As Dead as the Dodo

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist.

Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead!

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults.

POLICE JURY.

Be it resolved by the Police Jury that the Good Roads Commission be and it is hereby directed and empowered to withdraw Thirty-two Thousand Dollars from the Sixty-Seven Thousand Dollars heretofore allotted to the Salt Bayou Road and devote the same towards the hard-surfacing and construction of Roads A, D and C.

Yeas: Theo. Dendinger, Jr., H. N. Fenderson, C. M. Poch, J. M. Smit, R. C. Cooper, W. H. Davis, Emile Singletary, M. P. Schneider.

Nays: None. J. B. HOWZE, President. F. J. MARTINDALE, Secretary.

The following communication was read:

Covington, La. Nov. 19, 1920.

President of Police Jury of St. Tammany Parish, Covington, La.

Dear Sir:—Confirming my statement made to the Police Jury at its morning session, when the question of financing the Parish of St. Tammany's one-half of road construction involved in bids received by the

HARDING PARTY ABANDON ALL CARES ON SOUTHERN TRIP

Newest Picture of Mrs. Harding

President-elect Harding and F. B. Scobey

The Bay near Point Isabelle

President-elect Harding and Mrs. Harding with a small group of friends are enjoying a vacation trip along the Gulf of Mexico as the guest of Mr. F. B. Scobey of San Antonio, Tex., who is a close friend of Mr. Harding. After spending several days at Point Isabelle on the gulf shores they will visit New Orleans and then through the Panama Canal and home. Those completing the party are Senators Davis Elkins of West Virginia, J. S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Frederick Hale of Maine, Secretary George B. Christian and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beal McLean. The scene below, Mr. Harding and Mr. Scobey, is part of the country where the party will do their fishing and hunting.

Highway Department recently, beg to state:

The Highway Department will make application and allot federal funds for the construction of the road from the corporate limits of the City of Slidell, in a southeasterly direction to salt Bayou, approximately nine (9) miles, and known as the Salt Bayou Road. Funds necessary for this construction will be apportioned out of the 1921 Federal Aid allotment to the State of Louisiana as soon as Congress passes the proposed appropriation for Good Roads.

The Police Jury will be called upon to provide the necessary right of way and to further provide their one-half the cost of this construction. It being understood and thoroughly agreed that the State will only be liable under this division of cost for one-half of Eighty Thousand Dollars, or Forty Thousand Dollars in the aggregate.

Yours very truly,
DUNCAN BUIE,
State Highway Engineer.

Moved by M. P. Schneider, seconded by Emile Singletary, that the St. Tammany Parish Good Roads Commission is authorized to have their Engineer go over the entire route of the Chef Menteur-Mississippi connection and check the State Highway Department figures.

Carried.

The police jury adjourned to meet on its regular meeting date, December 4, 1920.

J. B. HOWZE, President.
F. J. MARTINDALE, Secretary.

ROME MAY SECURE OLYMPICS

Intention of International Committee to Award 1924 Games to the Italian Metropolis.

According to semi-official information from Antwerp, it is the intention of the International Olympic committee to award the 1924 games to Rome. The Italians have been bidding for the games ever since the London meet of 1908.

closed-up summer home enticed them to its shaded porch. They swung it and luxuriated in some swinging chairs. Edna insisted on refreshing themselves with the light lunch she had brought.

"It is quite a picnic," declared Lawrence, and somehow they dalled, and somehow, too, their beautiful environment influenced him to speak out what had been in his mind for two years. He went all over the circumstances of their long friendship, told of the love that was surging at his heart. Like innocent little children they discussed this great climax of their lives, engaging themselves trustingly one to the other, and there was one calm, sweet kiss in token of the mutual pledge of fidelity until the future had placed them in a position to join their lives together.

In a room just off the porch all the time that they had conversed, although they never dreamed of it, sat an old man and woman—Albert Trude and his wife, owners of the pleasant summer home. A closed blind shut them from view beyond an open window. As the life history of the two artless lovers was borne to their ears they lingered, drinking in memories of their own early lives and, too, thinking of the two children who died, leaving them lonely with a lifetime sorrow. The woman arose finally, her eyes brimming with tears, and led her husband out of possible hearing of the trespassers.

"Albert," she spoke tremulously, "do you not feel that this is a heaven-sent visitation, sent to influence us to strengthen and bless our own solitary lives and to bring happiness to two children of the heart, who may wander far apart and never reach the pure, true longings of their innocent souls? Oh, let us make sure of these precious lives for the future and nurture those who will be as son and daughter in the years to come."

All in a maze, within an hour those two listened to a proposition from Mr. Trude and his gentle-souled wife to remain at Idlewild as their own home, practically as adopted children. Mr. Trude was a scientific writer and needed a stenographer a part of the time. The place needed an overseer, and Lawrence was the typical man for the position.

So Edna did not go to the city, and Lawrence Newton went back home, only to inform his brother-in-law of his intended change in occupation.

"Rare good luck," the relative turned it, but the crowning blessing of life, the happy lovers realized it to be when they married, to pass the golden days of the future at the beautiful home where love supreme would never dim or fade.

Fair Destiny

By OTILLIA F. PFEIFFER

"It's a dismal prospect, indeed, Lawrence," spoke Edna Royce, but she smiled, for it was her nature to resist depression and unfortuitous circumstances.

