immigration. Thus again you will see that our awake business men are interested in immigration for a greater development of our country.

We will present the German immigrant to our opponents. Are not the eyes of the whole world turned to this wonderful nation, its preparedness, its industry, wealth, its response, its craft in the horrible conflict?

I ask you to answer, if, after this cruel war, these staunch people tired of a yoke too heavy to bear can cross over to a free and principled country, would they not be worthy of confidence, having gone through the fiery furnace and overwhelmed with the reign of an Empire Iron will and a slave to his power. Tell me if such a one would not be a subduer and warm adherent to free and nobler principles. I say he would. Then let us open our door
