FARMING INTEREST IN THE INCREASE IN WASHINGTON PARISH.

The farmers in Washington parish are showing a decided increase in farming activities this year, and results up to date are gratifying, prices brought by products marketed having been good. Several carloads of beans shipped from Bogalusa to extreme eastern markets and the returns were above the average, and the products commended. Two cars of cabbage shipped showed the quality present and sold readily. All indications point to a successful season for watermelons. The New Orleans Great Northern Railroad has all preparations made to handle over 700 cars of melons, which movement began about the 15th of June. Most of these melons will be sold f. o. b. Bogalusa, as the melon growers are represented by a sales agent's office established in that town.

A group of railroad officials, representatives of the State and Federal Government, Agricultural Department, and experienced growers and shippers from the Georgia section have recently completed a tour of the farming section of that parish and all crops are well in advance, and there will be more cotton, corn and hay produced along their line this year than during the past five years. The watermelon acreage, around 1800 acres, is being grown under supervision of experienced leaders, and every grower has followed instructions as to planting, spraying, thinning and pruning, and will all follow instructions in grading and treating melons to prevent stem-end rot diseases. Growers will label all melons shipped to guarantee their quality.

A school of instruction was opened at Bogalusa on June 12th and will last several days until the leading inspectors, a force of 20 men, become familiar with the leading crops and trained for their work which will begin immediately afterwards. The United States Department of Agriculture is co-operating and will send its Chief of Inspection, F. G. Robb, to the Bogalusa meeting.

The canning factory recently completed at Bogalusa has been operating several weeks now and putting out over 2,000 cans of beans daily, this crop to be followed by canning of blackberries, then sweet potatoes and sugar cane syrup. The first carload of canned beans was sold last week for a fancy price.

The wool-pool this year will be the largest ever held, over 200,000 pounds, will be sold in one pool sale at Bogalusa on June 20. This wool will be stored and moved from Covington, Franklinton and Bogalusa.

From these accomplishments every evidence points that Washington parish will shortly convert her cut-over lands into productive, fertile and rich farm lands, and daily investments in cut-over lands are being made.

The New Orleans Great Northern Railroad feels the importance of this movement and has been co-operating to its fullest extent. The movement of farm products this year will treble the tonnage of the past years, and this fact, along with the modern improvements, indicates the era of a prosperous rural section for that parish.