"Yes, ten miles from nowhere, the hind wheel of the old wagon gone for good, and we won't get the train in time. What's best to do now?"

They had started from Winston, their home town, two hours previous, intent on reaching the first railroad point, twenty miles away. At a bad spot in the road they had run into a rut, and one of the rear wheels of the light wagon Lawrence Newton was driving had come off and lay in the road, a heap of wreckage.

It was an inauspicious ending to a day full of hope at the start. Lawrence had been brought up by a brother-in-law poor as himself, and at twenty-two was no further ahead than he had been at sixteen. Edna had lost her parents in childhood, and had made her home with a relative who operated a store in Winston. She had given him faithful service for the wretched salary he had paid her as a clerk, bookkeeper and helping his wife in her housekeeping duties when not busy at the store. For over a year Edna had been studying stenography, she had bought herself a typewriter and had attained a certain expertness in its use, and despite an offer of increase in salary on the part of her parsimonious relatives, had saved up some money and was bent on winning her way in the city.

It was a good deal of a blow to the happiness and well-being of Lawrence when Edna imparted her plans to him. They had never spoken of love, but both were inspired with it. Their companionship for two years had been a sweet, peaceful idyl, and the jarring element of a parting wrecked the hearts of both.

"Some day I'll join you, Edna," spoke Lawrence, patiently, hopefully. "I shall feel worried and uneasy, though."

He had been allowed to use the horse and wagon belonging to his brother-in-law so grudgingly that now that disaster had overtaken it he realized that his captious relative would insist upon all kinds of hard extra work to make up for the expense of repairing it.

"I will walk with you to the town, and you will have to wait at the depot until the next train comes along," advised Lawrence, "and I will have to fix up the old wagon." And he, carrying her satchel and her boxed typewriter, they started away after having tethered the horse.

It was at the end of five miles that the hot sun and the tramp over the rutty road brought a weariness that enforced rest. What seemed to be a

NEW GRIDIRON RULES EXPLAINED BY CAMP

Most Radical Touches Scoring of Goal After Touchdown.

Ball May Be Brought Out in Front of Posts at Distance Thought Most Desirable—One Other Added Advantage Noted.

Walter Camp, well-known football critic, in speaking of changes in the rules for this season in Football Guide, says:

"The most radical of the changes made by the rules committee relates to the scoring of a goal after touchdown. Ever since the introduction of the game some forty-five years ago the punt out after a touchdown has been a part of the rules. This and all rules relating to it have been struck out, and hereafter if a touchdown is made, whether directly behind the goal posts or at the extreme corner of the field, the side making the touchdown may bring the ball out in front of the goal such distance as it thinks desirable and from that point make the try at goal.

"This means that a large majority of the touchdowns will result in goals, but it does not entirely eliminate the possibility of missing. In effect, it makes the touchdown very near equivalent to the seven points which the rules allowed for a touchdown and its conversion into a kick, without entirely going away with the kick. It has one other added advantage in that it tends to greater justice in the matter of earned touchdowns

SCHULTZ ON WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

can never have a female president. The law says nobody under forty can be elected president. Now where can you find a woman that will admit she is forty years old? No where! But if they ever elect a lot of women to office, you know what will happen. We will have a street cleaning department, they will sprinkle the streets with cologne and use carpet sweepers to sweep up, and every ash can will be decorated with ribbons. Am I right? Yes! Yes! Think twice. The female firemen will wear veils so the smoke won't spoil their complexions. Suppose an alarm comes at night. Why the female fire department would be asleep. You know what would happen? Why, before they could fix the rats in their hair the whole town would burn down. Isn't it so? Yes; why certainly. Just look what it will cost for hose. Female firemen wouldn't use anything else but silk. Now a female police force would be a hit. Half of the town would get in trouble just to have the officer carry him to the patrol wagon. Am I right? Yes! Ha! ha! ha! Why certainly. One female officer would make more arrests than a whole squad of men. Why, nobody would resist the officer. Why, she wouldn't need a pistol or a club to arrest the toughest man that ever lived. A good looking officer could tap him

DEMPEY AND CARPENTIER SIGN THE PAPERS

They've really done it—they've signed the papers, those fatal papers—fatal to one of the two, but we can only stand by until next March and do our prophesying, as the contract reads that the bout in which Dempsey will defend his title, shall take place in the United States, Canada or Cuba between next March and July Fourth, the champion to get $300,000 and Carpentier $200,000. Dempsey is certainly giving "Carp" the "once over" as he is affixing his John Hancock.

Another Royal Suggestion DOUGHNUTS and CRULLERS

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

DOUGHNUTS! There is nothing more wholesome and delightful than doughnuts or crullers rightly made.

Doughnuts
3 tablespoons shortening
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening; add sugar and well-beaten egg; stir in milk; add nutmeg, salt, flour and baking powder which have been sifted together and enough additional flour to make dough stiff enough to roll. Roll out on floured board to about 1/4-inch thick; cut out. Fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread in 60 seconds. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Crullers
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1/2 cup milk

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and beaten eggs; sift together flour, cinnamon, salt and baking powder; add one-half and mix well; add milk and remainder of dry ingredients to make soft dough. Roll out on floured board to about 1/4-inch thick and cut into strips about 4 inches long and 1/4-inch wide; roll in hands and twist each strip and bring ends together. Fry in deep hot fat. Drain and roll in powdered sugar.
