"THEY SAID I HAD T. B. AND WOULD NOT LIVE THREE MONTHS"

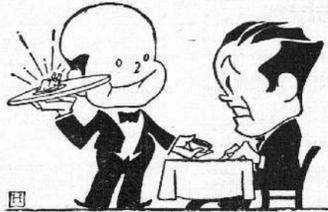

Mr. Harold W. Schmidt, Box 98, Broese, Clinton Co., Ill., believes he has reason to praise Dr. Hartman's Remedy for Catarrhal conditions.

"I used Pe-ru-na eight months for Chronic Bronchial Catarrh. I do not get tired, feel like a giant, am six pounds over normal weight and able to work every day. In March, 1918, contracted a severe cold with spitting and took to my bed. They said I had T. B. and would not live three months. After taking a couple bottles of Pe-ru-na and a box of Man-a-lin Tablets, could walk around and in seven months went back to work. My trouble was due to Chronic Catarrh of the nose and throat, which I had ten years, extending down into the bronchial tubes. "Pe-ru-na was my life savior."

Going home to turkey and trimmin's

THANKSGIVING DAY last year.

I ATE my chow.
ALONE in the big town.
AND THE TURKEY was all.
NEATLY VARNISHED and had.
NICE LITTLE paper pants.
ON BOTH its legs.
AND TASTED strongly.
LIKE NOTHING at all.
BUT THIS year.
MAN ALIVE, I'm going home,
AND THERE will be.
A COUNTRY turkey,
DONE to a turn,
BROWN AND savory.
CRISP AND flaky.
SENDING UP little clouds.
OF TANTALIZING steam.
MAKING NOSTRILS wrinkle.
AND PALATES quiver.
OH BOY, real turkey,
AND THEN afterwards.
ABLE to breathe.
BUT NOT to bend.
I'LL REACH for a smoke.
THAT'S THE real turkey, too.
COSTLY AROMATIC Turkish.
BLENDED WITH the best.
OF MELLOW Domestic leaf.
AND ONCE again—oh boy.
CAN'T YOU just hear me,
INFORMING THE world,
"THEY SATISFY."

IT'S real Turkish tobacco that goes into Chesterfields—really grown in Turkey and bought on the ground by our own buyers. To blend it with best Domestic, in the exclusive Chesterfield way—leave that to us! "They Satisfy?" We'll leave that to you.

SAVINGS SERMONETTE

Number Twenty-Two.

THE NEWLY WEDS

A happy future is assured to those who commence their married life with a savings account. It provides for emergencies which are bound to arise at times in every life. Prepare for these emergencies by putting aside a portion of your income regularly. Be frank with your wife; tell her exactly the amount of your salary or income and ask her to help you to set aside a certain sum to be saved every month. Get in the habit of feeling that this amount must be saved. The time will come, as it does in every one's life, when a good savings account will enable you to take advantage of an exceptional opportunity or enable you to meet trouble bravely. Don't put off starting your savings account—do it at once, and by this time next year you will have an account to be proud of. We invite your account and will be interested in its growth.

GOLFING PAYS WELL

It pays to be a winner in golf as well as in any other sport, particularly if the successful golfer happens to be a professional. Word from Toledo, where Ted Ray, the Englishman, won the national open championship recently, is to the effect that he probably will clean up some $20,000 this year, representing a purse of $4,500 donated by the U. S. G. A. to the winner, and proceeds from advertising exhibition matches and sale of clubs and other golf accessories.

A Speedy Choice

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"And the beaux, Vinnie?"
"Two of them, Elsa," said Vinnie Ream, with shining eyes. "Oh! it is nothing serious—as yet. They are two very nice young men, who seem to like my company, and I have divided it pretty evenly between them."
"Two? You are getting on fast, my dear," commented Elsa Revere, the closest friend Vinnie had. "I don't wonder. You are growing prettier every day, and everybody thinks you charming and clever."

At which Vinnie flushed deliciously, for she knew the compliment was sincere.

Vinnie was proud of the two young men who had met her simultaneously at her first "coming-out" party. Maurice Delevan had introduced an acquaintance, Rudolph Pyle, and from that moment they became friendly rivals. They were about the same age, twenty-three, and had good positions and the favorable opinion of people in general. They seemed flawless so far as reputation, habits and business record were concerned, and any girl might feel proud of their admiration and esteem.

There was a strong contrast between the two young men as to temperament. Both were courteous, good looking and entertaining, but Maurice was somewhat quiet and reserved of manner, while Rudolph was all impulse and activity. It was difficult at the first for Vinnie to decide which pleased her most, the lively ways of the impetuous Rudolph or the even, kindly manners of his less demonstrative rival.

As time went on these two young men seemed to grow more and more desperately in love. Then, too, they began to out rival one another in the way of flowers, bouquets and entertainments. One day Rudolph Pyle drove up to the Ream home to show Vinnie his brand-new automobile. It was a pretty little machine, as if purposely made for two lovers, and that first spin along a well-paved boulevard was a delightful experience Vinnie did not soon forget. Rudolph was very proud of his new acquisition, and wondered what Maurice would think of it. Not to be outdistanced in the race for the love of the charming Vinnie, Maurice the next day, to the discomfiture of Rudolph and the wonderment, yet delight of the subject of all this adoring tribute, drove boldly up to the Ream home in an automobile a shade more elaborate than that of Rudolph. It was a comfortable five-passenger car.

"I have thought all along that when I bought a car I would get one with room enough to give pleasure to others," Maurice explained to Vinnie. "I hope you will take many drives with me, and as there is room for your father and mother we should be a happy party, don't you think?"

At first Vinnie rather favored Rudolph. His car seemed cozy built for two. There was an irresistible fascination for Vinnie in listening to his pleasing talk, in his delicate attentions, as though she was the only woman in the world. After there had been several drives with Maurice, however, in which the trips seemed ideal, such a happy group did they represent that Vinnie felt instinctive gratitude toward him for the pleasure he was bestowing upon her parents.

One day Rudolph's car broke down on a lonely country road. "It will take me a full hour to mend things," declared Rudolph, irritably and impatiently. "You can put in the time strolling among those wild flowers."

Vinnie was not averse to gathering some wild lilies she especially liked, but half an hour later returning to the roadside she was surprised and then shocked at the behavior and words of Rudolph, who had not noticed her. He was abusing the auto as though it were some stubborn animal. He kicked it in a paroxysm of anger because it would not respond to his efforts to adjust it. He flung the hood upon the ground and actually beat it with the wrench in his hand like some vicious, uncontrollable child; banged the wind-shield, cracking it, and then started away, evidently bound for the nearest town and its garage.

Vinnie sat down, upset and enlightened. The outburst of temper had unmasked Rudolph as to his real character. In about half an hour Rudolph reappeared with an auto and driver, which took them back home, the injured machine being left to the care of the garage people.

The illness of a relative in another town called Rudolph away for a week, and Vinnie was glad of it. Somehow she was entirely disenchanted. There followed a delightful week for Maurice Delevan, for he took Vinnie and her parents out every day. It had turned quite cold, and Vinnie's heart warmed as she noticed how thoughtfully Maurice blanketed the machine, as though caring for some real creature needing protection, and how careful and sensible he was when one day the auto broke down.

Before Rudolph returned Vinnie intuitively knew that it was in the mind of her chivalrous escort to confess his love. She told her mother of this impression, and incidentally related the incident of her experience with Rudolph.

"Which way does your heart incline, dear?" asked Mrs. Ream.
And Vinnie in reply leaned over a bouquet Maurice had sent her that morning, and buried her blushing face amid its wealth of sweet, sweet roses.
