THERE MUST BE BUSINESS MANAGEMENT IN PREPAREDNESS.

There must be business management in our program of preparedness or there will be loss instead of gain.

At this moment the whole South is one beautiful green garden. The farmer is planting more truck than usual, and every city home with ground to spare is being hood by gloved hands to keep the patriotic blisters from interfering with the more delicate work of social and household functions.

To keep all this labor and products from going to waste there should be prompt action in every community to provide canning outfits for putting up the vegetables for the day when they will be scarce.

If possible, the United States Government and the State Government should see that there are enough cans manufactured to take care of the vegetables grown. It should be seen that the farmer shall have the means to put up dry kilns for his potatoes and places to store his grain.

The movement of Mr. Davis, president of the Covington Bank & Trust Company, for the organization of the banks of the parish for co-operative work in financing demands for machinery, canning apparatus, warehouses, etc., is one of the most important that has been made in this parish in the way of food preparedness.

But at all events, FOOD GROWN MUST BE SAVED.

RUB-MY-TISM—Antiseptic, Relieves Rheumatism, Sprains, Neuralgia, etc.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hill's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The precursors have so much to do with the cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHERRY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all Druggists, etc.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY MOST EFFECTUAL.

"I have taken a great many bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and every time it has cured me. I have found it most effectual for a hacking cough and for colds. After taking it a cough always disappears," writes J. R. Moore, Lost Valley, Ga. Obtainable everywhere.

CLOSING OF ONWARD SCHOOL.

Ramsay, La., April 30, 1917. Editor St. Tammany Farmer:

We have been requested to report to your valuable paper the closing of the Onward school, near here, your correspondent being present at the closing exercises.

We are informed that much more interest was shown by the patrons during this last term than any previous one.

The promotions are as follows: From 5th grade to 6th—Verde Blackwell, Irma Blackwell, Alice Bernard, Ester Bernard, Rosa Keating, Wm. Thompson.

From 4th to 5th—Victor Blackwell, Joel Bernard, Sidney Laird, Myrtle Laird.

From 3rd to 4th—Charlie Thomas, Sam Bernard, Eddie Coyne, Hazel Laird.

From 1st to 2nd—Thelma Booth, Alma Bernard, Deanie Bernard, Almetta Bruhl, Archie Booth, Wilmer Brown, Viola Coyne, Angie McKee, Bessie Sharp, Mathew Sharp, Frank Thomas.

This closed the most successful session of the Onward school, Miss Jessie's Pritchard having been principal, with Miss Virgie Bossat as assistant. Miss Myrtle Sharp, of the Folsom school, helped in the closing days.

The patrons of the school will meet with Miss Martha Williams on May 9th, at the Onward school for the purpose of promoting club work among the children, and patrons as well.

A great deal of interest in being manifested in the increased acreage of food crops throughout this section and crops are growing nicely. New potatoes are abundant.

We regret to report the death of the little baby of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Masling, which had been sick for about two weeks. The remains were taken to Orange, Texas, for interment, the former home of its parents. Our sympathy goes out to them in their hour of affliction.

When the child is subject to attacks of cramp, see to it that he eats a light evening meal, as an overloaded stomach may bring on an attack, also watch for the first symptoms—hoarseness, and give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse. Obtainable everywhere.

ARTICLES OF CIVIC INTEREST AND BENEFIT

THE CITIZENS' LEAGUE has purchased this space. It will be used for the purpose of awakening interest, promoting good government and placing before the people subjects for thought that may aid in the upbuilding of Covington. The article below is one of a series that will be published regularly.

COMMUNITY SOCIETY.

(Part Two)

Continuing our article of last week, we see that it has been possible for many to progress only after he has become a social being and only after he consented to relinquish certain natural rights for certain unnatural benefits. We find further that in just such proportion as he was willing to part with his natural prerogatives did he obtain a larger proportion of social protection in return.

