AS OTHERS SEE OUR GOOD ROADS.

A recent letter in the New Orleans Item, by one of a party of motorists who traveled through St. Tammany parish, shows of what great value our good roads are to us in the way of advertisement.

"It is unfortunate that there are no sign posts in Louisiana, for we had much difficulty in finding the way, having to depend on directions given us by the country people, no two of whom ever agreed.

"However, the country was so beautiful that we did not object to getting lost once or twice. The roads were splendid, and the trip altogether delightful. It is quite the thing to ship cars over from Millenbourg to Mandeville, and we understand that a bigger, better boat went into service a few days after we made our trip (on the Camella)."

The Good Roads Committee performed a public service of no small importance when it gave to St. Tammany parish roads that bring praise from travelers. This parish has been much more fortunate than many others in the expenditure of the fund for this purpose, as experience in road building has commonly been gained through the expenditure of the first money used in this way.

But the question of putting in the necessary sign posts should be taken up. Of course people in our own vicinity know all about directions and approximately how far they are from stations. Strangers, however, are often at a loss, and in case of accident or sickness, the absence of these posts might be responsible for the loss of life.

possible sort of man, and to accomplish results which made him envied of all those that knew him, because of the completeness of the education that he secured. Not education in the narrow sense, but the education for money-making, but that thorough, ample enlargement of the intellect which enables a man to hold his grasp on his undertakings without defeat.

Cardinal Newman, in one of the greatest books ever written, "The Idea of a University," says:

"As health ought to precede labor of the body, and as a man in health can do what an unhealthy man cannot do, and as of this health the properties are strength, energy, agility, graceful carriage and action, manual dexterity, and endurance of fatigue, so in like manner general culture of the mind is the best aid to scientific and professional study; and educated men can do what illiterate men cannot; and the man who has learned to think and reason and compare and to discriminate and to analyze who has refined his taste, and formed his judgment and sharpened his mental vision, will not need to be once a good lawyer, or a pleader, or an orator or statesman, or a physician, or a good landlord or man of business or soldier or engineer, or a chemist or geologist, or an antiquarian, but he will be placed in that state of intellect in which he can take up any one of the sciences or callings which I have referred to, or any other for which he has a taste or special talent, with an ease, a grace, a versatility and a success to which another is a stranger."

Mr. August A. Trappan was the class valedictorian, and discharged his duties most creditably.

The exercises were brought to a close by the awarding of medals and graduation honors, which were conferred by the president, Father Augustine, and Rt. Rev. Abbot Paul, O. S. Benedict.

A feature of the occasion was the splendid rendition of the musical program by the college orchestra, under the direction of Mr. C. C. Kornfeld.

For one and a half hours the membership was held in rapt attention, eagerly absorbing every word uttered, which proved mutual treat the like of which 'tis seldom the privilege of a body of medical men to listen to. In answer to many questions Dr. Levin gave a bulk of information and new methods that can but redound to the parisoners through the members of the society.

Three applications for membership were presented and referred to the proper committee.
