THE SOUTH COMING INTO ITS OWN.

The purpose of this advertising campaign is to try and show the people the wisdom of trading at home; their moral obligation to support home merchants in preference to concerns in the North and East; to convince the trading public, that all things considered, the home merchant can and does give better VALUES and quicker and more efficient service than these foreign concerns; to establish a more congenial relationship between the Home Merchant and the people in his territory; to demonstrate that the basic principle of all permanent prosperity is measured by the reciprocal spirit that must maintain between the merchants and the producers.

The South has too long paid tribute to other sections of the country at the expense of local industries and business institutions.

The success of any project depends upon the vision of the men behind it. Every man really lives in his own world, yet the radius of each man's world is measured by his capacity and the horizon he establishes. Every man fixes his own goal.

To illustrate: Columbus had a broader vision than those who hooted him when he was planning his voyage Westward and who were finally recompensed by the discovery of America. Those who first settled in the Eastern part of this country were content to occupy their world, within the confines they established, and for a long time the country west of the Mississippi river was a dense wilderness but as the horizon of the people broadened, civilization began to penetrate the hemisphere, the Indians were pushed further and further westward and eventually civilization swung to the Golden West and on to the border. The Indian's world consisted of a small radius around his wigwam and his only ambition was to hunt, fish and lounge around. Today the Indian is almost extinct as a race, because the spirit of progress, which he could not embrace, pushed him off the face of the earth, as it were.

These conditions, in a measure are analogous to the conditions for years past in the hearts of the people of North and South. For a long time the Southern people played the role of Indian, though not to such a disastrous extent. The Southerner for many years was content to make money easy, spend it freely and have a good time. As a result, the Southern people, before they grasped the situation, were encroached upon by those of the North and East, who caught the vision first of growth and expansion, and they entered this rich section in quest of trade. The big establishments entered the South, advertised extensively, and offered all inducements possible to secure Southern trade. But the horizon of the Southern merchants have expanded and henceforth the South will claim its own. This section can compete with any section on the globe. Labor is more plentiful, living expenses less and raw material closer at hand.

The spirit of CO-OPERATION is the Spirit that will build the South and foster every worthy interest in Dixie. The kind of co-operation that is worth while is a mutual spirit of helpfulness between Merchant and Consumer. This we have and that is why the South is becoming the Mecca for all who want a home in a good section.—Copyright, Cotton States Merchants Association, Memphis, Tennessee.

of raising and preserving an improvement fund, to be raised by subscription, or otherwise, for said cemetery; to organize and invite memberships in an association of citizens for such purpose, and to retain and use the money derived therefrom in the betterment of conditions existing therein. Provided that the sale of any ground for purposes of burial, in said cemetery, shall be granted only by the Town Council, who shall through their mayor grant titles for the same, as provided by law, the lands derived therefrom to be turned over to said Trustee Board, for use in the cemetery.

Adopted.

On motion of H. A. Mackie, seconded by C. E. Schonberg and carried, resolution was adopted.

The affidavit charging Night Marshall E. W. Jones with being drunk and conduct unbecoming an officer while on duty, was read, Mr. Jones being present, and pleading not guilty. After hearing the evidence for and against, it was moved by A. R. Smith, seconded by C. H. Sheffield, and carried, that the council go into executive session.

The council resumed open session, Mr. Jones being then present.

The mayor then put the question to the council as to the guilt of the accused val non. Upon a vote being taken the following voted guilty:

C. H. Sheffield, C. E. Schonberg, A. R. Smith, H. A. Mackie, M. P. Planche, Emile Frederick, Robt. W. Badon, Nays, none.

Moved by A. R. Smith, seconded by H. A. Mackie, that E. W. Jones, night marshal, be removed from office for cause as above stated.

Upon a vote being taken the following voted yes: C. H. Sheffield, C. E. Schonberg, A. R. Smith, H. A. Mackie, M. P. Planche, Emile Frederick, Robt. W. Badon, Nays, none.

Moved by A. R. Smith, seconded by H. A. Mackie, that the council adjourn until 4 o'clock p. m., Thursday, April 7th. Carried.

ROBT. W. BADON, Mayor.
L. A. PERRAUD, Secretary.

a fact, then such people as have to be so shown will not receive much of the profit from drainage. The profit goes to those who are wide enough awake to see the opportunity when it is offered. "Opportunity waits for no man." It is the owner whose lands are drained who gets the profit. If he has to wait to see his own lands drained before he will have any belief or confidence in drainage, then it is not likely that his lands will be drained. And while he is waiting to see someone's else land drained, he is losing money, paying taxes on unproductive land, and getting neither rent nor interest. It takes time to get drainage through, and by the time he gets convinced from seeing he will have sunk twice as much money in his unimproved land as he now has in it, and he will have to wait a while longer to get drainage. That isn't the way to make money. For such a man, if his wealth is in these lands he will die "land poor."