Reducing this truth to its last analysis and bringing it down thru the course of all races to the ordinary every-day community life of our present time, we find the fundamental principles still true, viz: That even as it was among the savages and aborigines it is among the people of today, co-operation is the beginning of greater civilization. As this evolution has taken place and man has been taught that when he lives for others others live for him, which is really the meat of social integrity, happiness has come, enlightenment has brought influence, prosperity has smiled, and contentment has taken up her abode.

The same elements that are in primal man are in the men of today, held in check only by intelligence, for when the man of today, stirred by his animal nature, loses control of his mentality, he reverts, in the wink of an eye, to barbarism, as is evinced in altogether too many lamentable acts against the welfare of society. The fact demonstrates that society is a child of the mind, ever a trial, superficial barrier that will hold only so long as society can dictate the intelligence of the fact, and hold in check, through education, the degenerating tendencies in the natural man, in analyzing a community, even in these later days of so called advanced civilization, intelligence must take into consideration the rudiments of human nature, and appeal to the man to keep alive the social, even fraternal, instinct that first brought men together and has held them together.

Each individual must be induced to view his relations with other individuals from that standpoint and taught to know that his own interests are amply served; that even his selfish aims, if they do not conflict with the rights of others, can be better accomplished by co-operation with and not antagonism to society.

Returning to a consideration of the community, and using the reason that is born of all experience, testified to by all history, certified by science and demonstrated a thousand times every day within the periphery of our own existence, we can see that mankind can be held together for any reason only through an appeal to his inherited and cultivated desire to advance. The community assembly—of houses, of business, of public and private relationships, of individual and collective interests—is a best but a loosely woven fabric and can either be destroyed by a slow, almost imperceptible inaction which honeycombs it with selfishness and ignorance, or it can be disrupted by a single calamity. In seeking to understand a community it must be approached from the standpoint of its condition at the time it is to be studied. Communities within a few miles of each other present strong contrasts. In one a high state of development obtains, in another a moribund condition exists. There will be the constructive element in one and the destructive in the other, and the only method by which the general condition can be disclosed is by averaging the intelligence. Few appreciate the tremendous motive power of a community when it is once understood and that understanding has been brought home to its own. The greatest need of the average community is not that it should boost itself to the world, but that it should boost itself to itself and understand itself.

It is not a remote or impossible comparison to say that if a community were to use one-tenth of its power in a collective effort it would advance fifty per cent. It could astonish the world with an example of INTENSIFIED COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT just as the farmer can astonish the soil by intensified farming. It is impossible, of course, and far too Utopian to hope that such will be accomplished, but unless an ideal be higher than that which can reasonably be accomplished, that which is to be accomplished can never approach that ideal.

Having referred to the community as made up of individuals, it will be permissible to assemble its individuals into families as they would naturally be assembled, and if this is done it is seen that the community itself is but a family of families, and being the parent family, is therefore entitled to all the fealty that the ordinary family expects from its members. With hopes and desires, with trials and obstacles, with possibilities and limitations, with natural traits and acquired ones, all thrown together by the chance of existence, the community is a family of human beings and have their being elbow to elbow. Under one community roof they must find a common existence, they must contribute to their common comfort, to their common sustenance, to their common ambition. They must protect their common home with all the regard and forbearance of the ordinary family in the protection of its hearth. To be loyal to it should be accounted as lacking decency, to debase it should be counted a disgrace, and to subvert its aims and to debase it should forever debar the offender from community shelter. Unless a community has passed into the metropolitan stage, and thus in the maze lost its family identity, it is amenable to family influence and will respond quickly when approached by sympathetic understandings. To carry the illustration further, a family that is a real family, sympathetic with its own, is loyal to its own, works for its own, loves its own. Should the community family be less so? Not if it is healthy and each member considerate of his less fortunate brother, even as much so as he ought to be of his own. If this ideal could be reached communities would develop a harmony if existence that would be radiant and magnetize all those who were fortunate to come in touch with it.
