Lilly, the Jinx Mule, Bitten by Mad Dog, Attacks and Bites Citizen

(By Staff Correspondent)
Mandeville, Oct. 5.—Lilly, the Jinx mule has departed. About three weeks ago this animal was bitten by a dog and the latter went mad. A few minutes later this same dog bit Mr. Wm. Gee, a resident of this city. The dog was killed and Mr. Gee immediately rushed to the hospital to undergo the Pasteur treatment; in eleven days he was pronounced out of danger. In the meantime Lilly took her time about developing hydrophobia, but on last Friday night the first symptoms of this malady were noticed. Sam Pler, a negro employed by Mr. Herbert Smith, owner of Lilly, ventured into the yard to give the mule attention but the animal had gone mad. It plunged straight into Pler and bit him. Others were then called to the scene and after observing that the mule was having fits and foaming at the mouth, the town marshal, Mr. Phillip Smith, was sent for to kill the mule. The shots did not bring death instantaneously; the mule did not even seem dazed; but after a few minutes of wild running Lilly collapsed, exhausted from the loss of blood.

Pler was also sent to take the Pasteur treatment on the following morning.
Lilly's career has been an unfortunate one. When in the hands of her first owner she was struck by a train and almost killed then but was saved as a result of medical skill. From time to time she has had her ups and downs and finally met her death after the fatal dog bite.

VIAL MURDER IS ON DOCKET TUESDAY

Emile Vial, Sr., and Emile Vial, Jr., father and son, indicted by the grand jury for the murder of Lew Reynolds at Mandeville last month, were brought to Covington, Thursday, from New Orleans, where they have been confined in the parish prison for safe keeping, and turned over to Sheriff Galatas. Quite a number of citizens of Mandeville, members of the recently established Law and Order League, came to Covington to witness the commitment and see that no precaution was neglected.
The shooting of Reynolds occurred in Vial's place of business, a soft drink establishment in Mandeville. Vial and Reynolds had a disagreement and Vial knocked Reynolds down. Reynolds went out and stood on top of steps at doorway, looking into the street. It is said that Vial called to his son and told him to get his gun, and when the boy returned with the gun Vial shot Reynolds in the back of the head with a load of buckshot, killing him instantly. Citizens became incensed at the cold-bloodedness of the act, and when Vial was released on bond they protested, and Vial was rearrested and held without bond and the grand jury indicted father and son for murder. The case will come up for trial Tuesday. The defense will be represented by Amos L. Ponder and C. Sidney Frederick. Judge T. M. Burns and B. M. Miller will assist the prosecution.

FARM BUREAU HEARS TALK ON MARKETING

A meeting of the Executive Committee was held in the courthouse Wednesday at which Dr. Perkins and Mr. Bruno appeared in the interest of the Farm Bureau cotton contract for marketing cotton. This contract has been pretty well signed up by the cotton states and Louisiana's quota of 75,000 bales has been signed up in some sections and difficulty is not anticipated in securing the total required, which will give the contract something like one-fourth of the entire cotton crop of the cotton growing district.
The meeting was presided over by President Frank L. Dutsch, E. J. Frederick, secretary. Dr. Perkins was introduced by Mr. Dutsch.
In his talk Dr. Perkins gave an interesting history of the extension work of the state. An important thing that he stressed was the fact that with all the years of endeavor to get the farmer interested in his own affairs little headway had been made. He had studied and thought over the matter without being able to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion. But he emphasized the statement that until the farmer did take interest, did co-operate with and assist those who were working in his behalf, results could not be expected.

Mr. Brunot told what was being done to market products for the farmer, and showed the impossibility of a good market price for cotton unless the market was supplied only with sufficient amount to meet the demands of trade. He said there would be no effort to force prices abnormally, and that if these were it would fall; but that a fair price could not be obtained under present conditions. He said that the only way in which cotton could be profitably marketed was by putting it in the hands of distributing agents who were posted as to the needs of the market and who would have it graded by experts who would give it its proper grade. This must be done by a contract that gave absolute power in the handling of it. This contract did that and it insured to the farmer the best market price that could be obtained, and certainly a higher price than could be obtained by individual marketing.

Mr. Frank L. Dutsch was the first in St. Tammany parish to sign the cotton contract.
Rice has already been signed up and the prospects are bright for good returns from the coming crop.