No, if a man won't accept and act upon the counsel of the best authorities on farming, on the experience of the best farmers in the world, its no use trying to prove drainage to him. The gray matter of such a man, if he has any, doesn't function. He wouldn't believe what he'd seen. It wouldn't mean anything to him. He'd simply go on saying, "Some people do seem to be born lucky."

It is easily within the power of St. Tammany parish to make its own good luck, and to make it permanent. We can quadruple (or increase to any extent) the sum already voted for good roads, and this improvement within reasonable limits will bring some return on the investment, but it is not nearly so valuable an improvement as would be drainage. Why? Because the real value of a road is for a roadway, to haul something over. Until we develop a farming industry the chief value we may expect from these roads is from the increase of automobile, as an inducement to "summer visitors." Remember lumber is going almost gone. I am speaking of the near future. What will we use these roads for? Are we building our hopes for the future solely on the expectations of profit from wayside industries which cater wholly to the needs or desires of passers-through, the travelers. That is pretty slender subsistence, and it will add precious little value to these lands which have to pay taxes for the building and upkeep of these pleasure drives. Is St. Tammany content with its fading or faded renown as a health resort?

Have we really accepted the count? Is St. Tammany down and out? Since I came into the parish I have eagerly questioned the "visitors" I have met. Why do they keep coming? Some say, "This is the last time over." Others tell a tale of the past—they formed the habit many years ago, and being set in their ways have not been diverted to the gulf coast. I find very little enthusiasm even on the part of the residents. Nearly everyone is ready to admit that it is more attractive over in Mississippi. But the difference seems at bottom to be that the people over in Mississippi have been more enterprising. Indeed, there are some people here, whom I almost forgot, who would like St. Tammany parish better if everybody would leave. They say, "There are too many here now for the most comfort. It interferes with the fishing and hunting." They like it better wild. They came over here for relaxation, to get away from the city, and they hope this parish will grow into more of a wilderness than it now is. The only question is whether there are enough of these people to defeat any progress whatsoever. I am not finding fault with their tastes, but there is such a vast expanse of wilderness in the United States, some of which is quite incapable of being made anything else at present, that, while New Orleans is under-supplied with farm produce and here in this parish are nearly five hundred thousand acres fit for profitable farming, the much-desired wilderness ought to be placed a little farther beyond the pales of possible civilization.

Why should not St. Tammany parish be re-invigorated with a youthful ambition? Instead of accepting the crumbs of a crumbled past, why not build a farm industry that itself must have roads and will build them. Oh, but it costs so much! Its chief cost is the inclination. An effort is painful to an old man; to a youth it is lift. Let us run with youth, and not sit in the corner with old age. This is a young man's job; yet it is a pleasure to see a bright, old man, retaining the fire of youth, come forward to take a leading part in doing a thing which he may not live to see fulfilled. It is inspiration to see a man in the very twilight of his life planting fruit trees, and it is remarkable how frequently one finds such a glorious old man exceeding in hopefulness and forward-looking the spirit of youth. After all is said about youth and age, it is

TWO PAIR OF BROTHERS IN BIG LEAGUES

JIMMY O'NEIL STEVE

JOHNSTONE JIMMY

There are two pair of brothers in big league baseball as the season opens for 1921, exploding the dope that great players never come from the same household. In the American League Cleveland has the great catching star, Steve O'Neil, whose brother, Jimmy O'Neil, is an infielder with the Washington team. "Doc" Johnston, first baseman on the Cleveland champs, has a brother Jimmy also. The two played against each other in the world series last year, the latter third baseman on the Brooklyn Nationals.

Resolution to allow N. O. G. N. R. Co. to build new stock pen referred to Improvement Committee.
Moved by C. E. Schonberg, seconded by M. P. Planche, and carried, that the mayor and secretary get in touch with the officials of the railroad company and invite them to meet with the council to discuss some important matters.
The following resolution was read:
Whereas, the old Covington cemetery is in a deplorable condition, dilapidated and overgrown with grass, and

Whereas, it is the desire of the Municipal Council to rectify this condition and beautify said cemetery, and preserve it as a place of burial and interment of the dead, and
Whereas, certain citizens of this town have volunteered their services and time for the purpose of taking charge of said cemetery with the view of improving and beautifying it.
Therefore, be it resolved, that the Town Council of the town of Covington, La., does hereby designate and constitute a Board of Trustees, with power to take charge of said cemetery, for the purpose of improving, beautifying and preserving the same as a place of burial and interment.
Said Board shall have the power

The Evidence Is At Your Door

Covington proof is what you want and the statement of this highly respected resident will banish all doubt:

Charles Heintz, constable, twenty-first and Madison streets, Covington, says: "My trouble was mostly back-ache and a dull, throbbing pain right across my kidneys, which caused me a lot of distress, when I stooped. The way my kidneys acted showed these organs were in a disordered condition and I commenced to use Doan's Kidney Pills. They brought me immediate relief and soon rid me of this trouble entirely. I have had a few slight returns of it since, but a few Doan's Kidney Pills have always given the same prompt relief." Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Heintz had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.
