

Why Edison Artists are GREATEST

OTHER artists may rival Edison artists in concert hall and opera. But never in the home. Their performances lose too much in the reproduction. Edison artists sound on the New Edison, exactly as they sound in actual life. Tests of direct comparison have proved that there is no difference between living performance and RE-CREATED performance. Come In! Compare!

TO THE PUBLIC.

I wish to make the announcement that I have opened an up-to-date vulcanizing establishment on Boston Street, in Covington, in the rear of the Hebert Grocery Store. Special attention will be given to a service that will meet public approval. I will examine your tires and tubes and repair them at moderate prices. Look over the tires and tubes you have on hand and bring them to me and I can save you the big expense of buying new tires and tubes. All work personally handled by me, and satisfaction guaranteed. Don't throw that old tire or tube. Let me fix it.

PLANT QUICK-MATURING FRUIT; DO SO BEFORE SPRING.

(By Dr. W. L. Stevenson)

Different varieties of figs, oranges, kumquats, peaches and pears, ripening at various times, will produce a succession of crops over a long period. In the language of the farm demonstration agent, "this soil is the best yet for grapes and figs." Citrus fruits have been shunned for fear of frosts, and peaches have been neglected because they are often killed by borers, but the hardy and quick-maturing Satsuma stands a temperature 15 degrees below freezing, and the peach grows so rapidly (6 feet in a season), and matures so early, that we can well afford the risk of planting. According to the State Agricultural Department, the Satsuma here matures two weeks earlier than elsewhere, and, being first in the market, brings the highest prices. The quality of the fruit is also superior.

Hardy, quick-maturing fruits recommended are: Satsumas, plums, figs, Japan persimmons, mulberries, crabapples, grapes, scuppernongs, peaches and pears.

To illustrate the less-known uses of plums, the Tuskegee Experiment Station has issued a bulletin entitled, "Forty-Three Ways To Save the Plum Crop," and the Federal Government shows methods of drying, salting and preserving persimmons, and of making preserves, wines, pickles and vinegar from pomegranates, grapes, scuppernongs. Other little known uses of these fruits are as sherberts, short-cakes, dumplings, soups and lozenges.

The despised mulberry is a valuable food for chickens and hogs, and a splendid filler for blackberry preserves and pies, as it can be added to the more costly blackberries in large proportion without altering the taste or appearance. Mulberries and blackberries ripen at the same time; try the mixture suggested.

Many fruits grow from cuttings or runners, and no acquaintance growing fruit will refuse to give you the "prunings." There is here no item of cost. Get some. Also plant some rooted trees, but be sure to get the best varieties. Of pears, the Chinese sand is the most blight-resistant. Of persimmons, the Tanooshi is the only one that will fruit regularly without the near presence of a special pollen-bearing tree.

Utilize fences, walls and door-yards for fruit-bearing vines, such as grapes, blackberries, sweet scented pocket melons, climbing watermelons, and for hybrid vegetables that partake of the nature of fruit, as cherry-tomatoes, small fruited gourds, and balsam-pears.

Rank growing food-producing and shade-giving vines are the Guinea bean and Milton (vegetable pear). The bean is larger than a man's arm, and the fruit is a large, round, flat, green, flat-topped pod. There are probably fifty-seven ways of utilizing the Milton. A Covingtonian has grown 150 Miltons, worth 10 to 25 cents each, on one plant.

I strongly urge the planting of nut and fruit trees along roadways. Millions of trees are thus planted in Europe and South America, and the sale of the products helps to maintain the roads. Visitors to Waukesha and a few other American towns may recall the apple trees that line the streets, but this can be practically unknown in this country. The South should set an example to other states by planting our hardy pecans.

the rows without thoroughly mixing it in the soil will injure or kill the plants by fermentation.

Planting should be done about the 1st of March or as soon thereafter as possible, and it is important that those intending to ship together plant nearly at the same time, so that they will be ready to market at the same time. Good drainage is absolutely necessary, and this can be assisted by plowing up in beds and slightly elevating the row. If plowed in beds 8 or 10 feet wide on comparatively level ground with deep water or dead furrow, the drainage will be easily improved. In the row the seed should not be covered more than one inch deep.

Protection of the young tender plants from the ravage of insects, especially the cucumber beetle, can be accomplished by dusting with road dust or fine sifted ashes. Slacked lime is also good, as one must be careful not to put on too much lest it injure the plants. A pint of crude carboic acid stirred into a bushel of tenderli alongside the melon stem is to place the hand on the melon and put considerable weight on it; if ripe or nearly ripe the flesh may be heard to crack slightly.

In cultivating the vines care must be taken not to injure them, as injury to the young shoots may cause the entire vine to die.

The truck grower who will be sure to make a success is the one who, in addition to careful attention to the needs and cultivation of his truck crops, does not depend wholly on one kind of crop, but grows three, four or five different crops, so that if weather conditions are bad for one or if the market falls off before he is ready to sell, he is not dependent wholly on that one crop for his year's income, but has another to fall back on. The one-crop farmer, whether he raises cotton, wheat, sugar cane, or strawberries, is a gambler; he may make big money one year and lose everything the next year, and unless he can weather the bad years he has to go out of business or into bankruptcy. The grower on the other hand who diversifies his crops, that is, raises several kinds of crops each year, and rotates his crops, never growing the same crop two years in succession on the same ground, does not put all his eggs in one basket, as the old saying goes, but is pretty sure to make some money over and above his costs of production every year, and in the long run he succeeds while the one-crop man is likely to fail.

It is indeed encouraging to see so many localities in this parish begin truck farming for co-operative shipments. At present there is a comparatively small acreage of land available in the parish for farming or trucking purposes, and until the acreage becomes considerable the effect of trucking and farming will not be much felt in the general prosperity of the parish. We must get the majority of our acres under cultivation before we can regard this as an agricultural parish and before the land owners will profit much from their holdings. As long as there is a large acreage of cut-over unimproved lands land values will be low. To bring in a large acreage drainage on a large scale will be a necessary step in advance. With drainage there is very little land in the parish which cannot be made highly valuable for farm, orchard and truck lands. A large acreage of farm lands is the objective those who plan the future of this parish must keep in mind in order that they may profit largely from our land development. Unimproved lands cannot be a paying investment to the owner. But we are glad to see a beginning in truck growers associations, because they demonstrate the values of improved land and because they will make it the easier to help new farmers to establish themselves and improve our cut-over lands.

We are always pleased to accommodate our customers with money when the security is good, and in keeping with our conservative banking methods.
